on "Tuberculosis of Wild Animals in Captivity." One of the most interesting topics will be the open air treatment which is to rage now all over the world. In addition to private sanitariums in this country, New York and other city and State institutions have tried it, and many hospitals have erected open-air tuberculosis pavilions.

The congress meets triennially, but this is the first time it has been held in America, and great interest is being shown in its work. If the people can be thoroughly aroused to the danger there is in trifling with this subtle foe; if they can be led to comprehend how much valuable aid they may easily render by practising a united front to the fight against one of the most fatal diseases the efforts of this congress will have accomplished much. It is not merely good; there we may hope, and said in vain, to see each year many cities added to safe lighthouses and beauty to the world instead of being sacrificed to the insatiable Moloch through unnecessary treatment of a matter so serious.

Hammered in Farm Life.

Landlord and Mrs. Hammer, with part of their children, spent one day at Aurora, Ill., last week, driving from farm to farm to attend the dedication of a public library given to that town by Douglas Hammer, brother-in-law of the President. Secretary of State Root and Congressman Sherman came out from Ottawa to be present. The president of the Hammer was, of course, the feature of the day, and he was cordially greeted by the farmers' dealing with farm life. He hoped to see the farmers keep their energies in making life in the country more inspiring and attractive, noting the library and dedicated so that the intellectual interests of ways and means to that end. He said he had only contempt for the

WINNING THE FIGHT AGAINST CONSUMPTION

Very important indeed to the world of humanity has been the International Congress on Tuberculosis, held at the National Museum in Washington. Among the exhibits are maps showing the extent and growth of the campaign against tuberculosis, location of dispensaries, hospitals and sanatoriums where treatment is given, and the methods used in the campaign against the disease. The walls are covered with photographs and other pictures showing the progress of tuberculosis and the various stages of cure. Tuberculosis literature has been provided by the too and statistics displays of window tents, cots, beds, all sorts of outdoor appliances, models of buildings, sectarian, hotels and houses built for the purpose of treating tuberculosis in all its stages.

President Roosevelt accepted the presidency of the congress and Dr. Edward L. Trudeau, of Saranac Lake, has been made honorary president. Vice President Fairbanks, Speaker Cannon and the Governors of the States have agreed to serve as vice presidents.

Among the distinguished physicians present are: Robert Koch, Berlin; Calmette, of Paris; Spronck, of Utrecht; Toulouse, of Leyden; Pulitzer, of Edinburgh; Cornet, of Berlin; Arloing, of Lyons; Ransom, of Leipsic; Ehrlich, of Frankfort; Hamp, of Copenhagen; Vargas, of Buenos Ayres; Mirchiffava, of Naples; Enger, of Bissel; Wladimiroff, of St. Petersburg; Sonnenfeld, of Berlin, and Trudeau, of Saranac.

The first day of the congress was marked by an unusually large number of papers. Preliminary to the formal opening, the diplomatic corps, the officers of the congress, the honorary presidents and the various presidents met in the office of Dr. Henry G. Beyer, chairman of the committee on exhibits in the museum building shortly before 11 o'clock and accompanied by Dr. Beyer and John S. Pillsbury, the secretary general, proceeded to the stage in the great auditorium.

There Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou, as the personal representative of the President of the United States, extended greetings on behalf of the government.

"The menace of tuberculosis from a hygienic and economic standpoint is demonstrable in many ways," said Mr. Cortelyou. "It is remarkable that yellow fever, notwithstanding the many panics it has produced, has not caused in the United States in the last 115 years no many deaths as occurred last year from tuberculosis.

"The figures given for the United States it is estimated that since the year 1880 there have been approximately 100,000 deaths from yellow fever, whereas tuberculosis is estimated to have caused 100,000 deaths last year alone.

responses by the representatives of about thirty foreign countries.

The congress will make an epoch in the fight against this dread scourge the world over. The opening meeting was the most impressive event of the whole. On that day the representatives of the participating governments presented their formal greetings to the government of the United States. Among the many prominent men who were present were: Dr. Robert Koch, of Berlin; Dr. Jean Calmette, of Paris; Spronck, of Utrecht; Toulouse, of Leyden; Pulitzer, of Edinburgh; Cornet, of Berlin; Arloing, of Lyons; Hamp, of Copenhagen; Vargas, of Buenos Ayres; Mirchiffava, of Naples; Enger, of Bissel; Wladimiroff, of St. Petersburg; Sonnenfeld, of Berlin, and Trudeau, of Saranac.

DESERT TO BLOOM AIM.

Great Meeting of Irrigation Experts Begins Work at Albuquerque.

The extensive annual meeting of the national irrigation congress was called to order at Albuquerque by President Frank Gunsaly of Denver with every one of the 400 seats in the convention hall occupied and crowds crowding for admission to the gallery. Nearly 1,000 delegates were present.

The day's sessions were devoted to speeches of welcome by Mayor Lorenzo Hubbell, Governor Hagerman, and, with the passing of the formal business, the committee on resolutions, and committee on credentials adjourned. A better note of hope in business and financial affairs is sounded in the reports of funds has accumulated and recently bank statements certify to an abundance of money for the moving of the crops of the country.

Distributive trade shows further recovery, lower temperatures helping the general demand for winter goods, and stimulating adoption of apparel, fixed goods to be worn.

Forwardings of staple merchandise continue heavy, with the time last year, and jobbers' boxes and mill orders remain of fair magnitude in dry goods, footwear, hats and caps, woolens and silks.

Mercantile collections in the interior are fairly prompt, and in the greater number of country purchasers take the discounts on current purchases.

Money is seen to be circulating more freely, among the farmers of the West, and there is less drain of currency supplies to the interior than usual. Although unmarketable lines for have been liberal, Manufacturing news shows the demand, new machinery and hands being active, and there is notable decline in the number of idle mills.

Movements of raw materials show a good crop of cotton in the States, while values mainly hold firm. The situation in the iron and steel trade is encouraging, and stocks below lower lines than for years, and there is good prospect for some activity.

The Bradstreet report of grain at all point, 5,526,163 bushels, compares with 3,500,000 bushels last year and 15,000,000 bushels a year ago. Compared with 1905, there are decreases in Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth, Minneapolis, Toledo, Detroit, Kansas City, Omaha, Peoria, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Galveston, Portland, Oregon, Portland, Maine, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Vancouver, Victoria, Winnipeg, Fort William, Port Arthur, Kansas, and Nebraska, and increases in Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Duluth, Toledo, Detroit, Kansas City, Omaha, Peoria, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Galveston, Portland, Oregon, Portland, Maine, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Vancouver, Victoria, Winnipeg, Fort William, Port Arthur, Kansas, and Nebraska.

RAIN AND SNOW END THE RUINOUS DROUGHT

Heavy Downpour in Many States Balks Damage Threatened by Dry Weather.

FROST DOES HARM IN WEST.

Rain, snow, and hail has broken the long drought. From many sections of the country joyful telegrams were received at the world over a heavy precipitation announcing that "dry spell" which threatened ruin to thousands of farmers and millions of dollars of crops is ended.

Just what damage was done by the snow flurries, although the frost, which preceded Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Texas, caused the late corn to shrivel and cancel other issues. Forest fires, which swept over a score of large tracts of timber in many States, are reported to have been extinguished, or is estimated that many millions of trees were saved. Stock raisers also rejoiced over the end of the "Dying Halt," as the water supply for the animals was exceedingly low and it was believed that much suffering would be caused by thirst. Factories, which have been slim some time, now have a good indefinite period because the water was too low to turn their wheels. In Ohio once more running actively as the abundant streams once more fill and rivers are navigable for their growth courses.

In Kentucky, Wisconsin and Minnesota snow was reported. It was a typical first-of-season kind and in Kentucky it was followed by a chilled just as a woman given a lusty powder dab to the face before she goes outdoors.

At Wausau, Wis., the air was thick with flakes for an hour and Minneapolis "felt a touch of 1816!" Does he still stick to that? Does his threat of those days to pack the Supreme Court to the interest of his foils if he should be elected still stand? He denounced the federal courts in 1896 for protecting property and enforcing the laws. He said Bryan, who shipped down the Mississippi valley and really caressed the wee Sister, is to hand the cotton crop is damaged. Wisco, Texas, also complained of frost gaudies, but it all happened in the northern part of the State and merely the vegetation was tipped. Kansas was in a complaint as to the weather lineum that the mercury dropped below freezing around Topeka and that a little sheet of ice scared many pods.

Farmers in Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Ohio greeted the advent of rain with shouts of glee, and many grumbles in the Northern mines about Pittsburg, where the brought measured $25,000,000 worth of coal, moved in the downpour and danced with joy. In the timber sections of New York and Wisconsin the rain put out the fires which have been burning. In some cases, some place, the fires had caused numerous towns and villages from destruction by flames which could not have been checked without of Albuquerque and Governor Curry of New Mexico and the opening addresses in response by President Gunsly.

A feature of the opening address was the long list of responses to the speeches of welcome by representatives from foreign countries, including France, England, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Cape Colony, Canada, Mexico and Brazil. The visitors from abroad have been given an important part in the program, and the discussions of papers on the work of the congress.

A demonstration lasting several minutes followed when the military band sent by the government of Mexico played "The Star Spangled Banner" at the opening of the session. The singing of "Hail, Columbia" by a chorus of the cadets at Annapolis followed, and the address was another feature which aroused enthusiasm. After an address of welcome by President Roosevelt, the first session closed with the appointment of committees.

The usual expulsion, to which congress appropriated $20,000 and which has brought together the finest display of irrigated products ever assembled in the United States, was formally opened by Governor Curry, following a parade by the troops of the department of the Colorado ordered there for the occasion. General Bell, chief of staff, and Brigadier General Thomas, commanding the department, took part in the parade.

DIGGING FAST AT PANAMA.

Labor Supply Is Plentiful and Canal Work Is Pushed.

Satisfactory progress in making the ditch was reported by colonel George W. Goethals, chief engineer of the Panama Canal, on a arrival at Port Orleans, on the steamer Carriage from Colon, on Panama Canal Zone.

"Natives and Jamaicans," Colonel Goethals said, "constitute practically all the labor available in the zone. In attempt to use American labor full-time, which proved to be a failure, as stated. At present the labor situation is very good.

"Considerable numbers of our laborers have been accustomed to leave from time to time, and labor to return hoping for work again. This coming and going has resulted in developing a source of supply of labor more or less suitable and trained for the canal work.

"As a rule there are about as many returning to work as laborers leaving, so that we almost always have sufficient labor at hand. Just at present, in fact, there are more laborers than we can well use."

Tree with a Rabbit's Eye.

Dr. Henry H. Lesser of New York describes in the Medical Record the remarkable operation by which he recently grafted the eye of a rabbit into the arm of a blind man, so as to give him sight. The man, who had been blind for about 25 years, blinded through measles at the age of 4, in the opinion of his family, unless and the left disfigured by a dense leucoma. He was able to distinguish grains of scenery with chalk three-times a day. Dr. Lesser, in the Medical Record, and the eye was transplanted with a dressing of lambskin, the rabbit's eye being so small that it was enclosed and embedded in a slit made in the skin of the man's arm. The lids were sewed together and the man's arm was fixed in a sling for a month, so that the rabbit's eye could not be touched by the man's hand. The operation was performed by Dr. Lesser, of New York, and the man's sight was restored.

Woman Cyclists Harassed.

Miss Anna S. Yoch of Bethlehem, Pa., in a second effort within a month, succeeded in reaching the top of Mount Hakasgan, in Peru, which she undertook to be the highest peak in the world. The second she got to a height of 23,000 feet, but had to turn back on account of the illness of one of her guides. In the last attempt the expedition had only four guides, and both hands frozen.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

CHICAGO.

Business activity prevails promptly in the leading centers of business, and, with the passing of the domestic financial stringency, the commercial and banking world are cautiously enhanced. A better note of hope in business and financial affairs is sounded in the reports of funds has accumulated and recently bank statements certify to an abundance of money for the moving of the crops of the country.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

The enrollment at the Winona normal school, Winona, Minn., for the summer term, is given at 318, which is an increase of twelve over a year ago.

A new gift of $2,000,000 by Helen G. Gates, of Chicago, has been given Chicago University to make a general increase of 25 per cent in the pay of the teaching force.

The attendance at the two weeks' session of the summer school of methods at Iowa City, which closed last week, is the largest in the history of the institution.

C. W. Batsell has taken up the work of superintendent of the public schools of Fairmount, Ind., succeeding C. J. Lovegood, who has been in charge the past two years.

A number of Wisconsin school superintendents have begun a joint enforcement of the compulsory education laws which provides that children between the ages of 7 and 14 are attended.

South Dakota agricultural college will work the summer part of the State prosecutor, Mr. Stevenson says if elected he will be non-partisan in his appointments to office. Of all political lines action this would be the most amazing. The chief headsman of twenty years ago, who calmly worked the gibbet by which Republican postmasters by the 10,000 lost their places for the crime of being Democrats, is the last man who would have been suspected of being a partisan. He forgets his lifelong record as a partisan of the ultra type when he indulges in such a wild hopeless even for campaign purposes.

Mr. Stevenson will never rise above his record. He is and built that way. But there is a stronger reason why he will not be nonpartisan in appointments. His party would tear him to pieces if he tried it. As sure think is a reason on a pack of famished wolves. The true attention one is expressed in a few words. There are not, never were, and never will be any nonpartisan Democrats. If there were, Mr. Stevenson could never be one of them. If he tried it his hungry fellow-Democrats would close in on him with an awful ferocity, and there wouldn't be any remains. As Governor, Stevenson would bring out his trusty old sickerbear, and not one Republican officeholder in Illinois would be left to tell the tale.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

POLITICAL COMMENT

The Supreme Court.

The national election this fall will not be the selection of a president and vice president alone. It will not be the choice of the people as to the trend of politics which some place them. It is further reading thus the personnel of the administration and the drafting of new laws, conservative, radical, progressive, or impractichle. The nation this year will be deciding the character of men who will have the balance of opinion, or that truly the balance of power, in the United States supreme court. In an exceedingly thoughtful article by Eugene F. Lyle, Jr., in Hampton's Broadway Magazine, it is pointed out that these vacancies are almost certain to appear in the supreme court before the close of the next administration. Five are quite probable. Chief Justice Fuller and Judge Harlan are now 72 years of age. Judge Brewer has reached 71. Judge Peckham is only a year younger. Judge Holmes is 67; White, 62; Day, 59; Moody, 55. The chances of life are against those who have passed three score and ten remaining on the bench until March 3, 1913. Wise men who have watched the pendulum swing upon the character of the Supreme court know that the appointment of men to be will be doing well. But he will be influenced by other things than the sole question of merit. The President's individual views of government will enter into the matter of picking successors to the ones who will have tripped out.

There are two more here for much speculation. For the judges of the United States court are men who have lived long lives. As the saying is, "they seldom die and never resign." Yet the Constitution provides that if the government continues long after the President who has made them judges, the opportunity will have need to be a factor in his country's politics, which has been more than once or twice when they are position has been garnered to his fathers and his place has been left vacant. Not only the scales of decision where four judges grave in an opinion and four others pa-

It is great authority to be vested in one man, and it is, of course, necessary, then, that he shall be deeply versed in the ways of the world, that he shall be a man of broad breadth, of wisdom and of tolerance, of sympathy, that he shall be sympathetic with the institutions of his country, that he shall be a man of his time, that he shall be in touch with the tendencies of the age, that he shall be innovative to the pressure of family, friendship or politics.

The President will be called on to deliberate much before he names the new judges. He must be thoughtful not alone for the present, but also for the many years to come.

The Naive Election.

The reduction of the Republican plurality in the state election in Ohio has caused as much relation to the traditional outcome as the division taken by a bunkshooter on the winning of a bachelor's pennants. But the cockpure political weather soothsayers will be on hand with the November results with the same old shaking of heads. They are the kind that can decipher scientific omens from the side of the bed they happened to rise in bairns in their forecasts and, therefore, no reason why they shouldn't be permitted to have the same kind of the one come home.

Now, the Maine fight was as purely local as anything between two farmers as to the location of their line fence. In 1905 a law was put on the statute books authorizing the Governor to send officers into a county if there was doubt as to the fairness and enforcing the regulations against the sale of intoxicants. This measure was passed by a great amount of hard feeling. The difference of opinion as regards the local statutes, but has been had it in it to be voted upon in November. The Republicans and the radical Sturgis law has gone further. It has developed a strong demand for the enactment of the constitutional section which forced adoption of the law by the people. The fight at the polls on Tuesday was whether the question should be taken upon the merits of the State was that it should not be. All other issues were left out of the campaign and thought in the campaign.

It will be found when the November returns are had that little effort for publicans who gave their support to the Democratic ticket at the State election by voting for Taft and Sherman.

But then "disputers" are not interested. Their eyes are for the statistics alone. From them they can get everything from the price of a meal ticket to the number of feathers in the wings of angels.—Toledo Blade.

Sterness as a Nonpartisan.

Among the many varieties of Democrats none is more phenomenal than the sort that romantically calls itself nonpartisan, and the most astonishing result of this class, especially when it is the imagination, is Adlai Stevenson of Illinois. Mr. Stevenson says if elected he will be non-partisan in his appointments to office. Of all political lies action this would be the most amazing. The chief headsman of twenty years ago, who calmly worked the gibbet by which Republican postmasters by the 10,000 lost their places for the crime of being Democrats, is the last man who would have been suspected of being a partisan. He forgets his lifelong record as a partisan of the ultra type when he indulges in such a wild hopeless even for campaign purposes.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT

PLEA FOR PRACTICABILITY.

By Rev. Howard B. Grose, D.D.

Everyone that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand.—St. Matthew 7:26.

The Christian religion is not merely a philosophy. It is a divinely revealed scheme of life. The church is not a university. It is a technical school of the function of the gospel is to teach men how to take the raw material of life and build it into character. Twelve of the Christian church was a great preacher. During His three years' ministry thousands heard upon His words. And yet, at the end He had only about 120 disciples. Of the many who followed only these few were actually learners.

Jesus, the Sermon on the Mount, Christ lays down the great fundamental principles which should guide His followers. He closes by telling His hearers that those who not only hear His words, but do them are like a wise man who built his house upon a rock. When the rain descended and the floods came and the winds blew and beat upon that house," it stood. But those who hear without attempting to practice are like a foolish man who built his house upon the sand. When the time of testing came, his house fell. There are many such today. Men and women who are building on the sand only.

There is a story told of a certain new farmhand who was instructed by his employer to feed his favorite horse "some oats." "Do you mean," he asked, "I ought to put some later ordinary feed in the oats?" "Of course," the unfortunate animal. We cannot get any vital religious through the mere hearing of the Christ. Christianity must be digested and made a part of our lives. We must be able to say with the poet, "I know whom I have believed."

Many Christians fail when temptations come because they are only hearers of Christ. They do not go to church regularly. They are familiar with the Bible, but they are not familiar with the child's sense than the senile disciples of old age. Before the death in the desert than those by Egypt. Better to die in desert than to need away to the promised land of truth. Disciples are those who for the joy set before him, despised the cross, forgot the shame, endured and press forward to the prize before, the clearer light and larger.

A WESTERN CANADA WHEAT FIELD

"What are the settlers of Western Canada? Are they the people who have emigrated from the United States? Yes, and from Ontario, from the offices of one of our big American magazines a short time ago, by which I was assigned to travel through the great wheat producers of the Dominion West to the new towns that the railroads were there, and how the many thousands of American farmers in this Canadian West were prospering.

This was my fourth journey through Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. I found these men 50,000 good, hard-working farmers who left the States to make new homes for themselves in Western Canada. Some had lost money—and in different ways, but the majority had not. The majority of the settlers quoted above.

Imagine first of all, a train of forty-ten cars, 1,250 miles in length, carrying, in other words, which would reach from New York City to Denver, or from the Canadian border to Mexico, or from the Atlantic Ocean to the Rocky Mountains, Oklahoma and Texas, and for 250 miles beyond that, and it will take more than have some idea of this year's crop of grain in the three great provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Then, beyond the desert there. In Canada; beyond the Alps, Italy; beyond the ocean, the delight of larger, clearer truth. Do not fear leaving the old; do not worry over theological unrest. Be true to the size of life. Believe the child's sense than the senile disciples of old age. Before the death in the desert than those by Egypt. Better to die in desert than to need away to the promised land of truth. Disciples are those who for the joy set before him, despised the cross, forgot the shame, endured and press forward to the prize before, the clearer light and larger.

PAPAL LORE IN COIN

SERIES THAT EXTENDS OVER A THOUSAND YEARS.

Adrian I. the First Head of Church to Circulate Currency—Leo XIII. Was the Last—Rare Types Are Illustrated.

Not the least interesting of the papal jubilee gifts was the unique gold coin of Pope Innocent IX., which, recently exhumed at Acqui, Italy, was contended for by coin collectors, King Victor Emmanuel being an unsuccessful competitor.

This coin, the only one in existence in the reign of Innocent IX., was used to make the Vatican collection of papal coins complete.

The papal coins exhibit the portraits and armory of the popes and their coats of arms, and furnish metallic history of the estimate of the church from the first issue in the latter part of the ninth century down to 1870, when the papal status were minted in Italy and the papal mint ceased operations.

The papal series of coins is one of the very longest, covering 1,126 years, the first pope to issue coins was Adrian I. The coins of Leonine were then begun in imitation of those of the Byzantine empire, whose gold bezants were generally used throughout the Christian, and the coin of Pope Adrian was a fair example of the coinage of the times. It showed a full face portrait, presumably of St. Peter, on the obverse, surrounded by the inscription "Hadrianus P. P." and the cross of the reverse, very much after the style of the Byzantine pieces.

Many of the early issues of the popes show the name of the reigning one and a representation of either St. Peter or St. Paul. Perhaps no series of coins shows a greater variety in designs or more skillful executive work. The church, always a patron of the arts, employed the foremost artists of the time, and some of the coins are from the hands of such men as Caldi and Francia.

A gold scudo of Julius II., the design of which is credited to Francia, shows a finely engraved portrait of the pope, with the inscription: "Julius Secundus Maximus." A coin of Alexander VI. attributed to Paolo, shows on the reverse the crossed keys and crown, perhaps one of the first of the papal coins to bear this device.

The coins of the popes were struck at many places, including Rome, Bologna, Avignon, Perugia, Terni, Sant'Angelo and Gaeta. One of the interesting pieces of the Roman mint was a silver quart of Clement VII. This piece, irregular in shape, was struck in 1527, when Rome was in a state of siege. On the obverse one shows the coins and tiara of Pope Clement, with the word "Datario" inclosed in a wreath on the reverse. To this same coin is credited a jubilee five ducats piece in gold, struck in 1525. It is in all likelihood that the latter piece was engraved by Cellini.

Work in Intense Heat.

Persons who complain of the heat when the thermometer reaches the nineties, and a steamship engineer, who thinks of the discomforts of men employed in gas works, in blast furnaces and in coal mines, where the mercury has to endure an atmosphere ranging from 115 to 145 degrees, forgetting these and many other places where the battery are located the men wear only little clothing, and while they undoubtedly suffer from the exposure, they do not feel the heat as much as one might be supposed. The explanation of this fact is that these men are not weighed by the humidity. They are working in places where the artificial heat is so intense as to drive out the humidity, and 198 or more degrees of heat in a place where dry air is not felt at all, or a mixture of 50 degrees of heat and 80 per cent of humidity, that falls on people and nearly tries their vitality.

Inconsolable.

The surgeon crashed unmercifully in the abscess making the old man shriek. "This blows," he said, "the one from which, alas, I shall not recover. Never more will I look upon the face of woman save in bitterness and sorrow."

The young girl, profoundly moved, laid a gentle hand.

"It will take my refusal so to heart, Mr. Mannerin—Harold, I mean—that I, who also suffer, I assure you, know one at the Surf house who would suit you precisely. She is pretty, available, rich—"

"Has she got my money?" he interrupted.

Very Steep Railway.

What claims to be the steepest railway line in the world is that recently opened near Bozen, in the Tyrol. The funicular railway, with a gradient of 1 in 1.69, and the Vesuvius, with 62, have hitherto had the record, but the new line is its steepest part rises 1 in 1.36 and in other parts 66.

It leads up the mountainside to Virtl-Terminal, on the Lake Kleinsee. The system employed is that of the electrical wire rope and the ascent is made at the rate of five feet a second, or five minutes for the whole distance. The car of four compartments carries 32 passengers.

Tonnage of World Fleet.

The tonnage of the world's merchant shipping has increased according to the latest returns to 37,584,917 tons. Of this total no less than 21,744,904 tons represent steam shipping and 17,611,13 tons of the whole is under the British flag.

Easy Enough.

"Well," pondered the new Answers to Correspondents editor, "I wonder how to answer this: 'Have a subscriber who wants to know what's a good thing to take on the side of white flannel.'"

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Elk Rapids Progress: Capt. Chas. Roy, of Harbor Springs, arrived Monday evening with the tug Alice and his pile driver to make repairs on the city dock. At the meeting of the council held Sept. 14th Trustees Hawley and Lang were appointed a committee to contract with Capt. Roy for repairs on the dock at a price not to exceed $956.85. Capt. Roy thinks time with favorable weather he can complete the work in about ten days. He will drive about fifty new piles, and the balance of the work will be bracing and staying the structure.

Boyne Journal: Some mystery seems to surround the recent departure of Howard Seaton, the well known locomotive engineer, who has been a trusted employee of the L. C. G. & A. railroad for some time past. About two weeks ago he left with the ostensible purpose of going to Charlotte, his former home, on a business trip. This is the last that Mrs. Searles has seen of him and she has had no word from him during the time. Both Mr. and Mrs. Searles are held in high esteem in Boyne City and their many friends hope that he will soon put in an appearance and that his absence will be fully explained.

Elk Rapids Progress: Horace H. Durant, special Indian agent, of Washington, D. C., and H. L. Tuttle, a clerk for Mr. Durant, were here the latter part of last week making a enumeration of the Ottawa and Chippewa Indians of this section. This is done before the payment to the members of the two tribes of about $1,100,000 due the Indians by a virtue of a treaty. It is estimated that there are about 7,000 Indians to participate in the distribution, which will give about $20 to each. The enumeration will take some time, and it is not probable that the payment will be made until about the holidays,—possibly later. Mr. Durant left for Petoskey and Harbor Springs Saturday evening, and Mr. Tuttle followed him Monday morning.

Bellaire Special: Clyde Leavitt, chief of the Department of Organization, National Forest Service, has been visiting his father, Hon. Dewoit Leavitt, for a few days, stopping over while enroute to Washington from Ogden, Utah. Mr. Leavitt has received the appointment of district forester, to take effect in November, and will have the fourth district, comprising Utah, the greater part of Nevada, and half of Idaho and of Wyoming, with headquarters at Ogden. This is consequent upon the reorganization of the forest service, by which they will be six district foresters who will be in charge in the field to the administration of the national forests. Mr. Leavitt was a member of the class of '95, Bellaire high school, took his B. A. from the U. of M. and then graduated as the first Michigan man in the forestry department of the same university. He immediately entered the forestry service, and for about two years and a half previous to being made chief of the organization department he was assistant chief in the boundaries department. His extensive knowledge of the forests caused him to be the man called upon by President Roosevelt to map the 17,000,000 acres of forest land which are made national reserves by the president just previous to the law taking effect that took this power out of the hands of the chief executive. Mr. Leavitt drew up the proclamation issued by the president.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Clyde Coulter of the class of '06 has entered the University of Chicago to take a course in Commercial Service.

The results of examination week for the first month of the year are reported by the teachers to be very unfavorable. If that is actually the state of affairs it behoves us to work more and play less.

Earl Young of the class of '08 left here intending to take a one year course in the Ann Arbor High School. This is the last that Mrs. Searles has seen of him and she has had no word from him during the time. Both Mr. and Mrs. Searles are held in high esteem in Boyne City and their many friends hope that he will soon put in an appearance and that his absence will be fully explained.

LOOKING AWAY FROM LIFE.

New Yorkers Are Fond of Lingering Before the Shop Windows.

One of the things which striker a stranger in New York in the built business men have of looking in at shop windows. The crowds hurry and jostle through the streets, crowding each other in the mad rush. But hardly a window but before it can be seen a group of men, or perhaps only a couple, perhaps a solitary one, gazing intently, steadfastly through the plate glass panes. A minute before he was rushing as wildly, struggling as fiercely as his fellows. Now he stands crazed, out of himself, oblivious to the struggling going on around him. His thoughts are through the window there with the toys, the boxes of candy, the baseball bats, the Japanese curios, the stationery, the cutlery or whatever it may be of which the shop makes a specialty. The man will gaze into the window for three minutes, four minutes, sometimes. For more than five minutes, and then turn away with bright eyes and an air of having been refreshed. Before he stopped to look in the window the man was tired, worried. That little stop for rest until the wilderness of the great city, that oasis of pleasant and rambling thought he enjoyed, is for a few minutes, has relieved the tension of business cares, has rested his nerves a bit and sent him on his way refreshed again.

Going Away.

Little Dessie's father had decided to move his family to the small town of Salem, W. Va., says the Bohemian. Naturally this proposed change interested Dessie very much, for she recalled she was to enter a new world. Upon informing her little friends, she asked each of them if they knew what kind of a place Salem might be. None of them knew of Salem, but quite a few had been in Clarksburg, a city of something over 12,000 inhabitants. Naturally Clarksburg received all the praise to the slightest of Salem.

The talk of her friends had its effect upon Dessie and she began to dread moving to Salem. The night before the family had decided to go pays overheard Dessie saying her prayers. Much to his surprise her usual supplication was ended with the words: "Good-by, God, we are going to Salem."

Manners Are Different.

Manners are different in different parts of the world, and even in short space of the English channel makes a difference. On the British side a lady bows first to a man when she knows and on the French side she would never think of bowing until the man had first recognized her. In England a man rises to open the door for a lady, and in France such a proceeding would be considered officious. In Paris, on a cab, the lady calls the first cab, and in England it is, of course, the other occasions who makes the advance.

Valuable Pies.

"You mean to say you ask 20 cents for one of your mince pies?"

"I do."

"But you can buy a mince pie anywhere for ten cents."

"Not like them."

"I don't see why these should be worth any more than any others?"

"Well, I do. Why, a fellow found a gold collar button in one of these pies, yesterday!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Well Answered.

The captain of a schooner that trades between New York and Savannah is noted for his wit. He carries the Philadelphia Public Ledger, and every occasion that offers he looses his stacks of humor, to the chagrin and embarrassment of his target. Scorner or utter the slightest gale stung, and his chronic pun artist is no exception to the rule.

On one occasion, when about two days out from New York, he approached a group of sailors who were washing the forward deck, and sifting out a big, raw-boned lightmake who was complaining his first taste of sailor's life, he gravely asked: "Shipmate, can the mate mend down the forecastle stairs?" Quick as a flash came the reply. "Yis, sor; I can, if you will stand below and coil it up."

Good English.

A French lady living in America engaged a cameraman to do some work for her at a stipulated price. She was surprised later to find that he charged more than the price agreed upon. When she attempted to remonstrate with him, however, her English failed her and she finally said: "You are dearer to me now than when we were first engaged."—Success.

—Miss Rachel Donlevy, of St. James, was in town yesterday on her way to Chicago, where she will enter a commercial college for a winter course.

—A. T. Stewart, of the Northville government fish hatchery, is here to fit out the local hatchery for the fall work. About the usual number of eggs will be hatched.

—The Epworth Sunday School will give an entertainment and supper at the church on Friday evening, Oct. 30th. Admission 15 cents; proceeds to be devoted to Sunday School work.

—The forest fires of last week hit the Charlevoix Lumber Co. A large quantity of three foot wood in Marion was burned, but insurance covers it. In the same township the company lost about 200,000 feet of hardwood logs, unburned.

—Division land and fire troubles last week, and telephoned here for help. A crew of the Charlevoix fire department took the sleigh and a drag load of hose there Saturday by a special train which was sent after it. The machine and crew returned Monday.

—While Hose Hitre L. O. T. M. will give a Hallowe'en supper Friday, Oct. 30th, from 5 to 8 o'clock. A Hallowe'en entertainment will follow in the evening. The bill for supper will be 25 cents, and the dance will be 50 cents a couple. The influx of Hose Hitre Hive should be encouraged in these socials and highly enjoyable events. Let there be a good turn-out.

—Mrs. F. H. Hubbard gave a Sunday morning breakfast to several of the friends of the family last Sunday. We have it from reliable authority that the conspicuous feature of the repast was the celerity and ease with which Dr. Montague and Mrs. Crane disposed of the pancake course. We are told that there were other good appetites present, but the above incidents created quite a sensation among the prominent guests carried away the pancake prize.

—The lighthouse tender Dahlia has been in port two days, wind bound.

—J. E. Hodmond and wife left yesterday for Reed City to visit relatives.

—C. H. Moore, statistician of the Michigan Fish Commission, was in town this week, and went to St. James yesterday, on his annual tour of work.

—Hon. J. M. Harris, candidate for Judge of Probate, will speak at St. James Saturday night of this week. He will be accompanied by other leading republicans.

—Phillip S. Colgrove, of Hastings, will speak at the Charlevoix Theatre on the evening of Oct. 29th, on the subject of the constitution. Mr. Colgrove is one of the most eloquent speakers in the state. He has recently returned from Cuba, where he has been in the service of the state committee.

—F. H. Bayles the retiring pastor of the Baptist church, of this city, has accepted the unanimous call to the Calvary Baptist church at Muskegon, a community and church of splendid opportunities. Mr. Bayles will close his work here Sunday, November 1st, and begin with his new church Nov. 8th.

—Beets are coming in up at the factory one hundred tons having been weighed up to this morning. Mr. Hubbard says the beets show 12½ per cent, and better, which is a very satisfactory showing, and will give the farmers an average of 25.70 per ton. The factory will begin slicing about November 10th.

—A lively fire occurred on Mason street Saturday morning that, for a time, threatened to be serious. A barn owned by Mrs. Myers was enveloped in flames before the department could reach the premises. The barn was destroyed, the carpenter shop of Alex. Cameron was badly damaged, and the Smith house, occupied by Frank Reed seriously scorched. The roof of the old high school building caught fire and a hole two feet square burned. The fire boys did good work.

—In the stage production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" the essential features of a success. Either Uriggins or Prudence New England novel of the same name have been followed, and they are said to have been handled to extremely close advantage. It is a distinctly enjoyable piece, both in itself and in the ingenuously natural work of the people presenting it. The production is to be seen here November 3rd. There is a laugh almost everywhere, despite the tender sentiment pertaining to Alice Pettegrill's pathetic figure as the much loved blind girl and to her valiu as the central feature of the love story. It is a most entertaining picture of rural life, and presented on quite a different plane from any other touring drama. Its features and typical characters are said to be exceptionally well presented.

Duty Well Done.

Frank McWain has filled the office of sheriff one term. Following the precedent established in Charlevoix county, he is entitled to a second term.

But aside from any consideration of political precedent, Frank McWain deserves a second term, because of his faithful application to duty, and his good sense in the execution of it.

The republican party of Charlevoix county has no need to regret its choice of Mr. McWain two years ago. He has made no mistakes. Officially and personally he has acquitted himself in a manner that reflects credit upon the party, the county and himself. There is not a flaw in his record.

Therefore the SENTINEL never more cheerfully endorsed a candidate than it does Mr. McWain. He has done some wonderfully good work in the apprehension of offenders, and richly deserves recognition.

We believe that the man who votes against Frank McWain will vote against the interests of the people of Charlevoix county, because we believe that two years' experience in the office is an asset that belongs to the people, and has a value.

Historical Society.

There will be an open meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society at the M. E. church, Friday evening, Oct. 23rd. "Historical Evening" is what is announced for the event, and Hon. L. F. Knowles, who was the Northern Michigan delegate to the late constitutional convention, will speak on the "New Constitution of Michigan."

A most excellent musical and literary program has been furnished, in which the audience will sing "Michigan, My Michigan." The words of the hymn are sent us, and we regret that political exigencies and absence from our post of duty for five days prevents our printing them.

The meeting is bound to be one of unusual interest.

New Electric Theater.

The "Laf-a-Lot" Vaudette is a thing of the past, the wooden structure having been wholly demolished this week, to make room for the new cement building to be erected by the Majestic Theatre Co., and which will be completed and in operation before January first.

The new theater will be 25x85; it will be built of double cement blocks, and will have a cement floor in the lobby. It will have a stage 16x20, with dressing rooms under the stage. It will be supplied with a full new set of scenery, and the entire building heated by steam.

The auditorium will have a capacity of 600 people, and will be equipped with opera chairs.

Mr. W. S. Stoddard, who has been so popular as a comedian in the vaudevile of the Laf-a-Lot, will have the management of the new house. Mr. Stoddard has had extensive experience in the show business, and will make this venture a success if anyone can.

It was most tactless of Mr. Parker to refer to "Democracy's past mistakes" and the constancy of Mr. Bryan almost in the same breath.

The Republican party, Mr. Bryan says, is in full retreat. Perhaps it could make better speed if the road wasn't so cluttered up with deserting democrats.

VETERAN GONE.

Hon. William Harris the "Sage of Norwood" the Grand Old Man of Charlevoix County, Passes Away.

Hon. William Harris died at his home in Norwood Monday noon. His death was sudden, and unexpected. He had complained of indigestion the day previous, but no alarm was created in the family. But the indigestion increased until Monday noon, when the heart ceased to throb, and "Uncle Bill" passed away.

William Harris was born in Saratoga county, N. Y., in 1832. While an infant he came with his parents to Battle Creek, Mich., in 1834, where his boyhood days were spent, and where he acquired an education far beyond the average of the young men of that day, and for several years devoted his talent to teaching in the public schools.

In 1856,—just the close of the civil war—he came north, and located a homestead at Norwood, upon which he lived until the hour of his death.

Few men have rendered better service to society or served the public more faithfully than Mr. Harris. Even before he left Calhoun county he served as supervisor of his township, and for thirty years he served on the Charlevoix county board from Norwood, taking rank as a most efficient and industrious legislator of county affairs.

In 1876 he served as Judge of Probate, and in 1880 he was deputy state land commissioner. Immediately following this he was twice elected to the lower house of the legislature from this district, which then embraced three counties.

His record in the legislature is a monument to his memory. "Uncle Bill" Harris was always found on the right side. He was invincible in his convictions, and absolutely incorruptible in the consideration of public questions. There was not a strain of his nature that was not born of honest motives. The rock of Gibraltar was not more impregnable against the surf of the ocean, than was William Harris against the intrigues of unscrupulous lobbyists. "Bill Harris" and honesty were synonymous terms.

There has never a man lived in Charlevoix county who has rendered his fellow citizens better service, or whose demise will be more sincerely mourned than that of William Harris. He was a widower, and was the father of E. B. Harris, of Ellsworth, and Miss Bertha Harris, who presided over his home since the death of her mother.

The remains were taken to Battle Creek today, where the funeral services will be held.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The foot-ball boys will play Bellaire Saturday on the home grounds.

Ried Hartley, who has been visiting friends in Detroit, has returned to school.

Guy Durgan who has been in the southern part of the state for the past few weeks, returned Oct. 9, and has started to school.

Mr. Bell, the superintendent of the Boyne City schools, called here Oct. 14, on his way to East Jordan, and was accompanied by Mr. Wendley who is on the examining board for the October teachers' examination.

County Normal.

Supt. Bell, of Boyne City, visited the Normal last Wednesday.

Miss Ethel Winkler visited the Normal room Wednesday, Oct. 14th.

Florence Sheldon spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents at East Jordan.

The class was invited to attend the morning exercises of the high school, and the lesson given by Mr. Lines, of Evanston, Ill., was enjoyed by all.

Some of the children from the training room assisted the Normal class in planting bulbs in the garden. The bulbs were given to us by Mr. A. Hayden.

The Normal class gave a reception Monday evening to the board of supervisors, board of education, and teachers. About sixty people were present and a program was rendered consisting of short talks by the members on their work and some musical selections.

—Len Adams left this morning for Glen Arbor, with his team, and Capt. Wm. Finnegan as a passenger.

Mr. Nicholas, always a good lawyer, has grown since those days, and ranks as one of the best advocates in Northern Michigan. His office is a school that may be classed as strenuous. He is a fighter in court, whether his client be the people or an individual citizen. Mr. Nicholas is the republican candidate for prosecutor. His opponent is Mr. H. A. Jersey, formerly of Boyne City, but now practicing law and editing a law journal in Oklahoma. We do not know what Mr. Jersey's intentions are, and cannot find anybody who does. We know that Mr. Nicholas will be elected, and that is enough.

Events have modified every prophecy ever made by Bryan. Such a prophet merits no trust for the future.

CHAPTER XXII.—(Continued.)

"Do you know Warren? Warren, of the Vulcan Co.?" he added, hopefully.

"Why—yes," admitted the clerk, standing up and rubbing his eyes.

"Do you know his handwriting, also?"

"I think I do."

"There's a specimen of it."

"Yes, 'tis," slowly and wonderingly nodded the clerk, as he perused a scrawl ordering "the delivery to bearer" of a certain article in a certain closet in the house. "Queer, to send for it in this way, that's been here so long! I'll get it for you, though."

"Be speedy, then, and—careful."

"I'll do it."

"It might hold some of his goods—see?"

"Oh! dynamite? Yes, but he knows enough to have it properly handled," confided he, retorted the clerk.

Gideon sank into a chair, pretty well exhausted. He felt a trifle gravely—as befitting a dust-covered satchel, he thought—the hand shook as he took it. Strange thrills ran through his being. A dazed feeling lurked in his brain. He loosened looking leather receptacle, but not in haste.

He breathed more freely as he again reached the outer air. With the thoughtfulness of a true man he took the middle of the road, as a means for the moment in getting the explosive far and quickly from the proximity of human beings.

CHAPTER XXIII.

At the hotel, Hope asked town Gideon Hope instead. What should he do with the dynamite in human hands? Suppose now that he had it—that was the question.

He recalled the explicit directions that Warren had given him. To stick it in some unfrequented water course, and he remembered a lonely bridge spanning a winding little stream, about a mile from the town.

Toward it Hope bent his course. He had proceeded a distance when a dull sound grew into momentarily augmenting resonance and distinctness—a rattling, Klingerly jolting, rattling, clog-lepptty klop!

By the soft moonlight he observed approaching two horsemen. An instant suspicion assailed him. Suppose they were allies of the indemnified pair at the hotel at home, scouring the country for him!

"I'll take no chance," he decided quickly—at least until the dynamite is disposed of.

So he drew aside the same bushes sought by Gideon and Claire. He was not the d d ass. As the men passed him he was positive he had seen them in the grounds of the private mansion—hired appendages of that selfsame institution.

About five minutes later, as he was nearing the bridge, almost noiselessly a man mounted on a horse emerged from the thickets and nearly ran him down.

He brought his animal to a sharp halt—he stared hard at Hope. Then he quickly assumed inspecting his clothing as if identifying him from description.

Gideon stood his ground. She had started in another direction.

Click!

"I'm sent you!" spoke the horseman, and he now held a revolver in his hand.

He was in the shadow, but Hope knew the voice, and aimed a blow at him behind over, and aimed a blow at him with the weapon. Gideon dodged. There he grappled with the form leaning toward him. He felt a stinging pain in one shoulder—the bearer had exploded.

But in wrath and strength he clung to the fellow, dragged him from his stirrups and giving him a mighty fling, sent his load crashing across a mass of bushes.

The satchel he had carried strapped across one shoulder. As the man lay motionless, Hope started again for the river. He staggered, then, as he went, weak and faint, drowsy away. As he began to experience a sensation of falling, he quickly binned into the saddle, hurried by gnoled himself about the bridge, and he slipped from the saddle. As he did so, unloosed the satchel of dynamite dropped from his shoulder in his foot. But Hope never knew of the incident absorbed in contemplation of the beginning and the end of all the pleasant incidents of his life.

"It is you? It is you?" slowly, doubtfully murmured Claire, as eager light in her beautiful eyes, her pale face working with intense emotion.

"And you—a prisoner!" cried Hope, rending up.

"Yes, for a long time. Since the night I was taken away to carry the man you lade me sleep."

"Who is he this time?"

"I, alone," explained Claire. "A woman has been in charge, but she was called away a little while ago, and he securely locked me. She will soon return."

"Why did you not try to escape—begin Hope.

"Because they have led me to believe you desired that I remain here."

"Wait!"

Gideon Hope flashed from the spot. Soon he was at the front door. With a great billet of wood he dashed it from place. Up a stairway he rushed, stunned and before the irresistible assault door after door gave way.

"Lucy," spoke Hope, all subdued, as he took three.

"You are trembling, weak, exhausted! I have come to do, and do for immediate explanation. Let me lift you in the saddle. Ride to the nearest town, and await my coming."

"But—but—Gideon, Claire, and there was no mistaking the tender light that shone from her eyes, whose sweet upon Hope's face, she had learned to obey so implicitly and love so devotedly.

"I will remain here for a time. I have something to do," answered Hope pretously.

"There was the dynamite to dispose of, and then, he had resolved to confront Charles's jailer when she returned, and force from her lips a confession that would enable him to intelligently proceed about a rail road company, one of the other isolated houses which darkened the Kenos and their influence associates.

"I will do as you say," assented Claire, and moved toward the grassy bank.

"But—only this," detained Hope again. He had brought her from the house with him, and he had resolved to confess. He explained and left her side momentarily.

He was not gone two minutes, and returning with the satchel in his hand he cleared the sinuous four steps at a bound, and with a triumphant exclamation of some peril or alarm on the part of Claire.

Where he came around in the side of the house the horse had scrambled into an adjoining field. Upon the green sward where Hope had left her was Claire, in a dead faint.

No other person was in view, and had happened quickly these lifted her head in his arms, and murmured his anxiety and solicitude into the white, wan face.

These several minutes went by, until at length her eyes opened. She shrieked.

"Who?" inquired Hope quickly.

"That man—"

"Yes, man?"

"Kane."

"He was here?" exclaimed Hope, in absolute amazement.

"Yes!" she quoted, looking about her, all in a tremble.

"When?"

"While you were gone." She clung to him hysterically. "Oh, Mr. Hope!" she cried, "protect me from him if he comes again."

"Do not fear for that," assured Hope. "You are certain it was Kane?"

Hysterically Claire related a singular story. Hope had no sooner gone into the house than Kane had appeared. With fiend, his garments disordered, a broken dangling from one arm, he had emerged upon her appalled view.

He had sprung to her side, seized her arm, in hurried accents announced that she must at once accompany him in flight. It was his desire—Gideon Hope's command.

She had struggled. He sought to drag her from the spot. Something he caught from her incoherent words, that she disbelieved and disregarded him, that Hope was even now in the house, that the house, the satchel, he had brought hither, he's exiled for help," narrated Claire. "Suddenly Kane's eyes flared with a strange, eager light. He sprang toward the satchel, saying: 'This is Hope's! Then it contains the money! If you will not go with me, at least I have the fortune.' Then I fainted away."

"The satchel—the satchel! That satchel contains—"

"You here!" she cried, facing Hope. "And you free?" she shouted at Claire. "Has he been here?" she demanded.

"Your husband? said Hope.

"Yes—you know that!"

"What, indeed! A strange breath, as of nature gasping a flutter of the leaves of the trees, a check in birdsong and insects—a pause in the rustle of the grass, a stillness, as of a breath held, a sigh, as of a sigh, as of a sigh, as of

SPEAKING OF ISSUES.

—From the Philadelphia Press.

TRUE PROPHETS AND FALSE.

HOW TO TEST THEM.

"I will not deny that there may be prophets to-day, but the trouble is to tell the true prophets from the false ones. The Bible says we can tell them by their fruits; we shall know them." —William J. Bryan's Speech at Bellefontaine, Jan. 20, 1900.

BRYAN PROPHECIES.

"TARIFF WILL CRUSH THE FARMER."

1892, Free Trade.

"Thus in every State, so far as these statistics have been collected, the proportion of home-seeking farmers is decreasing and that of tenant farmers increasing. This means not one thing; it means a land of landlords and tenants, and, backed by the history of every nation that has gone down, I say to you that no people can continue a free people under a free government when the great majority of its citizens are tenants of a small minority.—William J. Bryan; speech on the protective tariff in the National House of Representatives, March 16, 1892.

"GOLD STANDARD WILL DESTROY HOMES."

1896, Free Coinage—16 to 1.

"It only that, if protection has slain its thousands, the gold standard has slain its tens of thousands."—William J. Bryan; speech at Democratic National Convention, July, 1896.

"The Democratic party has begun a war of extermination against the gold standard. We ask no quarter; we give no quarter. We shall prosecute our warfare until there is not an American citizen who dares to advocate the gold standard. You ask why? We reply that the gold standard is a conspiracy against the human race, and that we should no more join in it than we would join a conspiracy against our homes and to destroy our families."—William J. Bryan; speech at Albany, N. Y., August, 1896.

"NO MORE FOURTH OF JULY."

1900, Imperialism!

"The fight this year will be to carry out the sentiment of that song we have so often repeated—'My Country, 'tis of Thee.' If we lose, our children and our children's children will not sing in the spirit of that song and our celebrations of the Fourth of July will pass away for the spirit of Empire will be in the ascendency."—William J. Bryan; speech at the Bryan Home Guards, Lincoln, Neb., July, 1900

"ROOSEVELT THE SPIRIT OF WAR."

1902, Anti-Imperialist.

"I would rather go down to eternal oblivion than be instrumental in the election of Roosevelt."—William J. Bryan, Oct. 17, 1902, while touring Ohio.

"The surrender of the present President (Roosevelt) to corporate influences furnishes an excellent proof of the wisdom of Judge Parker in making the statement he has. But Theodore Roosevelt stands for militarism. * * * The present occupant of the White House (Roosevelt) represents in an aggravated form the warlike spirit, as contrasted with the pacific policy that has heretofore characterized our nation.—William J. Bryan, in a speech at Springfield, Mo., Sept. 1, 1904, where he accused President Roosevelt of surrender to the corporations and holding "bloody, brutal and barbarous" methods.

"GOVERNMENT MUST OWN RAILWAYS."

1906, Government Ownership of Railways.

"I have already reached the conclusion that railways pursue so much of the nature of a monopoly that they must ultimately become public property, and be managed by public officials in the interest of the whole community."—William J. Bryan; Home-coming speech at New York City, August, 1906.

THE ANSWERS.

"THE FARMER."

The Answer in 1895.

"The answer is found in the prevailing good prices for grain, corn, hogs, cattle, hay and all the products of the farm, together with the fact that since the date of Candidate Bryan's 'crucifixion' speech, Western farm lands have doubled in value, and thousands of "tenant" farmers of that date have become prosperous home-owners, filling their own land in peace, happiness and plenty. Under the National Irrigation Act, and the Republican conservation movement, the West is soon to be the intense agricultural and horticultural producing area of the United States.

The Answer in 1906.

"The broad meaning of Candidate Bryan's speech of this year, is that railway regulation by statute law is inadequate, that "government ownership" is the only remedy for transportation abuses. The one element of his Federal Rate law has to daily disproved the claims of Candidate Bryan, invidiously directed, his whole account reasoning on great public question.

"GOLD."

The Answer in 1896.

"The gold standard has "slain" no one, nor did it write the "future in blood," nor did it destroy our homes nor foreclose the farm mortgage, nor did it close the Republican school; on the contrary, it has proved the sound and solid foundation of widespread prosperity, leading to individual progress and happiness, added to the strength and resources of the Republic, and to the advantages of this system here, been disseminated through means of schools, government bureaus, private societies and others, the perception of Filipinos is continually increasing, and gives very good promise that the Filipinos will soon be fitted for the care of the government.

"The accounts opened up to the close of the fiscal year numbered 4,366,000 of our race, depositing 2,222 still open. The deposits received for the total sum of $95,333,000—an average of 168.21 pesos. Withdrawals reached the total amount of 280,600.21 pesos, leaving a net deposit of 500,000.21 pesos at the end of the fiscal year—or for the first nine months of the operation of the postal savings bank—or, to be more exact, for the first months of the operation of the average number of offices, the smaller ones having been opened from time to time during the year, so that many had been operating only 5 and 6 or two at the time these figures were taken.

Encouraging Small Accounts.

"The desire of issuing postal savings bank stamps has met with some difficulty. The stamps are fixed in method by which small amounts can be deposited without the expense of issuing a book, figuring interest, and opening an account.

"On the whole, the reception accorded the postal savings bank has been gratifying, and gives good promise. The investment of the funds is in the hands of a postal savings bank investment board, which carries a certain amount of the funds on deposit, not has limited power of investment. The law provides that 25 per cent of the money held on deposit may be loaned on first-class real estate, under limitations carefully drawn to protect the depositors, and 10 per cent on agricultural lands under still more rigid limitations."

The Bacon Hog.

It is the idea of many that a bacon hog is merely a thin hog, says Farmers Advance. This is not true. The bacon hog is a hog of the right conformation, of the right quality of food, not really fat, but nevertheless properly fitted, and by no means thin.

Hay Versus Silage.

A ton of hay requires 400 cubic feet of space, while eight tons of silage will go into the same space. A ton of hay, more the power of our digestive matter, and in silage occupying equal space 2,000 pounds.

"I used to have a great relish for general jokes."

"Don't you still enjoy them?"

"No, not since I'm married."

Merit and Good Luck.

PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION.

Actual Operation of Postal Savings Banks in Philippines.

Two Years' Experiment Indicates the Plan Is Successful.

The only postal savings bank system in operation under the American flag is that in the Philippines, where, after two years of experiment, the institution has been declared a great success. In the report of the Philippine commission, just published, the postal savings bank is discussed briefly, in part as follows:

"The postal savings bank was first opened in Manila on Oct. 1, 1904. The law provides for three classes, with limitations as to the amounts that can be received at any one time in each class. Following the opening of the Manila office, other postal savings bank offices were opened in various cities, of different classes, until at the close of the year 235 had been opened of which 9 were first, 86 were second and 140 were third class.

Filipinos Adopting System.

"At first the Filipinos did not to any great extent avail themselves of the opportunity of depositing a portion of their receipts in the postal savings bank, and yet, when it is considered that the Filipinos are a people of other habits, and that the Filipinos will soon be fitted for the care of the government, not yet accustomed to entrusting their money to the care of the government, not yet accustomed to entrusting their money to the care of the government, not yet accustomed to entrusting their money to

That the fish of Lake Superior are being depleted at a startling rate is the assertion of commercial fishermen operating at Marquette, Mich. As evidence in support of this contention, attention is directed to the fact that where the spring of 1907 eight fishing tugs have gone out of marquette, and that at the present time only four are being operated in Michigan waters, compared with double that number a year ago. The four tugs are the Thomas and Columbia of Marquette, and the Eagle and Jackson of Grand Marais. Where formerly tons of whitefish were taken in a lift, the fishermen now consider themselves lucky to get a few hundred pounds, and, to a lesser extent, the same conditions apply as the catch of lake trout. The pound whitefish, which brought only 5 cents a pound twenty years ago, and then had to be sold down to 2 cents a pound in the market at times, is now in constant demand at from 18 to 25 cents per pound. Only for the fact that the federal government collects spawn in the fall, to the tune of 100 million fry subsequently propagates and plants the fry that are hatched from the eggs, is the fish supply of its present proportions. The fishermen remember the great work of the United States Fish Commission, and desire to be made to assume the establishment of a fish hatchery at Marquette. There are hatcheries of the kind at Duluth and Sault Ste. Marie, but their combined capacity is not sufficient to care for all the spawn it is possible to secure.

USE TRAIN TO WRECK HOTEL.

Last Car Is Hitched to Beam and Building Pulled Down.

In an attempt was made to wreck the hotel at Wheelock, Ohio, and thereby secure Youngstown, O., owned by I. K. Hagenfritz, to hitching a freight train to the beam in the hotel lobby and pulling it down. Part of the building was wrecked and the hotel proprietor, his employes and workers, were troubled about but not seriously injured. There have been several fights between union sympathizers and the nonunion men housed in the building. Early in the morning while a freight train was backed on the business & Ohio tracks beside the hotel, a band of union sympathizers made a rush for the rear corner beam of the building and attached it to the rear car in the train. When the train started the corner of the building was torn down and the whole structure would have been wrecked had not the cable parted.

St. Louis Man and His Sister Reach Safety When Famished.

Lost in the Sierra Madre Mountains near El Paso, Texas, for nearly two days, J. M. Brown of St. Louis and his sister finally found, alone and old when they were famished and in a state of collapse. Mr. and Miss Brown stopped at Ft. Lane on the way from Los Angeles to their home in St. Louis, intending to spend Sunday in the mountains. They engaged a Mexican guide and started out early Sunday for a day of mountain climbing. The guide proved to be a ranger in the mountains. Mr. and Miss Brown wandered about and soon found themselves in a deep canyon, the sides so rugged that they could not climb out. They spent an all night in the canyon. Early Monday and after a day attempt a high peak and could discern the lights of Juarez, Mexico, and El Paso. They walked toward the lights and about noon they finally reached a herder's hut, along the trail.

Grain Blast Kills Thirteen.

With a concussion which shook the entire village, a large grain elevator, holding a capacity of 50,000 bushels, exploded in Hickford, Vt., causing the death of twelve men and a woman. The explosion blew off the entire roof of the building, scatter the timbers in all directions, and almost instantly flames burst out all over the structure. The fire spread so rapidly it has been started by spontaneous combustion in the dry dust of the grain.

Would Restrict Franchise.

Three amendments to the State election in Georgia indicate the election of Joseph M. Brown, the Democratic candidate for Governor, by a majority of more than 50,000. Returns from a majority of the counties indicate the ratification of the constitutional amendment providing qualifications for voters. The amendment makes the ownership of property one of the qualifications.

Young Hunter Kills Big Bear.

Suddenly attacked by a big black bear which sprang upon him from the underbrush on Massanutton mountain, where he was hunting, Linden Allen, a white youth of Mount Jackson, Va., had the presence of mind to empty the contents of both barrels of his shotgun into the bruin's body. The bear fell dead at young Allen's feet.

Increase in Vote for Licenses.

About one-half the 108 towns in Connecticut held town elections Monday, complicated by the license proposition. The returns in most cases showed a change of party interest and was not indicative, so far as the State and national tickets are concerned that show indicate an increase in the vote for license.

SLAIN ON WEDDING EVE.

Woman Murdered on Ohio Road and Body Laid Out for Burial.

Her bodice folded over her breast and her limbs straightened out as if for burial, was found murdered on the road between Wadsworth, Ohio, and the hamlet of Chestnut Hook. Two bullets had pierced the girl's body. Guy Hauser, the man whom she was to have married the next day, he detained by the sheriff pending developments of the police investigation. Hauser denies all knowledge of the tragedy and exhibits a marriage license procured at Wooster the previous day. The body of the young woman was found by Charles Tanner, a cousin of Guy Hauser, in the early hours of the day. Two bullets had entered the girl's shield, one piercing the forehead, while the second crashed through between the eye and nose. A band of farmers, led by Marshal Bricker, going to the scene, as soon as word of the tragedy was received, met Guy Hauser on the road. The police theory is that Miss Lee was killed while riding in a buggy with a man friend. The principal clear that led to the detention of Guy Hauser is that along the road are plainly seen the tracks of a horse with one shoe missing. An examination of the stables at the Hauser home disclosed the fact that one of Hauser's horses has a shoe missing from one of its front feet. Hauser refuses any explanation of this. He declares he can prove an alibi. Another police theory is that a trial for the affections of Miss Lee may have slain the girl on learning of her approaching marriage. When the body was found the girl's suitcase was on the ground beside her. Her handbag was still on her right arm and in her left hand she clutched a handkerchief. There was no evidence of a struggle.

TELEPHONE LINES COMBINED.

Three Independent Companies Merge in $10,000,000 Corporation.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the United States Telephone Company, the Doylestown Telephone Company of Cleveland, and the Citizens' Telephone Company of Columbus, the three companies were united in Cleveland. The new company, which has not been named, will act as an operating company, with a capitalization of between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000, and will take over the three independent companies on a lease for 999 years. Other Ohio independent companies will be added from time to time. The merger places under the control of the operating company over 50 per cent of the independent telephones in Ohio and of the 225,000 telephones in the State.

DIE TOGETHER IN GAS FUMES.

Woman and Men in Lincoln, Neb., Believed in Suicide Compact.

R. L. Shepard, traveling salesman for Marshall Pneumatic Scales Company, and Mrs. Leona Hunter, stenographer at the Lincoln Commercial Club, were found dead in the apartments of the man in a fashionable block on North 11th street. Gas pouring from the room caused an investigation. The couple had evidently been dead several hours, the supposition of the police being that they turned on the gas with suicidal intent, though the possibility of accidental death is admitted. There was no message to indicate a suicide compact, but that is the generally accepted theory.

Peaceful Picketing Upheld.

Peaceful picketing and the right to strike, or threaten to strike, was upheld in the United States Court of Appeals in Chicago in a decision handed down by Judge Grosscup, Baker and Seaman. An injunction issued by Judge Seaman of Milwaukee against the Iron Molders' Union on complaint of the Allis-Chalmers Company two years ago was modified by the higher court and a number of the clauses in the original writ were vacated outright.

Patent No. 800,000 Issued.

The nine hundred thousandth patent from the United States patent office was issued Saturday by Patent Commissioner Moore. The patent was an improvement in traveling stairs, such as are used in hotels and other large buildings. Mr. Moore estimates that the one millionth patent will be reached in 1911. The number of foreign patents up to the last report was 1,135,000, only 255,000 in excess of the total for this country.

Many Working Men Idle.

The British General Federation of Trades Unions has issued a manifesto declaring that there are 1,500,000 unemployed in the United Kingdom, with 1,500,000 suffering dependents. The federation recommends the creation of a minister of labor and a permanent "unemployment" board, and that all measures of labor unions refuse to work overtime.

Hold Blacks as Night Riders.

Two cousins of the arrest at Mayesville, Miss., of six negroes charged with posting night-riding warnings. Posses are searching for two others wanted on the same charge. The alleged confession of one of those arrested, Walter Robinson, declares that negro organizations have been formed for night-riding purposes in both Mississippi and Louisiana.

"Golgotha" Oratorio Given.

At St. Paul Newman choirs from the Twin Cities, Duluth, and other Minnesota cities gave a rendition of J. Victor Herbert's oratorio, "Golgotha." The production marked the opening of the jubilee celebration of the Minnesota conference of the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Augustana Synod.

Auto Car Kills Druggist.

J. Q. Wellington, a well-known druggist of Colorado Springs, was run down and instantly killed on Pike's Peak avenue by an automobile. The driver of the car made his escape.

EUROPE'S WAR CLOUD.

Moss in the Balkans Has Served to Greatly Excite the Powers.

It is a long time since Europe has had anything to talk about but the Macedonian moss. Turkey had just begun to congratulate herself on Austria, and Hog, Abe Hamid had begun to get used to the sight of his subjects and quit wearing sheet iron linings in his bloomers. There was some prospect that the army and navy might get a few years overdue back pay, and the ladies of the seraglio were figuring on a few new frocks gowns and high-heeled slippers. Everything was sailing along smoothly when Prince Ferdinand suddenly got the bit in his teeth and ran away with the whole outfit. His independent party movement has set all Europe crazy.

Austria has announced her intention of annexing the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and as Cousin William is backing up this little land grab it is pretty likely to go through. Italy is mad because Austria is taking a territory largely populated by Italians. Russia is fond on general principles. Turkey is long trying to invade naughty, naughty Ferdinand, and Austria is on opposed. There is a demand for a congress of the signatories to the Berlin treaty to decide what shall be done, now that Austria has violated the integrity of Turkey, but students of the papers politic fear that such a meeting would result in trouble.

However, it is not believed that war will result unless the progressive element among the Turks feels that some [illegible] Turkey

IN A YOKOHAMA THEATER.

The Plays Last All Day, and Sometimes Two.

Before leaving Yokohama, I went to the theater, which certainly was unlike anything I had ever seen before, writes Lady Randolph Churchill, in the Country. We sat on the floor of one so-called box, and had ten thousand people to watch them, which it was one endless source of interest and amusement to watch them, whole families—mothers-in-law and daughters-in-law, children of all ages, and ancestors of different generations, fathers, sons and grandsons. All had their dinners with them. Little trays were produced—tiny boxes full of rice, bowls containing weird foodstuffs, pink, white and green; seaweed on rice cakes; raw fish and omelettes yellow as sulphur; tea in microscopic cups, of course, with no milk or sugar. The Japanese cannot understand Europeans putting milk in their tea, as, according to them, it has a strong smell.

The children were dressed and undressed during the entr'actes, and people smoked, slept, ate, talked and amused themselves. It was certainly a great contrast to see a little "mamie" such as Pierre Loti describes, dainty dressed in the gayest kimono and smartest of obi, sitting between a coolie wearing nothing but a loin cloth and an old woman nursing a baby. Although it was so late that most of the men had taken off their coats and the thermometer was 85 degrees, the atmosphere was not impossible, as I am sure words have been in case in a European theater under similar circumstances. The plays are usually 14 or 15 acts, and last all day and sometimes two. This particular one not having an actress such as Sadi Yacco to interpret it, was quite unintelligible to me; but I admired the grace of the actresses, their easy movements when dancing and the way they managed their tight clothes. Another surprise when I found out they were all men! Up to a few years ago men and women did not act together in Japan, the feminine companies being composed of either one sex or the other. But a change has come over them, and there are now mixed companies.

ASSOCIATION DISSOLVED.

The Charlevoix County Mutual Benefit Association Disbanded by Insurance Law.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Charlevoix County Mutual Benefit Association yesterday, that organization voted to dissolve, and its membership was merged into the Home Mutual Benefit Association of Flint.

The old county organization, of which H. M. Rose was president and Chas. E. Sawyer, was merely a federal local association. On the death of a member the family drew $100 for funeral expenses.

The last legislature passed a law prohibiting this and similar organizations from taking any more members, and Attorney General Hill's recent insurance decision having practically closed this as an insurance company, doing business outside the mutual provisions of the law, there was no alternative. The organization itself was financially a wreck, and under conservative and capable management, but it was determined that a transfer to a new system of operation was desirable.

Therefore yesterday Mr. H. J. Gillespie, secretary and general manager of the Home M. B. A. was here and took over the membership of the old organization. The Home is strictly an insurance organization, but has the same general purpose as the old—the payment of the funeral benefit in cash, in amounts from $35 to $250. The association is operated under the State Insurance laws, and is in all respects a reliable concern.

The local manager in Charlevoix is Chas. E. Sye; Boyne City will be taken care of by S. B. Stackus, and C. H. Whittington will have charge at East Jordan.

The Record of a Capable Official.

For many years D. S. Payton represented Ireline on the board of supervisors. Long before he left the councils of that body he had become one of that efficient class of county legislators that shape the course of legislation. He was known as one of the best men that ever sat on the board.

Merit, and merit alone, put him into the county treasurer's office. We take the responsibility of saying that D. S. Payton has been the best treasurer Charlevoix county ever had. His record is absolutely without a blemish.

Painstaking, accurate, industrious, courteous, Mr. Payton has established a reputation of which he may be proud. Mr. Drescher, the expert accountant who two years ago adjusted the treasurer's books, told the writer of this that he had never found a county official more familiar with his work or more efficient in executing it than Mr. Payton.

Mr. Payton is the republican candidate for county clerk. The people want efficiency in the office of county clerk, and efficiency can only come with experience, and familiarity with county affairs. There is not a man in Charlevoix county who has a more intimate knowledge of every detail of county business than D. S. Payton. He will make an ideal clerk, and, of course he will be elected.

Change in the Management of the West Michigan Sugar Company Factory.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the West Michigan Sugar Company, Mr. F. H. Hubbard, general manager of the Charlevoix factory, was unanimously elected general manager of the St. Louis factory.

He will assume his new position next week, but his family will remain here, probably for the winter. Mr. Hubbard was for two years connected with the St. Louis factory.

Mr. S. H. Marling succeeds Mr. Hubbard as general manager of the Charlevoix factory.

Pearson For Representative.

If any man in Charlevoix county has earned legislative honors that man is "Billy" Pearson. He has been chairman of the republican county committee back of the memory of the present generation, and results are a matter of record.

Mr. Pearson has been in the service of the county as sheriff and register of deeds, and has proven his ability and integrity by faithful application to duty.

Mr. Pearson's official record is above reproach, and his many acts of philanthropy have marked him as a friend of every laboring man that has been his employ, and that means many. He is one of the foremost of the business and industrial leaders of Charlevoix county, and is a farmer, born and bred, being now the owner and practical operator of a farm farm in Boyne Falls township.

Mr. Pearson will take to Lansing a knowledge of Charlevoix county interests that very few men can command. There is no detail of agricultural or industrial development in this county with which he is not thoroughly familiar.

Mr. Pearson's election is assured, because he is the logical candidate, and the logical winner.

THE PRIMARY LAW.

It's Weak Points Have Been Demonstrated and Will Be Remedied.

As a result of the developments during the primary election campaign, the election and recount, the republicans of the state are discussing with much earnestness the changes which will be necessary to improve the primary law and make it fit better the conditions as well as correct evils which have appeared in the system as at present constituted.

The principal change will be one that will provide for a better separation of parties and an amendment is to be made which will require each voter to vote for some party ticket in the fall as he registered to vote in the spring, which will prevent, it is believed, wholesale flocking from one party to another when a hard contest is on for a nomination. The law will also be amended to provide for the county board of canvassers to investigate charges of fraud, if the plans of certain state officials go through. They believing that such matters as well as recounts should be taken up by counties instead of by state canvassing boards, in order that the recount will not need to be dragged along for an indefinite period and endanger the chances of the successful candidate being certified to the election boards.

While it is probable that the law will be made broader to cover all party nominations for all parties, it is said there will undoubtedly be some provision made for a separate and county convention of political parties. The delegates to the recent convention were earnest in their demands that party gatherings be continued, and whenever any speaker remarked that it might be the last convention of the party, there were immediately loud cries of "no, no," from all parts of the hall.

Another suggested change is that of providing a comprehensive synopsis of the law for the benefit of election officials, as the results of the last primary show plainly that the law is little understood and only indifferent attempts were made to go through the many sections and obtain a knowledge of all the requirements of the law.

Candidate Bryan isn't saying a word this year about the Wilson-Gorman bill which he helped to stand under which President Cleveland denounced as "a creature of perfidy and dishonor." Can it be that Mr. Bryan is ashamed of the only important measure he ever helped to place on the statute book?

Mr. Bryan declares that he stands by his record. He should stand close or it will fall over and smash him.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, ss. Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate Office in the village of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 12th day of October, A. D. 1908.

Present, Hon. Willard A. Smith, Judge of Probate.

On reading and filing the petition duly verified of Mary Kanago, praying for the probate of a certain instrument filed in the Clerk's office in the City of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 12th day of October, A. D. 1908, and purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and for the appointment of Mary Kanago, or some other suitable person, as executrix thereof.

It is ordered that the 12th day of November, A. D. 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said Probate Office, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 12th day of October, A. D. 1908, and show cause why a license to sell the real estate of said deceased should not be granted.

And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and of the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing.

Underground Rivers in Australia.

There are comparatively few rivers of any size or importance in Australia, and a local learned professor of science has been explaining the reason in consequence of the geological formation of the common, with most of the rivers he says, it proves underground subterranean streams.

He declares that one of these underground rivers is the largest in the world, being no less than 200 miles wide and running right through the center of the continent. If these vast supplies of subterranean water were brought to the surface and properly utilized, Australia would become the richest country in the world.

—The schooner Oliver Mitchell, Capt. Wm. Hutter, arrived Tuesday morning with hard coal for the Charlevoix Wood and Coal Co.

—A. H. Hutter, of Pellston, joined his wife here over Sunday. Mrs. Hutter has been here ten days as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hutter.

—A. J. ("Dolly") Hamill, the distinguished Petoskey "Round Ender," is here, was in the city yesterday jollying up his many old Charlevoix friends.

—All Maccabees are requested to be present at their hall on Friday evening, as there will be work and other important business to transact. Refreshments will be served after work is over.

—Capt. Roy Marshall, of the Salvation Army, who has had temporary charge of the local corps for some time, he has been appointed to the command of the Ludington corps, and left for that place yesterday. The best wishes of his many Charlevoix friends go with him.

—County Clerk Lewis is busy issuing deer licenses this week.

—Chas. Zeitler and wife spent Sunday in East Jordan with friends.

—Arch. Cameron, of Central Lake, was in the city Tuesday on business.

—At the U. S. Marshal sale of the fishing tug Little Mattie, the boat was bid in by I. S. See and Ralph Washburn.

—Mrs. J. A. Hawkins left Tuesday for southern Michigan points to visit relatives and friends. She will be absent about six weeks.

—Will Parmelee has taken a contract to build a residence on Clinton street for A. L. Hart, of Chicago, a brother of Mrs. H. W. Kane. Mr. Hart intends to come here to live.

—Capt. J. H. Emery arrived here Monday night from Traverse City with the Plastic M. Hum, which takes the place of the steamer Hum, which is loaded out to repair a broken shaft.

—The big life boat which went to the Atlantic coast last spring to receive a gasoline engine, arrived back at the life saving station yesterday fully equipped for strenuous business.

—A leading carpenter and contractor tells us that there are more new residences being built and old ones enlarged and improved in Charlevoix this fall than in the past five years. Every carpenter and stone mason is busy, and laborers hard to get.

—Capt. J. P. Partridge, Capt. Louis Guard and Sid Henry left Monday for the far west. They will spend the winter at or near Pierce, Idaho, in the woods and mountains, where an abundance of large and small game abound. In the spring they will avail themselves of the chance offered to secure government land.

—The steamer Frank Woods, formerly running between Chicago and the other shore in the fruit trade, has been chartered by the U. S. Trans. Co. and is running between Charlevoix and Little Traverse Bay points and the straits. The Mineral comes only this far and the Woods does the rest.

—Judge Chittenden, of Cadillac, in sentencing a violator of the local option law at the last term of court said that "since he had been on the bench 99 per cent of all the criminal business that came before him, was directly or indirectly chargeable to the sale of liquor, 50 per cent of the divorce business and 25 per cent of the civil business."

—A regular old-fashioned housewarming party was inaugurated at the Hesch home, on Dixon avenue last Saturday. The trouble will last a week. Misses Harris, Chalupsky, Jackson, Cook, Thimesch, Dodge, Bowman, Lovewell, Sherman, Kirchner, Pearl and Judge Conroy make up the segregation. An electric light will be kept burning in the north side lone house during the festivities. An "At Home" was given Sunday for the young gentlemen.

—The Carnegie Library proposition has reached that stage where committee work is active. The committee, consisting of Hon. John Nicholls and W. H. Miller, are at work considering plans and specifications which they have assembled from various points where similar libraries have been established. No better appointment could have been made than that of Messrs Nicholls and Miller. Mr. Miller is a mechanic and Mr. Nicholls is a philosopher, and that is a good combination.

—In the stage production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" the essential features of Charles Felton Pidgin's famous New England novel of the same name have been followed, and they are said to have been handled to strongly clever advantage. It is distinctly enjoyable play, both in itself and in the ingeniously natural work of the people presenting it. The production is to be seen here at the Charlevoix Theatre, Nov. 3, and by the way is the same to every detail of scenic production and cost as seen during the New York run recently at the Academy of Music. There is a large amount of comedy, despite the tender seriousness pertaining to Alice Pettengill's pathetic figure as the much loved blind girl said to be Miss Jessie Hanshaw, a clerk in the Charlevoix post office.

CEMENT PLANT.

BOARD OF CONNERGE LANDS THE BIG INDUSTRIAL PLANT.

The People Must Back Up Board—Means Much to Charlevoix.

Charlevoix will have the big cement factory, and work on it will be commenced this fall.

For the past year the syndicate formerly operating the Marlborough wet process plant, near Detroit, have been in consultation with our board of commerce with the end in view of establishing a plant here, the most process no longer being able to compete with the lime stone, or dry process.

They have had engineers and chemists here from time to time, and have made extensive borings, which have demonstrated not only the inexhaustible quantity but the superior adaptibility for the manufacture of cement of our limestone.

During the past summer Mr. H. H. Parsons, the head of the Marlborough outfit, with other gentlemen financially interested, have been here several times, and the unanimous report to board of commerce rooms have resulted in gradually drawing the two parties to the transaction nearer together, until last week, when a perfect agreement was accomplished, and when the people by their votes ratify the action of the board of commerce, contracts will be signed and bonds given.

The plant will be located on Pine Lake a considerable distance south of the sugar factory. It will have large docks with labor saving appliances. It will be connected with the quarries by a railroad. The quarries do not include any part of the old Simmons Co's land or options.

The factory will have a capacity of 2,500 barrels of cement per day, and will employ 250 men, with a probability of increase. It will make the other Northern Michigan cement plants "look like 30 cents."

The value of this acquisition to Charlevoix is immeasurable because of its permanence. It is not a timber proposition, because timber has a time limit. The lime stone that will be controlled by the new plant will last 1000 years. And cement is as staple as coke, and always will be, indeed, it is gradually driving brick from the domain of structural industry.

Another side benefit that will come with the factory is the certainty of Michigan Central extension here. It is a fact that is already understood by both parties to the factory deal. Then again the period of construction, which will be commenced at once and continued as long as winter weather permits, will be a period of local activity.

The land controlled by the company covers an area of 1500 acres, and very little brought up immediate, if ever, also fact. Another important and valuable asset is the existence of a one-foot stratum of shale an India impassable element in the manufacture of cement.

The plant will cost over $1,000,000, and there will not be a plant of its kind in the state that will stand upon such certainty of profit as the Charlevoix factory. Its crude material will be practically "under its feet." Besides two railroads on one side, it will have navigable water on the other, constituting a Lake Michigan harbor.

When we consider the fact that the Newaygo and Elk Rapids factories had their raw material from Bay Shore, and that Bay City cement stone comes from Alpena, and yet all making money, the golden opportunity existing here will be manifest to the most unobserving. Every condition for successful and profitable operation exists here to a degree that cannot be found elsewhere in Michigan.

The plant will not only be a great industrial factor in itself, but will give an impetus to every interest of Charlevoix in which skill and labor constitute a factor.

The citizens of Charlevoix will be called upon to back up the proposition, and there is no doubt of an affirmative result.

GETS CARNEGIE MEDAL.

No. 3 Surfman in the Charlevoix Life Saving Crew in the Hero List.

Ward W. Bennett, member of the Charlevoix life Saving Station but whose residence is Glen Haven, Michigan, has been awarded a silver medal and one thousand dollars from the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission in recognition of a notable rescue effected Christmas day, 1906.

While home for vacation Bennett happened to see eleven year old Harry Tobin skate through thin ice into the narrows of Glen Lake. Instantly Bennett ran to the spot, sized after the child lost in the roiled lake bottom among weeds was unable to locate the unconscious boy until going down the third time. He then caught the child by his clothing and raised him to the surface among the broken ice, from then back would have been lost because of the difficulty of climbing on the thin ice edge from ten feet of water that moves with an eight mile current through the channel, and the fact that experience on a sled with a six foot rope. This was thrown by the end youth of a living chum. After the child and rescuer were landed Bennett ignored his half frozen condition and set to work to resuscitate the boy by rolling him across the back of a companion who lay face down on the ice. That he was successful in this novel mode of reviving the drowned is testified by the existence today of a very live boy who rejoices in this honor shown his brave rescuer.

Surfman Bennett was married in January of the same year to Miss Jessie Hanshaw, a clerk in the Charlevoix post office.

The people of Bennett's home town and vicinity express great pleasure at his good fortune. Mr. Bennett is a young man thoroughly liked and exceedingly popular in the place where he has lived all his life. That he richly deserved the honor and given him is shown by the exhaustive study made of each case by agents of the Carnegie Commission. Two photographs were taken of the scene of accident by the agent to add to his personal statements. No point of interest bearing on the case escaped attention. When the agent finished his investigation he had satisfied himself to the minutest detail. The Carnegie Commission has rejected seventeen hundred eighty-three applications for medals and this speaks loudly of their care in the selection of deserving instances.

Application for the medal awarded to Surfman Bennett was made by a lady who resided near the scene of the accident, but twenty months elapsed before the Commission took up the case. This delay is due to the extended itinerary of the men working in their service.

Big Land Deal.

Last week John M. Feits, of this city, sold his land holdings of 640 acres in Hayes township to Mr. Stevens, of Chicago, through Mr. E. C. Walker, also of Chicago, who on his own account, holds large acreage north at Charlevoix.

The land lies along the railroad, and is a very fertile tract. It is understood that the purchaser proposes to put the land under immediate cultivation, and it means very much to Charlevoix as in addition to the arable area of productive soil surrounding the city.

It means business, and crops mean money for our markets, our sugar factory, and our general commercial interests.

—"Cap" Jerry Adams Sawyer, coming to the Charlevoix Theatre for one night on Tuesday, Nov. 3, is said to be wholly different from any other New England play, and advantageously so. It has never been played with special individuality of perception and judgment, and the company was reported by his critics there to be chosen with excellent regard for their ability in this line of country character impersonation. The story of the play is said to be one of a character naturally handled that everyone perhaps has varied sympathy and humor for, distinct individuality, and has had sympathetic and equal opportunity.

THE LADY FROM THE SEA is the graphically appropriate title of this most fascinating and interesting serial. The story is from the pen of Cyrus Townsend Brady, author of a number of works of fiction that have received attention in the best literary circles.

Ellen Smith, the heroine of the story, is the daughter of a Confederate officer who owns a privateer, and the scene is laid during the War of the Rebellion. Ellen is a typical southern girl—proud, self-reliant and daring. Thomas Beekman Smith is a naval officer of the Government, and captures a blockade runner. They learn through a letter found aboard the ship, the location of the privateer, and also capture that craft, with Ellen aboard.

Some very entertaining and interesting chapters are devoted to the cruise and love-making later. Ellen appears to have betrayed Smith to the Confederates, and he barely escapes death as a spy. Later still, her father is made a prisoner on board a ship of the enemy. The hot-headed southerner disowns his daughter, when she acknowledges her love for Smith, is set at liberty and the discarded Ellen becomes the wife of the man she loves.

This story is intense in its war flavor and original in its treatment of plot and incidents. The naval adventures are thrilling and well depicted, and the serial will be recognized as a very superior war story.

CHAPTER I.

Romance, in books, is associated always with the beautiful, generally with the best. We go backward into the past for a theme, since "the distance lends enchantment to the view." We fancy that the lives lived have more variety—certainly more gracefully—beneath satin and brocade, heavy velvet and lace than in the lives that quotes poetry in prose and more alluring than that which covers the body with a coat of mail. Romance is associated invariably with gallant knight and lady, "sans peur et sans reproche," with the "pleasing of a lute," carry a man whose ideals must inevitably transcend those of his every brother who is spherate by the salon or the league.

It is a lesson that there is no romance among the country people. The hero and the heroine, in the novel, must be dissociated from real life by unusual qualities and characteristics, else no one will care for their story—or, at least, it is longlived. Yet as the sadder tragedies are those of the common people, so the most of the romances are those of the common people. To pick up at random any of the current stories of the day is to find one evidence of a conscious or unconscious popular yearning for the beautiful and the unusual in the characterization—in the name—of the puppets who give title to the story, and strut through their brief hours upon the written stage. With rare exceptions the heroines are beautiful in person, cultivated in mind, ancient in family—Lady Clara Vere de Vere, if not "with the blood of Howard," is no longer beautiful, but he is always tall, brave, noble, generous, and if, disfigured, still inclined to reform. The names as I have suggested above, of these peculiar persons come equal, as far as causes may—and they can to a great degree, notwithstanding Shakspeare—to these attributes. They fall religiously from the tongue and linger resolutely in the memory. Invention which might better be devoted to the story is wasted on a name that, like Wordsworth's "green light," "was all earth to him." Its sole influence—for old Commodore Dalgetty—was to keep alive the memory of the bequest he could get for duty at the southern of the war was the old-fashioned sailing frigate St. Lawrence. Such a name promptly applied for an appointment to one of the new steam sloops-of-war, with its application and term passed over and the name then referred to his uncle, one of the past.

The commander of the St. Lawrence was Commodore Hiram Paulding, who had been a midshipman in the War of 1812 and commended for his gallant conduct while executive officer of the Hornet off the battle of Lake Champlain. The veteran, also, dated in his relegation to the St. Lawrence, but there was no present help for it. In no form time he would have been retired long above, to be might perhaps consider himself lucky at being given any command at all.

As I have said, the war had just begun. Blockade-running was in its infancy. Yet, catering in behalf of the Confederates was novelty, laughing vigorously. That it not been slipped in the bud by the vigilant efforts of the Federal cruisers it might have done enough damage to have rendered unnecessary the expenditure of the Alabama later on. The United States had proclaimed a blockade of the southern coast, but as yet it was lazily maintained, owing to scarcity of force, and the "Yankees" were scattered and went pretty much as they pleased.

The St. Lawrence was attached to the North Atlantic blockading squadron, but more on the paper than in fact, being a single cutter. Officers and men, well disposed. Why that squadron had expected to capture anything in a sailing vessel was a mystery. The Confederates employed the swiftest steamers for privateers and blockade-runners to get some sense, too, and so she hasn't worried over their being away as much as I was afraid she would, and I think this rest has been the best thing ever for her.

"But for all that, we shall be glad when we see the chilly Jersey."

COMPANIONSHIP SERVED.

"Sarah," said the man who gives advice, "if you want to prosper in this world you must go to bed with the chickens."

WITHERING RESOLUTIONS

By Henry F. Cope

"And when the sun was risen they were scorched; and because they had no root they withered away."—Matthew xiii, 6.

The teachings of Jesus are numerous. One does not have to be a farmer to understand the parable of the sower, or he finds it written in his own experience. Despite the efforts of many to signify this story is to plant in shallow, because many good words and hopes have dropped into our hearts while few of them come to good fruitage.

Every man has known the joy of receiving the good seed. Like a gift from heaven has come the gem of good, the claim of some high possibility and he has formed there into a noble resource in life. Ideals have become his possession and in the moment when the infinite scene seemed to open on his way, he have dedicated to endeavor to realize them.

For a while, our good resolutions, ideals, are lived up to them. Then some day [illegible] we suddenly realize that we found that seed withered away. The bustander of our hearts is a long record of good seed which has mysteriously withered after a brief period of flourishing. How can one do better? What is the secret of keeping the power of ideals and making them fruitful?

We may begin a good course on impulse, but we never will maintain it except by endurance. The ability to endure is the power to do the right when it is not easy, when it is not in the line of our natural tendencies

The goods for this season were designed and made long ago. So it is always. There are more kinds of choice things than one—first choice, second choice, third choice, and so on. TO MIDDLE WEST AND ROCKY MOUNTAIN STATES REPUBLICANS.

You want Mr. Taft and Mr. Sherman elected, and they cannot be elected unless the Republican National Committee has sufficient money to pay the legitimate expenses of the campaign. It costs money to maintain an organization. It requires money to pay for printing, postage, salaries or stenographers and clerks at headquarters, traveling expenses of speakers and numerous other details that go to make the campaign end successfully. Congress, as you know, has passed a law making it criminal for us to solicit money from corporations. We must depend upon the contributions of individual voters. If every Republican in this Western Division would contribute one dollar to the campaign fund, we will be able to do all the things that the voters want done; we will be able to elect Taft and Sherman. Will you help? If so, please send one dollar to the chairman of your State Finance Committee, whose name appears in the list following, or send it direct to me and you will receive the official receipt of the Republican National Committee.

Respectfully,

FRED W. UPHAM,
Assistant Treasurer.

Contributions may be sent by check or money order to any of the following named chairmen of the various State finance committees:

Colorado, Hon. Whitney Newton, Denver.
Idaho, Hon. Frank R. Johnson, Wallace.
Illinois, Col. Frederick H. Smith, Peoria.
Iowa, Hon. Lafayette Young, Des Moines.
Kansas, Hon. Frank E. Grimes, Topeka.
Michigan, Hon. John N. Bagley, Detroit.
Missouri, Hon. G. L. Whitcher, 409 North Second street, St. Louis.
Montana, Hon. Thomas A. Marlow, Helena.
Nebraska, Hon. John C. Wharton, Omaha.
New Mexico, Hon. J. W. Reynolds, Santa Fe.
North Dakota, Hon. James A. Buchanan, Buchanan.
Oregon, Dr. H. W. Coe, Portland.
South Dakota, Hon. O. W. Thompson, Vermillion.
Washington, Hon. James D. Hoge, Seattle.

Address all other communications and remittances to the undersigned, Treasurer, 324 Michigan avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

TAFT AND EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.

His Decision in the "Wright Case" Forecasts of Present Humane Statute.

A striking service to humanity which William H. Taft rendered in his judicial career is recalled by Eugene F. Ware, former Commissioner of Pensions, in a letter to the Kansas City Star. Mr. Ware refers to what was known as the "Wright case," which was decided by Judge Taft in 1897. Judge Taft's decision, although overruled by the United States Supreme Court, is really the pioneer of a section of the present employers' liability law, which has passed through the efforts of President Roosevelt and a Republican Congress, and approved April 22, 1908. Judge Taft's decision in the case of a man who, to get his job, had to sign an agreement releasing the corporation employing him from all responsibility for injuries received by him, shall to that extent be void.

A Matchmaking College.

According to president Albert S. Hill of Lebanon University, Ohio, the influence of that institution, since it was founded 82 years ago, has resulted in 10,000 weddings. It is a coeducational school, and Dr. Hill, who has strong faith in the system, says: "We believe that five women will nonplus us at least a hundred men." The institution, which is quite a fourteenth-century place, was conducted for the first five years by a relative of the founder, the patriarch John Dennis, who lived to be a hale, hearty fellow, Alfred Holbrook—Dodge's Weekly.

An Improvement in Girls.

Ten or twelve years ago, when a girl got married, she left such a cost as wedding clothes and expenses that in ordinary-sized families the family was years recovering from it, says the Atchison Globe. Fathers should take off their hats to modern girls. She saves the money to buy her own wedding outfit, and in many cases has a little left over to build a cottage for her husband. We have all a more high opinion of the young woman of 20 years ago than the rising young woman in every young man of that time.

PARTY OF PERFORMANCE.

Republican Organization Fosters All Policies Tending to Make the Country Great and Prosperous.

The Republican is a party of action. It rests upon what it has done, and not upon what it possibly may do in the future. It has fostered everything that has tended to make the country great and prosperous. It has moved with the people. It has kept abreast of the times. It has ever stood ready to modify an old policy or to adopt a new one when the business interests of the country have needed the modification or the change. It has promoted American labor by stringent laws, and then laws it protected the credit and business stability of the country by prompt declaring in favor of a gold standard, and voting it in the statutes. When the time came it promptly acted upon the time and the opportunity to begin the speedy construction of the great Panama canal. It has never hesitated to assume a responsibility. When the crucible in China threatened the interests of America the Republican party resolved to put an end to those atrocities. When trusts sprung up it enacted a law to curb and control those trusts. When consumers were at the mercy of the railroads, it provided for a commission to regulate them. When shippers were oppressed by transportation companies it promptly enacted a rate law. It has met every emergency in war or peace, met it in a wise, prudent and statesmanlike manner. It is progressive when progressive means upbuilding. It is conservative when conservation means the maintenance of peace, order and prosperity. It has been prompt and without haste. CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES.

Democratic Party Cannot Claim Unsullied Virtue as to Source of Its Revenues.

(From Gov. Hughes' Youngstown Speech.)

"Mr. Bryan also has much to say with regard to corrupt methods of campaign expenditures. But he omits to give due credit to the Republican party for what it has accomplished with regard to those important reforms. In an examination of the more noteworthy in the light of Mr. Bryan's referred criticisms of contributions to the campaign funds of the Republican party in New York a Republican Legislature in 1905 passed a statute prohibiting corporations from making any political contributions directly or indirectly, and providing that officers, directors or stockholders participating in or consenting to the violation of the law should be guilty of a criminal offense. Yet I know of no more drastic scheme in this country with regard to the publicity of campaign contributions and for the prevention of corrupt practices than that passed in New York under Republican auspices. These were not promises of an opposition party seeking power, but enactments by a party in power accepting genuine reforms. Proper recognition must, of course, be given to the patriotic Democrats who supported these reforms, but they were enacted by a Republican administration. Congress has also legislated against political contributions by corporations. Further consideration and opportunity for the uncorrupted expression of the popular will is at the foundation of every other reform that is to be certainly safeguarded. And there should be Republican and Democratic proper publicity of and accounting for campaign contributions to secure this result. Let us be honest. But it must fairly be recognized that the attire of virtue will have to be worn by all if we search Mr. Bryan's following we shall find not a few who have strayed, and also those who, if we may judge from their local activities, are still unrepentant. The Democratic party cannot claim unsullied virtue either with regard to the source of its revenues or its readiness to receive them."

Bryan, we learn from a Democratic contemporary, is giving the lions of Tammany a good scare. He, however, never sent anybody out Bryan.—Philadelphia Press.

Mr. Taft says that he stands on his record. No contemporary seems to doubt that. Anybody should be glad to stand on the kind of record he has.—Topeka Capital.

BRYAN AGAINST WOOL GROWERS

Proposed Policies of Democracy Would Wreck Wool Growing Industry.

McKinley was elected through a number of Rocky Mountain states which had voted for Cleveland. These states were Democratic because of the large mining population. They turned to McKinley on account of the severe punishment they had received by protectionists in the free list during the four years of the life of the Wilson Tariff act, which on the theory of free raw material swept away the duty upon wool, and like nearly destroyed the wool growing industry of the United States; and if it had not been saved by the Dingley act, which restored the McKinley duties upon wool, the industry in this line would have been wiped out in the United States. Bryan hopes to carry Wisconsin, which is a wool growing state, and the Rocky Mountain wool growing states which voted for Cleveland the last time. Apparently he expects the wool growers to overlook the fact that the Republican platform expresses and defines protection to American industries, particularly mentioning the former, who is a wool grower.

Bryan's election would be a menace to every industry in the country. The Democratic party has defined its attitude toward wool as a raw material, although it is the finished product of the farmer. It takes a whole year to grow a fleece of wool, and after the waste, where sheep are fed in winter, they are fed corn, which represents labor and high-priced American labor, whereas the competitor of the American wool grower is the wool grower of the Southern Hemisphere (Australasia, the Argentine Republic and South Africa), who has the advantage of present nature, and owing to this advantage, the cost of wool growing is only one half of that of the American wool grower, who, in the states mentioned, have to feed their sheep in the winter.

Another way in which the Democratic wool grower would be by the abolition of the American Woolen Company, which is composed 90 per cent of American wool, on the ground that it is a trust. The American Woolen Company is composed of what were formerly some of the largest mills of the United States, and it is the one concern that would denominate a "trust," and as his platform declares that wherever the products of trusts should be put on the free list, he would destroy the market for the wool growers, and would be left. Then, again, if, in order to strike at the "trust" he should open the gates of "manufacturers of wool," he destroys the other 50 per cent of the independent manufacturers of American Woolen Company, or, in other words, throws the wool growers into the trust. The Bryan policy spells ruin alike to wool growers and wool manufacturers.—American Economist.

Probate Order.

Notice is hereby given that four months from date are allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to said court for examination and adjustment, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said court at a place of hearing, on the 10th day of December, and on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1909, and on Monday, the 5th day of April, A. D. 1909, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

JOHN M. HARRIS, Judge of Probate.

The democratic candidate for governor sarcastically referred to the constitutional revision in the constitutional convention authorizing the legislature to protect women and children at their work as a "little piece of sentiment," and he voted against it. The people of Michigan are just as much engaged in an effort to care for the women and children who have to work in factories and mills and in forest lires of the northern section of our state. Time and money will be expended in this cause. This, they might be referred to as a "little piece of sentiment," but it is the sort of sentiment that keeps the hearts of men and women tender and kindly and gives more sympathy to all their purposes. And that is just as true of the desire which the democratic candidate for governor not only opposed with his vote but sought to prevent through a speech before the convention, and by his reference to it as "a little piece of sentiment."

The democratic candidate for governor was one of the 5 to 4 majority of the constitutional convention who opposed the proposition that the legislature should have power to enact laws relative to the hours and conditions under which women and children may be employed. This proposal was asked for by the labor organizations of Michigan and its value as a justice was recognized by the majority of the members of the constitutional convention. It is a part of the revision that will be voted for at the coming election, but the democratic candidate for governor opposed it by his vote and in a speech before the convention referred to the effort to protect women and children at their employment as "a little piece of sentiment." The people of Michigan will most decidedly disagree with the democratic candidate for governor as to questions of practical value in state management. Protection for the women and children who are employed in factories and mills and stores is far more important than the making of a few miles of good roads, which might require. And it was this protection which Mr. Hemans excusingly referred to as a "little piece of sentiment."

ORGANIZED LABOR SUPPORTS TAFT.

Majority of the Real Leaders and Workers Will Vote for Their Real Friends.

No Longer Any Doubt But That Taft Will Get the Majority of Labor Votes Despite the Demagogitious Fight Made by Gompers in Behalf of the Democratic Bosses.

Leaders of organized labor are supposed to Samuel Gompers in his efforts to deliver the union vote to Bryan, and there is every indication that Taft will get the votes of most laboring men. At least three of the most influential vice-presidents of the American Federation of Labor evidently disagree with Gompers.

One of the men who called on President Roosevelt recently gave assurance that John Mitchell is one for Bryan, as indicated in a telegram alleged to be from him published in the last two days. He denied on authority, said to be that of Mr. Mitchell himself, that the noted labor leader did not write any telegram putting himself in the Bryan column. The telegram is said to be a fabrication.

James Duncan, first vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, next in authority to Gompers and a man of great influence in the organization, has written a letter to Wirts shows elsewhere of the weather heroes, pointedly antagonizing the attitude of Mr. Gompers and asserting that each individual should be allowed to vote without pressure from any one.

Daniel Keefe, sixth vice-president of the federation and president of the Longshoremen's union, is out for Taft and working hard for him. Keefe adviser labor people to vote for Taft. Three of the six vice-presidents under Mr. Gompers are either supporting Taft or are opposing any plan that will place the organization as a body against the Republican nominee. Mr. Keefe said recently:

"Bryan has not been indorsed for president by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. Gompers has merely promised of the Chicago Federation of Labor, which is under the control of Gompers, for his effort to deliver the union labor vote in this campaign. Gompers has not been indorsed for president by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, and the trade unionists are not obliged to contribute to the Democratic campaign fund. Then questions like the attitude of Taft are sufficient to show what is thought of Gompers' efforts.

"Taft has never had disputes for those acts or deed of the Democratic party justifying labor's support, but he has been unable to do that.

"The most delightfully working combination in the United States, Bryan and Hearst, the greatest illiteracy, are all to be found in the Democratic party. Illiteracy is the mainstay of the Solid South. And the Solid South controls the Democratic party.

On behalf of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers a statement has been issued saying: "We want to know if Bryan is for keeps, and Mr. Gompers has publicly chosen to associate himself with men with whose memory part he is quite familiar."

The Atlas (Ill.) Glassblower, organ of the largest union in the American Federation of Labor, has repudiated Gompers as Samuel Gompers, who assumed the union to indorse Bryan for President, and unanimously laid on the table the communication from President Gompers at their business meeting.

The president of Highland lodge, Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers, of Terre Haute, Ind., said his organization cannot join in partisan politics, and that it also turned down an appeal from Gompers sent from American federation headquarters for a contribution to the Democratic campaign fund.

Statements and Even for Taft.

Bryan is not to receive the solid labor votes of Milwaukee. Contrary to the repeated predictions and efforts of Democratic labor leaders there appears to be a big split in the ranks of organized labor, and Taft will receive his due share of votes from the union men. Officers of the most prominent unions in Minneapolis have signed a circular letter declaring they take exception to the methods used by the Bryan element of the organizations, and urging fellow the labor men of the State will exercise their individual rights when voting and will over their fellows for the Republican nominee.

There is every reason to believe that a movement has set in among the laboring classes of Iowa, the workers in the large industrial communities favorable Taft and the Republican ticket not only are the labor leaders active in the campaign were advocating the election of Bryan less active in the support of the Democratic ticket, but many such men prominent but so influential in the councils of the various labor organizations are openly counseling a more cool scrutiny of party promises and records.

August A. Halsitz, secretary of the Central Labor Union of Lexington, Ky., urges his fellows to vote the Republican ticket in order to insure a continuation of prosperity.

LABOR IN DEMOCRATIC STATES.

Coal Miners in Alabama Subjugated Into Cringing Dependencies.

That there's a "left within the left" of the Gompers proposition to deliver the labor vote of the country to Democracy is becoming more apparent when Mr. Stevens and his associates are making special appeals to labor, and refers to the deplorable condition of labor in the Democratic South. Mr. John A. Phelan, for six years president of the Coal Miners' Union, and now one of the national officers of the United Mine Workers' Association, who investigated mining labor conditions in the South, is not so reticent. In a recent address to Local Union No. 97, of Allegheny, he told of persecutions of labor in Alabama where a coal miners' strike was in progress. He is reported as saying: "The miners of Alabama have been subjugated until a majority of them are cringing dependencies at their daily cause of the laboring men of that State were merrily shot down for daring to assert their rights as American citizens. Ninety-six members of the Mine Workers' Association were thrown into jail without having committed any crime other than being members of the organization." Alabama is a state absolutely under control of Bryan Democracy.

TAFT'S SERVICE TO LABOR.

Destroyed the Old English Law Assumption that Union Labor Is a Conspiracy.

(From the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette.

The simple fact is that no man has done more to place union labor on a sound, square, law-abiding, respected footing than William H. Taft by his decisions in labor cases. Both employers and employed have accepted the justice of his decisions and bowed to stable by them, and to-day there is not an intelligent worker or fair minded employer who would seek to abrogate them.

Judge Taft lifted union labor from the doubt and uncertainty as to its status which had been prevalent and gave it a standing which it has ever since retained, and which has proved under his rulings, some value in its attach. The old assumption, derived from England, that union labor is a conspiracy, and that workers could be prevented from leaving railroad or other employment at their will, was swept away forever by Judge Taft so far as the United States is concerned, and when an attempt was made, years later, to revive the principle, Judge Taft's decisions was quoted successfully by the labor side to defeat the plea.

Mr. Taft was and is labor's friend, because he is absolutely just, and would no more permit wrong to be done to the poorest laborer in the land than he would to any one else. And the honest, law-abiding workers make and expects no more than this.

Roosevelt on Taft.

I hope and believe that all the good citizens who wish to see this country prosperous in material things will support Mr. Taft. Not alone do I ask for support for him because he stands for the moral uplift of the nation, because his deeds have made good his words, and because the pull he has shown to which he is committed are of immeasurable consequence to the welfare and interest of the whole American people.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Margery Washburn, who was absent last week on account of illness, is back in school again.

Mr. Woodley visited Mr. Bell, Professor of the Boyne City schools, last Thursday and Friday.

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 21st the high school foot-ball team played some of the old Chatherwix stars and after a very exciting game was defeated 6 to 0.

Last Thursday, Oct. 22, the high school students began work at 8 in order to have all the classes in the morning. In the afternoon the majority of the students attended the Plowing Match out at Marion.

The foot-ball boys went to Petoskey last Saturday in spite of the rain and played the Petoskey high school team. The boys were defeated 9 to 2, after a very close game. The Petoskey team is coming to play here Saturday, on a special train, with three hundred fifty rooters, so everyone should turn out and help Charlevoix win.

The program Monday morning consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Hubbard; piano selection by Miss Clate Pinson and a presentation speech by Mr. H. Lee Iddings, in which he presented to the senior class of '09, a picture of Washington offering his commission at the feet of Columbia.

County Normal.

Ruth Shields was absent from school Thursday of last week.

Savie Sheldon spent Sunday at her home in East Jordan.

Two interesting letters were read to the class from Bessie Cramer and Grace Hesselin. Both are members of last year's class and they are enjoying their work very much.

Miss Fairfield and Miss Lewis spent Sunday in East Jordan, but as the most broken down they could not return as usual Monday morning. Florence Sheldon took charge of Miss Fairfield's room and Josie Donovan caught in Miss Lewis' room.

Thursday afternoon Rev. John Adams visited the Normal. He is a native missionary of Mesopotamia, and he gave the class a very interesting talk about its people. He also wrote a song upon the black-board dictating it to the native language.

Wednesday the Normal class accompanied by Miss Hines and Supt Woodley visited the morning session of the Board of Supervisors. After the Board adjourned candy and nuts were served, which were greatly enjoyed. Several of the county offices were visited and the officers very kindly explained to the class something of the way in which the business of the county is transacted.

Board of Supervisors.

The board of supervisors closed its session last Friday afternoon and adjourned to Jan. 4, 1909. We give a synopsis of the more important transactions:

At the request of the retiring treasurer, D. S. Payton, the board authorized the employment of expert accountant Drescher to audit the books, and Mr. Drescher will do the work soon after Jan. 1st.

The soldiers and sailors' relief commission reported $270.95 expenditures for the year, and $1,064.13 in the treasury.

L. F. Knowles, by invitation of the board gave an instructive talk on the new Constitution.

Charlevoix	$ 120.99

BRIDEGROOM TOO RELIGIOUS.

Wife Gets a Divorce After Five Months of Marriage.

"I was the victim of two match-making families, but it took me only five weeks to get enough of the husband they chose and persuade," said Mrs. Bessie Hasen, who obtained a decree of divorce from her husband in Sioux Falls, S. D., because he was extremely religious. She cited more than the Methodist church rules for me. He gave a third of his income to religion, and I had to suffer the privations incident to it," she said. "But while he argued every night for the soul of his wicked wife and I was just as good as he," Mrs. Hasen will have for her City, where she will meet Gus Westphal. They will be married in St. Paul. The young divorcee attributed much attention by her evangelical wife, which she admitted came to her from her family. Mrs. Hasen was Miss Bessie Hosman of Troy, N. Y., and married John Edward Hasen at Nassau, N. Y., May 13, 1907. Her husband was author of a New York book and is now in business with his father.

LOOTS SAFE; OBTAINS $195,000.

Cuban Official Makes Big Raid on Treasury of Havana.

The following statement has been issued at the palace in Havana: "The professional thieves, in their closing days of its administration, is nothing a third, nigh examination has been working on the disbursements of all departments. Miguel Trelli, secretary of the Department of the Treasury, reported to-day, Magoon Sugar Mayor for the City, that in the last twenty-five years has been treasurer of the local none of Havana, had robbed the safe in the Treasury department of $195,000. The money stolen was in several packages hidden in cell, but several cash deposits in lieu of bonds in notes payable to the owners."

THREATEN ASSAILANT OF BOY.

Greek Peddler's Supposed Effort to Hang Victim Arouses Anger.

Threats were made against George Hayes, 16 years old, held at the Dearborn street station in Chicago, for attempted attempt to hang Eugene O'Brien, 7 years old. Parents were greatly aroused over the affair. The lad was found in a building occupied by Greeks with a rope around his neck and the last barely touch the floor. Hayes was discovered by the rope-hold inside a shop nearby in the Greek. Whole Italian colony is aroused and companions told William Russell and Robert Ignoe of the incident. The Greek peddler, who succeeded the boy of stealing apples.

MESSAGE FROM DR. COOK.

Man Who Accompanied Arctic Explorer Part Way Returns.

The first message from Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer, since he started for the pole from a point north of Etah, Feb. 20, has been received in New York City. It was brought by Hendrik Fosske, who accompanied Dr. Cook on the early stage of his journey and who returned to Etah the explorer by messengers, whom he sent back in the same line of tracks he was sent on his way to the farthest north. The message was written March 17 but, about three weeks after Dr. Cook had started on the last stage of his journey. It was dated "Tuber Sea, north of Cape Holland," and said that up to that point everything had gone well, although the weather was extremely cold. He was making a straight line for the pole at that time, he said, and expected to be back at the base in June or July. "The boys are fine and well, and I have plenty of dogs," Dr. Cook wrote. "I hope to proceed. At any rate, I shall make a desperate effort." Dr. Cook did not reach the base before Fosske started for home, and he used yet have been received from him. Members of the Peary Club and the explorers have been considering for some time the advisability of sending an expedition to search of Dr. Cook. He was the only white man in his expedition. He had a large company of Eskimos and plenty of dogs.

AMERICAN MEAT IS PURER.

Board in Sanitary Finds Less Preservatives in Home Product.

In a report covering analyses of British and American meat foods packed at the local government inspection department of the board of trade, which go far toward discredited falsehoods circulated abroad by the meat trust, Dr. Thomas Stevenson, lecturer of Guy's Hospital, says that the investigation discloses that a large proportion of the meat imported in the United Kingdom is free from the use of preservatives, and that the quantity of boric acid in British meat is not greater than that found in American meat. Of the 1,000 samples of British meat, which underwent analysis, 1,000 samples of British meat, which underwent analysis, 1,000 samples of British meat, which underwent analysis,

Charlevoix Sentinel

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR.

Use Common Sense.

Next Tuesday morning early, every American voter will be called upon to cast his vote. Be sure that you weigh well what is at stake.

The Sentinel is partisan. We acknowledge it. It has been partisan nearly forty years. It will be partisan as long as it lives.

A socialist is partisan! A democrat is partisan! But what are the facts confronting the voter, facts that are the outgrowth of experience and the net results of national progress?

Judge ye! He is a man of deeds, "by their fruits Ye shall know them." He has accomplished something for the betterment of the human race. "His works do follow him."

What policy advocated by Mr. Bryan has not died aborning? Does he tread today any paths that he trod eight years ago? Upon what ground did he stand eight years ago that he occupied twelve years ago? Is he not a man of words instead of deeds, and have his words ever been any benefit to his countrymen?

In county affairs use your common sense and not listen to every disgruntled democrat or socialist who is howling for "a change." Is experience and efficiency of any value to the public service?

Mr. McWain has served but one term as sheriff, and no man alive can tarnish his record. He is entitled to a second term under the time honored precedent. H. A. Emery has served but one term as register of deeds. There has never been an incumbent of that office who has been more efficient or attentive to his duties. Who can say that he is entitled to a second term? Richard Lewis has served as clerk but one elective term, and he has filled it in such a manner as to receive the unqualified endorsement of the board of supervisors and the circuit judge. He is the republican nominee for treasurer. D. S. Payton was nominated for clerk because he has made an ideal county officer. His record is absolutely spotless, and his ability is attested in every volume of record in the treasurer's office. It is indeed a bold man who will question the wisdom of Mr. Nicholas' nomination for prosecutor.

Every man on the republican county ticket has already been declared the choice of a majority of the people of Charlevoix county by an assembly of representative citizens from every township.

Why and by whom?

Who will be elected?

Subterfuge and Deception.

"By them in Charlevoix County a Republican office holder in an executive capacity has failed to do his duty when a case was called to his attention? This talk is the cheapest kind of claptrap! It is the talk of a North side demagog! There are but two officers with executive authority—the sheriff and prosecutor—and, (pardon us for the link) both the sheriff has executive authority except on the initiative of the prosecutor. It is unnecessary to enlarge on this phase of the subject; it is very cheap and very foolish talk.

Here is another from the same paper:

"They (the people) are tired of boss rule. They are getting tired of officials who do not enforce laws. They are tired of being led by the nose every election and told to stand yet and voted men they do not want."

Did you ever read anything that could beat this for effrontery? "Led by the nose!" Do you remember that republican convention? The man who could control that assembly of representative citizens, or even a minority of it, should be entitled to a castle in Europe with Boss Croker.

There sat in that delegate in that convention who voted for a man he did not want! And the Democrat knows it! It is a flat falsehood, and falsehoods never win votes.

The republican county ticket was the choice of a large majority of the people, and that choice was expressed by legally elected delegates from every township, and not by 18 picked-up democrats.

Enter as Register of Deeds.

The democratic candidate for register of deeds, who lives in Boyne City, is making a specially vindictive and personal campaign against his opponent, Mr. Emery.

We have good ground for this: The rest of politics never makes votes. It will result. The register's office has never been a more efficient or courteous official than H. A. Emery.

He has done his work promptly and accurately. He has been at his office when wanted. He has been accommodating to the public.

Pearson and the Fishermen.

W. J. Pearson the nominee for representative has resided here and knows, by actual contact and acquaintance with the fishermen, what legislation is required to promote their interests and at the same time perpetuate the industry upon which they depend for a livelihood.

Mr. Pearson is in touch with the fishermen. He has, in fact, been in touch with them for years; but he knows what they want, and will go to Lansing prepared to protect their interests.

He believes, and so do the fishermen, that the present is not all there is of it. While the pound lifts of today is quite important, the bread and butter of to-morrow is of equal importance.

Hence Mr. Pearson will advocate such measures as will not only protect the fishermen against radical construction of existing laws, but laws that will protect the fish for to-morrow. Mr. Pearson has lived among the fishermen for years, and the knowledge gained in those years will not be lost now.

Bedwin Farm Sold.

An old pioneer farm, located as a homestead more than forty years ago by Robert Redwin, and remaining in the family until now, changed hands last week, when Eugene Redwin sold the old farm to Eveline to Robert Stuart, of Chicago.

The farm lies at the mouth of South Arm, directly opposite Ironton, and is beautifully situated. Mr. Stuart is a wealthy Chicago citizen, and a pioneer member of the Chicago Club, of this city.

He proposes to begin improvements on the place immediately, and although nothing is said about it, it is quite likely that he will make it his summer home.

1. The paint is stuffed out with chalk or something like that.

2. With barytes, better than chalk; doesn't "cover"; you don't know its there.

3. Benzine, or water, in the oil.

4. Too much liquid, whatever it is, for the stuff; paint too thin.

5. Short measure.

Devoe Lead and Zinc Paint is all paint, full measure; lead and zinc, linseed oil, color and turpentine dryer, and nothing else.

W. H. LOWNER DEAD.

Well Known Former Citizen of Charlevoix Died in His Lake Geneva Home.

From the Lake Geneva News

On Oct. 15, 1908 William H. Downer, long and familiarly known to all of our old residents died.

Mr. Downer was born at Racine, Wis., on April 22, 1844. When he was about one year old his parents removed from Racine and settled on what is now the James Charles farm in Bloom Prairie, where Mr. Downer lived until he was 38 years old.

He came to Lake Geneva in February of 1883 and has since called this city his home, although away most of the time on business, since the fall of 1882 when he went to Northern Michigan, being engaged as a purchasing agent for E. E. Ayer and other parties in the railroad tie, telegraph pole and tan bark business. While thus engaged he was struck with paralysis Nov. 7, 1896 and has been a constant sufferer and wholly incapacitated from work since that time to the day of his death.

To those who remember his jolly good natured disposition, it may be interesting to know he preached his pleasant and agreeable manner in spite of his sufferings, which sometimes were intense, and was always patient and hopeful under the most trying experiences. This long illness

Spawn Fishing for Charlevoix.

Frank N. Clark, of Northville, in charge of U. S. fish hatcheries in this state, was in the city yesterday to inaugurate the annual work of the local hatchery and arrange for the fall spawn harvest.

We take great pleasure in being able to announce that the work this year will be fully as large as last season and possibly longer, as Mr. Clark has orders to secure 100,000,000 eggs, and 75,000,000 must come from Charlevoix and St. Joseph, the remainder from Manistique. This is three times as many eggs as have been taken any previous year in this territory.

Mr. Clark, who vividly remembers past depletions, has imposed certain regulations and restrictions to be observed to the letter. Any fisherman violating these regulations will be cut out and reported to the game warden.

Mr. Clark will be square with the fishermen, but the fishermen must be square with him. We quote Supt. Clark's exact words.

This change in and enforcement of the work means to the Charlevoix applied of industrial activity during a season that is usually governed by reverse conditions, and it should be appreciated by those who are the chief beneficiaries.

Would Mortgage the Farm.

A farmer on Rural Route 2, Hopkins, W. A. Pond by name, says of "Buckton's Arnica Salve cured the two great sores I ever had, one on my hand and one on my leg. It is worth its weight in gold. I would not be without it if I had to mortgage the farm to get it." Only 25c at F. E. Hicks & Co's drug store.

Letter From John Lynn.

FRIEND WILLARD:

I am now well started on the construction of the rustic bridge at Mr. August A. Busch's historical Grant's Farm. My material arrived just in time to cause no delay. The foundation work being completed in the meantime.

The bridge will, however, only be one of a number of structures which I am to put up for Mr. Busch, although it will be the largest and most elaborate one. Mr. Busch has placed the entire arrangement in the hands of myself and his landscape gardener, Mr. Jensen, who is known to you from his stay with me a few weeks ago at Charlevoix.

The work here is a work of pleasant nature, Mr. Jensen and I are working in perfect harmony, with one object in view, viz: to make the work original, and fitting as to position, and I certainly am very thankful for the many courtesies extended to me, both from Mr. August A. Busch and Mr. Jensen.

Your friend,
J. A. LYNN.

Double Attraction.

At the Charlevoix Theatre next Tuesday evening, Nov. 3. The first and big one will be "Quincy Adams Sawyer," one of the finest plays ever given in Charlevoix.

Nearly 4,000 people saw the play in Saginaw last week. Don't miss this splendid opportunity of seeing the town-known that we visit Northern Michigan this season.

The second attraction will be the Electric Fountain given after every act. Light hot off the wires from Maine to California. The opera house will remain open until Tuesday elected.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Council Chambers, Oct. 22, 1908.

At a meeting of the common council for the City of Charlevoix, the following aldermen were present:—Winton, Swinton, Glassford, Smith, Gelken. Mayor presiding.

The Council having under consideration the matter of contract between the City and Mr. Hosie for the purchase of a street sprinkler, and the sprinkler properly, as called, delivered to the City of Charlevoix, and the same found to be satisfactory.

Whereas the terms of the second part of said contract have been complied with by the said Hosie, and the said sprinkler has been called for by said contract to be executed by the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, and George W. Hosie, of Chicago, Illinois.

Therefore be it Resolved, That the mayor be and is hereby authorized, and directed to issue warrants duly countersigned by the City Clerk, payable to the order of said Hosie, for the sum of Seven Hundred Dollars, payable each month for seven months, the first payment to be on and after the month of November, 1908, and the remaining six to be paid Feb. and Commencing the month of the year following the payment of the first payment, and the remaining payments to be made on the first day of each month thereafter, and also upon the presentation of the proper vouchers for the said Hosie, and Commissioner of Public Works, Charlevoix, Michigan, and the said bills of vouchers and receipts being thereon filed in the City Clerk's office.

Moved by Glassford that the Mayor be authorized to sign the contract for the purchase of the sprinkler, and the City Clerk be authorized to affix the seal of the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, and John M. Gelken, Mayor, Chas. H. Peabody and George R. Glassford, Aldermen, Winton, Swinton, Smith, Gelken, Mayor.

FIRE MENACES TIMBER SUPPLY.

So F. W. Weyerhauser Tells Congressional Pulp Committee.

Congressman Fitzgerald, accompanied by the other officials who comprise the congressional committee which has been in Northern Minnesota for ten days investigating the effect of the tariff, arrived in St. Paul the other day to confer with the governor. The visitor stopped at the capitol long enough to inspect the pulp manufacturing business of the country. The committee visited ex-President F. W. Weyerhauser, the north-northwestern lumber man, in his office and expressed him as to the knowledge of standing timber and the Canadian situation. Mr. Weyerhauser said that the only way to preserve the timber supply of Canada was to prevent fires. Asked as to the future supply of timber in the United States he said that there was a immense stock of timber in the far West, from where it would come from in the future.

"BRAIN STORM" INSANE DEFENSE

Slayer of Annie Will Seek to Prove Insanity When He Hides.

Tomorrow will be the one delegate of Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., U. S. A., in which William A. Annis of the Philippine Varsity club hailing last August by the Sergeant at Hazing in Hughes Hall. Judge Charlemon overruled the demurrer relied by counsel for the defense in the case of Lieut. F. Jenkins Hains, brother of the captain, when set up the claim that the indictment was defective in that it charged Hains, both as principal and accessory before the fact. Jenkins Hains was then called to the bar and pleaded not guilty. John F. McIntyre of counsel for the defense entered a plea of not guilty for Capt. Hains and the court ordered that at the time of the killing of Annie Capt. Hains was insane. The prosecuting Attorney offered no objection to the plea.

FATHER NO FASHION DICTATOR.

Court Holds that Daughter May Wear Ket Over Her Hair.

Husbands have no right to dictate what the children shall wear. Val Hildebrand of Cleveland found this out when his wife complained to Judge Kennedy Tuesday that he had attempted to prevent his daughter, Viola, 17, from wearing a net over her hair. Mrs. Hildebrand also charged that her husband had used his office in an effort to force obedience to an order, coupled with threat of an assault and battery charge. Hildebrand really consented to allow his wife to change the household. Perhaps he persuaded the couple to forgive and forget.

BLUEGRASS HURL IN RIOT.

Attempt to Mauve an Arrest in the Greek Colony Causes Uprising.

Twenty-five men and women and two policemen were injured in St. Louis, early Saturday, in a riot that followed the arrest of William Sorolis on a charge of stabbing. The trouble took place in the Greek colony at Second and Pine streets. The men insisted that the two policemen release their prisoner. The officers fired into the crowd, but this did not stop the onslaught. Finally a riot call was sounded and reinforcements arrived and the rioters were dispersed. A dozen Greeks were arrested.

INDIANS KILL GAME WARDEN.

Boy and Squaws Shoot State Officer While He Fights Braves.

Game Warden W. F. Scott and Deputy Warden Henry A. Wass have arrived at Missoula, Mont., with the body of Deputy Game Warden Charles S. Dyson, who was killed in a fight with Indians Sunday in the Sanpoil River country while attempting to arrest them for breaking the State game law. Herman Hallock, a much hated Kootenai Indian by a shot in his breast. Dyson fell from the canoe, when the deputy warden was shot by a 12-year-old Indian boy who had killed the bosses of the outfitter and was entered in Dyson, and by squaws. When Dyson into the Indians they were under arrest, one of the squaws grabbed his gun. Dyson shook him off and refused all to be peaceful. Another Indian then entered a war whoop, aimed his rifle and was about to shoot, when Dyson shot the Indian. Two other squaws attempted to get their guns from the deputy, but Dyson killed his Indian. Judgh then saw his little Indian boy kneeling between the squaw and aiming at Dyson, who fired at the redskin at the same moment that the latter fired at the officer. Dyson was mortally wounded and the Indian he toppled over dead. Squaws later aided Peter's surviving Indian and a dozen shots from small rifles pour. All the mountain passes are being guarded for the Indians, who have with them the bodies of their braves.

500 FILIPINOS DEAD IN FLOOD.

Cagayan Valley Devastated and Chaina Rage Among Refugees.

Belated reports indicate that the storm of Oct. 12 in the Cagayan valley, Luzon, P. I., has been worse than at first. Five within the memory of living inhabitants of the valley, which is 150 miles long and 50 wide, 500 Filipinos are known to have perished, and 1,000 are missing. It is feared that the number of dead will reach 2,000. The loss of property is so great that rains throughout the valley and in the mountains. The rice crop is ruined and in many places rice is a bright of Tuve Hard, sleeping the river front, and the plant of the Empire Ropes Company were destroyed. LITTLE FREE LAND IS LEFT.

The report of the commissioner of the general land office shows that at the close of the fiscal year there were not 86,330 acres of unappropriated public domain in the State, only this small area remaining to be homesteaded, out of the total area of 44,115,200 acres, and as uncultivated stretches, and sandbeds are included it is readily to seen that the opportunity for securing government land in Oklahoma is very small. So great has been the demand for homes in the State that only in the twenty-six public land States of the nation Oklahoma have unappropriated land greater in area than Oklahoma. Kansas, Alabama, Florida, Michigan and Louisiana each have over twice as much unappropriated land as Oklahoma; Arkansas has over 1,000,000 acres more, and Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota and Washington have over 2,000,000 each, while South Dakota has 7,000,000 thousand, Colorado 24,000,000, Idaho and California 30,000,000, Wyoming 35,000,000, Montana 45,000,000, and Nevada 61,000,000 acres of land subject to homestead or mineral entry.

STATES TO FIGHT NIGHT RIDERS.

Conference of Governor Planned to Concert Measures.

A conference of the Governors of the tobacco and cotton growing States, in which eight others have been represented, will probably be held shortly after the election for the purpose of conferring measures to abate the evil, which, starting in Kentucky and Tennessee, has so rapidly spread and found lodgment in other States. The suggestion that the conference be held came from Gov. Patterson of Tennessee and originated in the recent outrage at Hopkins Lake, Ky., where, as has been published, the night riders staged such a conference, and his suggestion was brought to the attention of Gov. Willson of Kentucky by a telegram from the Governor of New York, who is for the conference probably will be held in a few days, meeting a date in November subsequent to the election. The Governors of the following 16-one-and possibly others—will be asked to attend: Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

The film transcontinental Monday reached Medicine Hat, Sask., from the East Saturday morning. Rides go in from the District south stretching to the United States border, with fearful tales of hardships endured by the storm. William Mitchell after riding since Wednesday just reached the city from his ranch, 40 miles south, and reported the sad news of fatality as a result of the recent blizzard. Donald Cameron, sheep herder, with two others, were caught in the storm. They were forced to leave their sheep to perish and seek safety themselves. Cameron, however, became exhausted and died. After being sixty hours without sleep or nourishment the other men received a stack in safety. It is feared that many other herders have met similar fate. A band of 2,000 sheep were driven by the storm into Many Islands Lake and only 200 were saved.

EARN $15 OR AVOID MARRIAGE.

Harvard Expert Says Family Cannot Be Brought Up on Less in Cities.

Thomas Nixon Carver, professor of economics at Harvard university, in an article printed the other day says it is not in the interest of society or the betterment of the race that men who cannot earn $15 a week should try to marry and bring up a family in a place like Boston. When a man can earn more than $15 a week bring children into the world, the chances are that the children will be like them, he says. There will thus be a large supply of qualified laborers to record the market and make conditions worse for the superior laborers. He advocates the adjustment of the labor question and the exclusion of the excess from the labor market.

The sentence charge was "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in violation of the sixty-second article of war." It was found that Leibrandt ate the green apples after having received a lawful order from a sergeant to throw them away. Leiber will serve his sentence at Fort Myer, Va.

ARMY OF UNEMPLOYED.

London, Oct. 16.—Thousands are losing their work. Redundant capital flies idle or at the unprofitable interest of one per cent. Technical time is late at the season when employment should be at its best. The distress is most marked in the shipbuilding and iron industries. Unprecedentlie freights account for 14 per cent of the tonnage of ships laid up last week, making the total 34 or 200,000 tonnage. In shipbuilding only 35,000 are employed, compared with 45,000 one last year.

Henry Lennox, president of the North of England Iron and Steel Trades Confederation Board, declared that he could not remember trade so dull for 30 years, except in 1886. The Mersey docks are full of idle ships, seamen and there are thousands of sailors without ships, while 200 ships of sailors are walking the streets instead of the normal 50 or 60 out of employment. Pens, there are 7,000 dockhands are without work.

The Glasgow Distress Committee estimates that last winter 40,000 heads of families will require providing for, but funds are exhausted. Eight shipyards are without work. Shipbuilders are the biggest sufferers. Shipbuilders are the biggest sufferers. The advancement cost of production and the shrinkage in freights.

At Manchester the engineering and shipbuilding trades are in a very bad state. The workmen number 15,000. The Boilermakers' Trade Union reports about 10,000, or 20 per cent, unemployed, mainly due to the shipbuilding trade depression, intensified by the engineering dispute on the northeast coast of England. The prospect for the immediate future is very bad, as uneasiness is widespread upon the ship building trade.

PAPER MADE OF CORN STALKS

Government Chemists Find a Substitute for Wood Pulp.

The chemists of the Department of Agriculture believe they have solved the problem of cheaper paper than will do some alloy-ether with the use of wood fiber. The new material is the ordinary corn stalk and the cost of the new paper experiment chemists predict, when the manufacture of the new kind of paper is started on a large scale it will be less 50 per cent cheaper than the print paper now made from wood pulp. It also will not so rail to the danger of a pulp famine, which already has begun to assume serious proportions. Experiments in paper in the cutting down of forests, and the increased demand for wood of the spruce tree caused by the growth in newspapers all over the world have threatened to exhaust all the world's supply of paper material.

Many experiments have been made to discover some other material to replace the wood pulp. Some 5,000 different materials have been tested, but vainly. The chemistry bureau of the Department of Agriculture has been one of the most active workers in this matter for years, but not until this week have the experts been so publicly successful as to permit any announcement. The first practicable substitute for wood pulp ever made was manufactured by Dr. H. S. Bristol and his assistants. He threw the result of his experiments to the point of making the paper in five minutes. The white paper is made from the hard outside shell of the stalk and the yellow pith from the stalk. The yellow grades have much longer fiber and consequently will last from five years, making a date in November subsequent to the election. The first copies of the following 16-one-and possibly others—will be asked to attend: Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

APPLE CROP 25,000,000 BARRELS.

If the apples harvested in the commercial orchards of the United States this year were converted into cider there would be 6,250,000,000 of them, which, at the average yield of 4 gallons to a barrel, would make a yield of almost 925,000 gallons. The total yield would be 25,000,000 of barrels, or 100,000,000 bushels of pounds of dried and other ingredients in the popular American dessert. For the approximate yield of the 1907 crop of apples we should be required.

Twenty-five million barrels, or 62,500,000 bushels is the estimated yield this season, according to reports received by Harry C. Neely, secretary of the national apple show of Spokane, from the fruit growers operating in the various sections in the union. The returns show that while drought, excessive rains and pests reduced the yield in many districts in the middle western, eastern and several southern States, the entire crop is fully as large as in 1907, and will be better distributed. Prices also are higher than last year.

THE GRANGE NAME.

An Influential Factor in Business and Legislation.

National Master Bachelder's Warning to Those Who Would Benefit by the Grange Name in Enterprises Outside the Grange.

In his department in the National Grange organ in a recent number National Master Bachelder remarks that, as the grange is fast becoming an influential factor in social, educational and financial affairs and also in legislative affairs, both state and national, the fair name of our organization must be protected. There is and will continue to be in days, great effort made by people with naves to sell and legislative matters to promote, to avoid by use the Word grange in the name adopted to designate their business or scheme in order to deceive the people and draw support to the enterprises by causing them to be known as grange enterprises. There is absolutely no justification for this unless the grange or some committee appointed by the grange has absolute authority in the management.

To be more specific, we may say that an agricultural fair should not be known as a grange fair unless its management is in the hands of the grange or has been specifically indorsed by the grange having jurisdiction. A store should not be known as a grange store unless conducted by the grange or giving special rates to members of the grange through grange authority. A paper has no real authority for the use of the word grange in its title unless its policy is directed by the organization, but grange departments in papers designed for other fields do not come within this restriction, for they simply contain grange news and do not carry any policy or responsibility of the grange. The use of the word grange in the title of banks without a controlling interest in such banks being in the hands of directors chosen by the grange, whereby special privileges would be secured to members of the grange, is an unauthorized and improper use of the fair name of the grange.

Other business might be cited in which wrong impressions are conveyed and the name of the grange placed in great jeopardy by the use of its name. In a word, the name of our organization should be restricted by action of the national grange to such enterprises as at least have their policies dictated and their affairs directed by members of the grange in some official capacity, for any other course in case of disaster would bring merited odium upon us, even though we have no opportunity to prevent such disaster. We do not undertake to say that an agricultural fair, store, paper or bank using the same grange in its title should necessarily be financed by the organization, but we do most emphatically assert that the use of the name carries with it or should carry with it the authority to dictate the policy and direct its general management.

Reading—"Two Thoughts," by Whittier.
Paper—"History of Thanksgiving Day."
Discussion—"The Story of Thanksgiving Day."
Short Talks—What has our grange to be thankful for?
Song—"The Sweet Sky and Thy Home."

A Grange a Hundred Years Old.

A memorial event which took place at Orion, Mich., last month was the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Ann Cherry Stevens, a charter member of Oxford grange. Over 1,000 people assembled to pay tribute to the venerated sister. Congressman Smith was one of the speakers on the occasion and reminiscences that had taken place during the grange proceedings. The subject was the administration of twenty-four of our twenty-six presidents.

The Work in Connecticut.

State Master L. H. Healy says that the grange work in Connecticut since Jan. 1 has been on the "jump." Ten granges have been reorganized and four new ones organized, with a total increase of membership of about 1,200. Special work in that state has been going on since the time of essays, and a committee has been appointed to investigate the subject in all its details. The field meetings are reported as the most successful ever held.

New Hampshire grange recently tried to determine "the value of a kicker in the world's progress." There were no kicks to that question than would appear on the surface.

Gilman grange of Exeter, N. H., observed its thirty-fifth anniversary on Oct. 5. An address was given by National Master Bachelder.

A Matchmaking College.

According to president Albert S. Hill of Lebanon University, Ohio, the influence of that institution, since it was founded 52 years ago, has resulted in 10,000 weddings. It is a coeducational school, and Dr. Hill, who has strong faith in the efficacy, says: "We believe that five women will bunk one at least a hundred men." The institution, which is quite a flourishing one, has been conducted for its entire term by a lady, Jennie Dodge Hall, president. Atlanta Constitution—Louisville Courier-Journal.

STATE LECTURERS' WORK.

The advantages of getting grange work upon a thoroughly systematic basis, so that exactly what is being done can be positively known and definitely recorded, is shown in Massachusetts, where the state lecturer, Charles M. Gardner of Westfield, has so systematized the work done during the lecture hour that at the end of the year a complete total can be drawn off exactly as the large business concern draws off its annual balance sheet for the inspection of its stockholders.

This result is made possible by a carefully prepared report system whereby every subordinate and Pomona lecturer in the state sends to the state lecturer once in three months a complete summary of all lecture hour work. In that grange, how many people helped do it and how many persons attended the meetings. At the end of the year the entire work of each grange in the state is summarized and shown on a large chart that is exhibited at the annual state meeting. By this system the astonishing fact was brought out of last year's work that over 40,000 persons had contributed something to the lecture hour programmes in Massachusetts and that the total grange audience of the year was 245,000 persons.

This system affords more than a mere record of results. It provides the means of competition one year with another; it furnishes every three months a correct idea of how each grange is getting along, whether holding its own or not; it also gives the local lecturer added reason for urging his members to do their best in order that that grange shall make the best possible showing on the year's chart at the state meeting. A record is also kept of the meetings held throughout during the year, and this also is presented to the state meeting to show about what those grange thoughts being especially directed, while the distinct grange efforts in behalf of town improvement, good citizenship, better schools and other matters of civic betterment are carefully recorded.

Few people realize the power of the grange organization or the influence that it is exerting along such a variety of important lines every year. Such a system as that in vogue in Massachusetts, which gives the actual and easily understood figures the total work done in a state during a year, aids greatly in bringing a realization of the magnitude of the work and influence of the Order not merely to those not identified with it, but even to its own members who do not always appreciate the scope and power of the Order of which they are a part.

GRANGE CO-OPERATION.

A Profitable Business Enterprise at Vineland, N. J.

Vineland grange of New Jersey, in connection with the Farmers' Club and Fruit Growers' union, formed an association about six years ago under the name of the Grange Co-operative society. Nine directors were chosen as a board of managers. Persons became members by buying stock at $5 per share, but twenty-five of the members must be Patrons. In July, 1904, a grange store was opened, which carried a full line of groceries, feed, etc. The co-operative plan provided for the payment of 5 per cent on each stockholder's interest in the concern at the end of the year; also such a percentage on all goods bought purchased as his sales would allow after paying the expenses. All sales must be for cash. The business amounts now to over $20,000 a year. Last April the store building was burned, and a new one is now being erected. This will contain a grange hall with all modern improvements. The membership of this Hesperian grange is 304. It has become one of the most popular societies in Vineland.

Connecticut Farmers Helped Celebrate.

The farmers of Connecticut took a prominent part in the bridge celebration at Hartford. The grange features of the parade were a loaded car containing the officers in full regalia and a float representing colonial agriculture drawn by three yoke of oxen, followed by floats representing Pharr, Pomona and Ceres. A big automobile truck loaded with farm products, every of the latest pattern was lost in the shuffle. The salmon drawing these various floats were blanketed and marked "Connecticut [illegible]."

Pushing the Work.

The work of organizing new granges will be pushed with vigor after the Election is over. State Master Godfrey of New York state will put out one or two special organizing deputies in the field. State Master Pierce of Vermont has also resolved on the revival of his committee has been appointed to investigate the subject in all its details. The field meetings are reported as the most successful ever held.

A Novel Meeting.

The grange located at Swanney, N. H., recently had a novel meeting. The admission was 7 cents, and every person present was charged the value of a kicker in the world's progress." There were no kicks to that question than would appear on the surface.

A Husband's Gift.

Nearly every grange in New Hampshire has purchased a flag for its hall, as a vote passed at the last session of the state grange requested.

An Improvement in Gifts.

Ten or twelve years ago, when a man was married she felt such a gift for washing clothes and expenses that it usually took the family six years to recover from it, says the Atlanta Constitution. Fathers should take off their coats to the sheriff, and raise the money to buy her one wedding outfit, and in many cases has a time left to help in buying things for her new home. The matter did not seem to be an improvement over the young woman of 20 years ago than the modern young man is over young men of that time.

Delegates to Pomona.

In one of the Pomona grange meetings held recently in New York state a resolution was adopted to the effect that Pomona meeting a delegated body, that is, delegates were to be elected by the subordinate granges in proportion to their membership. There was some doubt about the constitutionality of this proceeding, and the state master, in commenting, he advised that the Pomona is not a congressional body and cannot be made such without amending the constitution. This item may be of interest to other granges in the state.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE GRANGE

The Next Annual Meeting to Be Held at Altoona in December.

The next annual meeting of the Pennsylvania state grange will be held in Altoona in December. The full convention will be held for a term of two years. State Master Hill is working hard to make the membership of that state 100,000. In a recent address he said:

"Among the fraternal organizations there is none more potent than the grange. It came into existence forty one years ago to fill a want. It continues to live and gain in strength and influence because it meets the social, educational, political and financial needs existing throughout the country today. Farmers in Pennsylvania rely upon the grange now as never before, and this nonpartisan, nonsectarian organization never hesitating to assume leadership for the betterment of farm conditions and the development of strong rural citizenship."

A correspondent writing of grange work in Pennsylvania says that the grange is making very satisfactory growth in that state. Since the last state grange meeting twenty-one new granges have been organized and six dormant ones reorganized and one Pomona organized. The initiations in the old granges are fully equal to any period during the year. He further adds:

"We are a good deal worked up over the question of representation in the national grange, and so we are at the arbitrary way in which the national grange authorities dictate as to what the Order shall be planted and where not. That states which do not have as many granges in them all told as we have organized there the 1st of January ought to have the benefit of grange meeting and have as much to say as we do, I do not understand myself. If the Order is to continue to grow in this state there must be justice done. If the strong states will stand together in the matter it can be done peacefully. The fact is it must be done and all sooner those who stand in the way become confused of that fact the better."

NEW YORK GRANGES.

Some Newsy Notes of the Work in the Empire State.

There are eight parent granges in the state. There should be more.

In the thirty-five subordinate granges of Oswego county the lecturer's office is twenty-seven is held by a woman.

At the "old home" celebration in Middletown, N. Y., Walkill grange won the first prize, $50, for the best decorated float; Wawayanda the second, $30; Goshen the third, $20.

"The Old Mill Stream" is the title of a new comedy drama, written by Harry M. Doty, formerly a member of Silas Cantham (N. Y.) grange, now editor of a live weekly in Connecticut. It has just been published by J. W. Darrow of Chatham, N. Y.

George P. Hampton of New York, who as a member of the grange did so much to bring about the anti-oleo legislation, is to have a large exhibit of appliances for making imitated alcohol at the meeting of the national grange in Washington in November.

Recently a man went through the town of Farmington, N. Y., selling 3-tied Wave wheat for seed at $5 a bushel. The price usually asked for such bushels. At a meeting of Farmington grange it was brought out that the wheat which could be bought of any dealer for $1.75. Many farmers and members of the Order were victimized.

Neighbors' Night in the Grange.

Where granges are conveniently located one to another it may be well for them to exchange programmes occasionally—that is, a programme prepared at one grange may be given at a neighboring grange and the exchange be made of mutual interest. Occasional debates between neighboring granges are also interesting and profitable.

Washington State Grange.

Washington state grange is showing what an earnest organization can do in securing the enactment of laws for the establishment of direct primaries, the Pomona lecturer's office and an appropriation of $10,000 for farmers' institutes.

For the information of inquirers it may be stated that in the absence of the master of the grange the overseer of a year ago acts as master and is presiding has all the prerogatives of the office.

A Worthy Exhibit.

There have been numerous grange exhibits at county fairs this season, and it is a good sign. Perhaps one of the most interesting of these was at the Hudson fair, Columbia county, when Hudsonvale grange of Kinderhook exhibited 101 varieties of fruits, vegetables, grains, flowers, honey and jellies. They exhibited 50 varieties of apples, 10 of grapes, 12 of pears, 27 of vegetables, 17 of flowers and 17 of canned fruits. This grange won the first prize of $40. Germantown grange exhibited 124 varieties, of which 64 were varieties of pears and 22 of grapes, and won $30. Claverack grange exhibited 77 varieties, among which were 19 varieties of cucumbers, 16 of beets and 15 of trees. Livingston grange had 37 varieties, between two granges were awarded $10 more.

The Easy Exchange.

Two or three of the subordinate granges at least have established recently what is called an "easy exchange." Instead of spending the time usually allotted for a lecture hour in the grange meetings are written and read to other granges that may be in need of such material. The idea is a good one, and yet the easy exchange should not be allowed to take the place of essays or papers written by members of the grange. If, however, the letter may be commended, and essays which it brings may be of a character worth to help out a programme where there is a lack of such, or where non-writers qualified to prepare papers.

Free Use for Direct Primaries.

German (N. Y.) Pomona grange met Oct. 5 with an attendance of about 200. The subordinate granges of that Pomona have a total membership of 2,228. The following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That we demand direct voting at the primaries and by direct our delegates at the next state convention to do all in our power to elect the passage of a law providing for direct primaries. The next meeting will be held at Batavia on Dec. 17.

Union Grange at Fairmount.

Union grange at Fairmount, N. Y., held its first fair on the 5th October. It was a great success. A fair took rank with the largest fairs in the state outside of the state, and exceeded them in the department of working men and women. The total receipts were over $700, of no other fair in New Orleans exceeded. Twenty-seven cattle as was shown at the fair.

Can't Miss It
So many ailments are purely nervous affections, that you can hardly miss it if you try Dr. Miles' Nervine. It restores nervous energy—and through its invigorating influence upon the nervous system, the organs are strengthened and the heart action is better; digestion improved, the sluggish condition overcome, and healthy activity re-established.
Miles' Nervine is worth its weight in gold to me, says Mrs. Ella Ewing, Ashley, Ind. I was a great sufferer from nervous prostration, sleeplessness, worry, etc., for years. I was nearly crazed with pain in my head. I took the best Doctors' medicine, but it did me no good. I read of the wonderful cures of Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nervine Pills, and decided to try them. I am now well and happy. I can't say too much in praise of Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nervine Pills.

CHAPTER II.

Mr. Smith's remarks were interrupted, as the narrative has been, by the old sailor always interrupted, by the cry of—

"Sail-ho!"

The lookout aloft on the frigate were kept constantly on the watch for just such the lookout. If the St. Lawrence did not catch anything, it would not be the fault of her captain. So soon, therefore, as the approaching sail had been sighted, she was recognized as a small lugsail schooner, just the size and description of the Dutch.

Inasmuch as it was highly improbable that any vessel of that size, or in such a small vessel, would be in those waters in this time, certainly not heading towards the open sea, it was more than likely that the sail sighted was the Dutch. Flight by the Patriot had been the revenue cutter Aiken, a very well, pretty and fast craft, although she was not a steamer, the Commodore's land determined to risk her on a cruise. That the St. Lawrence a heavy old fifty-gun frigate, would overhaul the Dutch, smuggling schooner was an impossibility.

Commodore Paulding, a resourceful and serious, had been considering the matter for some time. He was the flag officer in charge, and he had determined to effect by strategem what he could not hope to do, compliant by any other means. Happening to be on deck when the sail was reported, as soon as, through the officers whom he had sent aloft for the purpose, he had verified the report that indicated that she was the Patriot he resolved to run away!

Feeling sure that his great ship must have been observed from the small schooner, Commodore Paulding brought his trap to the mizzen mast and ordered the struck off at a broad angle from his forward course, leaving the flag officer in charge, to the great astonishment of officers and crew, the frigate sailing away from the schooner, which immediately changed her course so as to keep directly in the rear of the frigate.

"What's all this, anyway, sir?" growled old Bob Stanlin, chief boatswain's mate, "Here we are, after two months out, with not a shot or prize money in our locker! Ar' the fust time we raises a sail we ar' off an' give a chase, an' we turn round an' run away from her?"

"The commodore's orders were very promptly obeyed, for the men were in no mood to be crossed, the guns were loaded, and secured inboard, the port shutters were dropped, the sponges for the gun muzzles lightly chaked, the men, every a few necessary hands, were aloft below. The commodore and his aides on the poop deck watched the sweep and rigging, the yards were braced in and sock-billed slightly, and in a twinkling little ways and intelligible to any but practiced, trained observers the frigate was made to give the appearance of a lumbering old merchantman. Cheering for that he was not being overhauled so rapidly as he wished, the captain got out drags astern, which actually decreased the speed of his ship. He told the helmsman not to keep her hard up in the breeze, or to let her go off to leeward gradually. They everybody knew what was intended.

The manœuver—the ruse, rather—was carried out to perfection. The frigate was manned by a body of experienced sea-officers, who knew just what was required of them, and, seeing the old St. Lawrence in leadering away from them, apparently making every effort to escape her, they worked with the celerity and precision in the execution that a rich, old fashioned Dutch Indiaman, or East India ships at that time carried single trigged yards—was made for the lading. They ran and all on their little schooner, therefore, and drove rockbaby after the flying Patriot!

There was a long twenty-four pounder mounted on the Patriot's forecastle and two smaller guns, six pounders, in broadside. Under the circumstances, the chase was neither a long nor a stern one. Before running the Patriot had been within range of the frigate. Not a gun could be seen on the St. Lawrence's side, for the port lids were down. Those after were in their cabin stores and were stowed with sails and loads, the merchantman. Hanging along to windward of the chase as the Patriot did, there was nothing to be seen of the main deck of the vessel, anyway, on account of her heavy bulwarks. Confident of their prey, the men on the lurked and waited for the proper the long Tom forward quite after the manner of the old-time privateer, and sent a shot sharp across the forefoot of the unexpected prey.

No attention whatever was paid to this threat by the Patriot, however, and when it was repeated, although the ball came perilously near to hitting the mark of the Dutch, the sail continued aloof. By this time the Patriot was well abeam and slightly on windward of her supposed prey. Her men must have been a very jumpy lot, for at this time, they should have been impossible to escape the conclusion that they had a huge, old-fashioned man-of-war under their lee. Possibly they had so accurately described the idea that they were chasing a merchant man in the guise of that portrait that their judgment was blinded. At any rate, the Patriot, confident of success, put up her helm and swooped down towards the frigate. The people of the latter saw a gunner stand at by naught. Huge black guns thrust their nozzles out over the side of some of those speaking pretty rude to a purpose. Two heavy forts from long thirty-two of the main battery, fired through the hapless Confederate cruiser. An eight-inch shell from the mizzen gun exploded just as it struck the Patriot's side, leaving a hole big enough to drive a wagon through. The schooner was a total wreck, shivered, splintered and cut to less than four minutes. The St. Lawrence stopped firing immediately she saw the plight of the privateer and lowered her boats. She had barely reached the Patriot when she went down, carrying a number of her crew with her. The rest were brought back to the frigate, and the lost prisoners of her officers and men. It was a huge sea joke, this the capture of that crazy pilot-vessel in the war. Unfortunately, while the Patriot's men had sold out for a fight, they had not thought it did not necessarily prove to them.

The captured Confederates who were mustered over the side of the frigate were found to be quite numerous. Are one member of the St. Lawrence's "re who suffered any hardship in the battle was Lieutenant Thomas Beckman Smith, who had got away in the first boat dispatched to succor the sinking Confederate privateer. Just as he was about to shove off out of her off-side darted across the deck and threw something overboard. Smith could swear that it was a bag. An object flow through the air near his head he saw that it was a mail bag. Too late to scan the man, he promptly dived for it, and by great good fortune caught it and sank below the surface of the water. Although Smith's transaction figure, he handed it to Commodore Paulding at the quarterdeck, and he was the only one who had to change his clothes.

The mail bag was a treasure trove, indeed. Shortly afterwards Lieutenant Smith was called to the cabin, where old Commodore Paulding, in the consultation with his secretary. There was an open letter addressed to the Confederate Navy.

"Mr. Smith," he began formally, "your quickness of thought and promptness of action, which I desire to commend, have been a great service."

"Thank you, sir."

"I have examined the letters taken from the mail bag. Most of them are personal and of no importance to us, but one, however, is of great interest. It opposes that there is a well and formally said Confederate privateer being outfitted and prepared for cruising off Long Island. What do you say? Shall we go?"

"I know about where it is, sir," volunteered Mr. Smith.

"Hey! what?" exclaimed the Commodore, "Are you sure of that, sir?"

"I mean for you than only," continued the commodore, "that you might have a guess as to where your place. We ought to fall in with the fleet day after tomorrow. The Hesperus isn't expected for a week. Our privateering captain will probably find himself at liberty to cruise on his own hook for a few days before he attempted to deliver his cargo. Now, sir, I'm a right hackly for us. That's all."

"Beg pardon, sir," said the lieutenant, "but may I have the letter?"

"Certainly" said Commodore Paulding, handing it to him with the half chart. "Don't lose it. It's a valuable document."

Smith, with his pulses throbbing, hurried below, took the precious card and letter out of the cabin. The Kilien! And he was going to capture his! The privateer, not the woman. Well, it would go hard if he did not find a way to get ashore at the woman as well as at the privateer.

CHAPTER III.

Fortune favored Smith. Fortune seemed to have a weakness for the Smith family, paralleled only by a similar feeling for the Jones family—this was a family of both in the world; and playing great party of fortune had favored them. Twice, by them, they would have died out long ago, but for other great fatalities that seemed entirely.

The St. Lawrence fell in with the flag officer the day after she sank the Patriot. The fleet was kept at the anchorage off Old Point Comfort, getting ready for an expedition, generally destined against the forts guarding Hatteras Inlet, the free ports of the Confederacy. Some of the vessels assembled there was a small schooner which had been a merchant vessel. This vessel was selected as an exact model of the Dutch Indiaman. The Sea Rover, Colonel Barclay into the mess of Commodore Paulding. Upon Uptown was turned over to the St. Lawrence. Smith was given command of her with fifty seamen, two officers, Mr. Jones, who Cuddlebones Brown and Hodson as his assistants, and old Bob Gantlin, chief boatswain's mate, to serve as a last task to reject the three hundred and fifty-odd men, volunteers all, who begged to accompany the chosen fifty from the crew of the St. Lawrence.

The flag officer did some then Commodore Paulding suggested, or even desired. Paulding had determined to support the attack himself with his sailing frigate. Very dubious, in spite of the successful ruse by which the Patriot had been over taken, as to the suitability of the old frigate for such duty, and very desirous of superintending the Greyhound, ruse or no ruse, the flag officer decided to assign to the duty the new and extremely fast gunboat Wamsgo. It was believed that nothing on the ocean had the heels of the Wamsgo, fresh from the shipyard. She had shown marvelous speed on her trial trips, and it would be a great disappointment if she could run away from her.

Commodore Paulding was given command of the dismasted squadron, and the three vessels got away three days after the capture of the Patriot. Their uniforms had been taken from the surviving officers of the Confederate schooner and laid aside, for, for as they sent around, by the corresponding officers of the Lipton. Sumner had been careful to scrape the Confederate flag and the patents up from the shaky Patriot before she went down. Sailors' eyes are keen for prizes, and many had marked the way the privateer had been painted, so that the ensign of the Confederacy was not in evidence. It would need a very sharp eye to see that the Patriot had been repainted since she appeared to be.

The commodore shipped his ships in the following manner: The St. Lawrence had down to the northward of Cape Henry, the Wamsgo had down to the southward, and the Upshur immediately off the entrance. Orders were sealed up to be there after but wait. Two days after they arrived at the appointed stations the sole out who was kept constantly at the fore mastheads of the Upshur sighted a sail early in the morning.

Suffering to be better which, indeed, he had studied until he knew it by heart, Smith sent his light aside he would have to effect the capture by strategy, not by force of the superior strength of the Greyhound, of course, constantly just enough and to give a good strategy way, and hoisted the agreed signals by which the Greyhound, and for some time to come, therefore the Patriot. The St. Lawrence and Wamsgo were out of sight in the misty morning.

MARIAN, PHILOSOPHER.

Worry Makes Us Her Mind that Worrying Does Not Pay.

Marian returned from the picnic limp and exhausted, but happy and satisfied. The party had been caught in a sudden, violent shower, and her dress was ruined.

"Clear again!" she called, listlessly, to the family, gathered on the piazza when she had reached home. "I've been wondering for two or three months whether this month would stand rain. Now I know, so I don't need to worry."

The family, being well aware that Marian never did worry, showed no surprise at her amusing dismissal of the subject. Aunt Rachel, a visitor, who had the unhappy habit of "borrowing trouble" and dwelling upon small misfortunes, could not quite understand her illness. But some illumination came a few days later, when the girl and the elderly woman, starting for the city with shopping in view, reached the railroad station just in time to miss the train.

"My luck!" Aunt Rachel fretted. "If we'd been a minute earlier we'd have caught it, and now, I suppose, we'll have to wait for twenty minutes."

"Oh, well, we'll be thankful it isn't forty minutes," was Marian's calm rejoinder. "Twenty minutes will give us a chance to go over our shopping lists and make sure that we haven't left out anything." Then, seating herself comfortably, she prepared to make good use of the time.

Aunt Rachel stared and wondered. She wanted to know whether her niece was merely acting out her temperament, or whether she was following a reasoned and planned philosophy. But she did not speak her doubts and the question might have asked, was answered the next day, in her bearing—unscared, indeed, but, for the benefit of a girl who like Marian, was a senior in the high school.

"O Marian!" gushed the older girl. "Aren't you just distracted for fear the school committee will refuse to engage Laurital Hall for our graduation exercises?"

"Distracted?" repeated Marian, the philosopher. "Of course not. Never. If it should go to worrying it would hurt me, and it wouldn't have the slightest effect on the school committee. So I keep cool and hope for the best, as I always do."

By this time Aunt Rachel understood, and she went away thoughtfully—revolting, it may be, days of indigestion succeeding to fitless, sensitive of such slight consequence that, looking back on a week later, she could scarcely recall what it was that had made her worried. Yet those small, inconsequential worries were large enough to waste time, weaken the nerves and sap the strength of her courage needed for the serious business of life—Youth's Companion.

Doctors' Bills.

Who knows how many an honest bill for the medicine, will wish to have paid—the doctor's "professional services?" Inscribe a bill made up with such nicety as this: "To counting pulse, stepping up to viewing tongue, throwing in asking four questions (three irrelevant), compliance, to telling patients to say, hang-man, eight-pence; to medicine, is bit, to bottle, twopence; to visit 1 penny; total, 5s. 6d.—York-shire Observer.

Some Old Guns.

Little James has been injuring to his mother the importance and chief information that his father had got a new gun.

"Indeed, James!" replied the mistaken, indignantly. "And what will he do with the old one?"

THE PULPIT

THE SOUL AND THE SOD.

By Henry F. Cope.

"But I keep my body under and bring it into subjection."—1 Cor. ix. 27.

A man's religion is in whatever he esteems most worth while, whatever he sets on top in his life. One does not love to be told to make sacrifices to his God; he makes them to him of that because this or that is his god. The test of any religion is whether the things which it sets up as supreme are those which are rightfully superior to all others and whether their service calls forth the best in the worshiper.

You can find people who pour out the best adornitos of their being before strange and curious. It needs little insight to indicate the type of existence to which such worship tends. There are those who swink all their live on money. Theoretically, at least, we all know the sordid meanness, the starving of soul that results from such a religion.

Yet no would be a fool who should say because most and money are mere worthy objects of worship, "I will have none of either." We do mistake that many make today. They keep from the one the true and the most worthy loves and they therefore say these things shall have no place in our course.

Once the ideal religion person was a hermit, living in a cave, where he could come to the grave, the more the glory of the Creator was manifested. Silence was an exhibition, was showed their loathing of the flesh by wearing a hair shirt, and by lashing him. They hissed manfulness on the body. They refused to clothe it, bringing to the devil while their spirits belonged to God.

The modern hypocrite religionist talks about his vile body. Often he goes a step farther and says that his body is fatbiden a gratuitous exhibition of pure envy. If he is sincere he is sadly misleading; the engineer might as well talk about saving the steam by destroying the engine, or of the fire by the extinguisher of the other. There can be no holiness with half a man.

No one doubts that the soul is supreme in man. It is as no difference to us, whether we say that the soul is, or we all know that it determines all the outer life. The difficult thing is to discover its relations to us in an easily apprehended life of feeling. This body, with its appetites and possibilities is not ours to mock us, nor for us to destroy. How may we find its right place in the full life?

Everything falls into its right place when we find that which takes rightly the first place in life. When man thinks of himself as the child of the divine, the true, the supreme life, the life which is his as a spiritual being. This I, this consciousness, separating it from the brassts, sets me beside the throne of the infinite.

Here, within, is the true self; here the enduring life; here, within the walls of flesh, take shape the true life of life. Here beams conscious in man, is shown character. Here is the body and a form that goes on perfecting its fashion of glory or of grossness in the spiritual life. Anything more

WEST WIND IN NEW YORK.

It Revives Business and Enlivens Pocket Books in Gotham.

Silence in the block, dead silence, says the New York Sun. Not a sound worted—for from 10 to 12 o'clock and you see the shops along all full of people, but they mostly talking, not laughing, they are just sitting back in the chairs of the dentist, some framing themselves but most of them motionless and all silent. And why is this time?

It is because the uncomfortable 15th inst. or less or less and the thinking about it thousand, the hottest and the stickest summer night that ever was known, that, seems to be so, anyway, and any motion or speech of any kind only add to the people's misery, and so they sit there silently, trying valiantly to get cool; with everybody out, the block is dead.

Then along this silent, speechless, peopled but lifeless block, comes a breath of west wind, just a breath, but a breath of grateful, for it has life, reviving vigor in it, and everybody, everybody, feels it, in every fibre, but not a word is said, not even a laugh or laugh or sing, for it may be only a breath, to be gone in a moment, with no more to follow, and everybody knows more stifling; and so the people sit and wait for the breeze.

Soon it begins coming, that life-giving west wind, and everybody is making people sit up with a new joy in life; the whole world takes on a new aspect, the sidewalks are full, chinging, discomforting, debilitating, hoaxing, sinks away; the temperature falls; the west wind brings a revitalizing; an electrifying, a joyous strength, and everybody feels and sees new life in every breath; and now—

Half an hour later the block, full of people on every stoop, was dull and lifeless and silent and miserable; now the people are sitting back, full of life, talking and laughing, finding a great joy in the coolness of the breeze, giving, bearing west wind and a little drop in the temperature.

"SPORTSMEN."

Sickening tales of game slaughter in the far North, much of it by the crews of the Canadian Pacific railway, reach Toronto Globe by a Dawson correspondent. In all the thousands of miles from Vancouver to the Arctic Ocean and from Edmonton to Dawson the country is dotted with camps of men from all over the world. Still, as we saw, we reap.

SHORT METER SERMONS.

Character is crystallized conduct.

He is greatest who gives most of himself.

Coals of fire are not intended for roasting purposes.

Many think they are shining when they are simply rusting.

Religion has one virtue does not cure instead in the heart.

Paying the price of purity is the best investment in life.

The saddest slavery is that of being ruled by our pleasures.

Polishing your appetites is turning your back on your ambitions.

No man ascends to heaven on whom heaven has not descended.

If you would be far-sighted you must learn to live on the heights.

You cannot improve the hired by polishing the verse on the harness.

The saddest thing about some Judas that never are touched by the sorrows of others.

Lots of your people would be tolerable if they did not praise so much about their honesty.

DONT'S FOR CHILDREN.

Don't forget that kindness makes all kin.

Don't forget that the fruit is fruit of humility when you try to humiliate others.

Don't let your desire to get out of the fight be your only reason for praying for victory.

Don't fail to learn that be alone is refinted to old truth who will forsake it for the new.

Don't think you can escape responsibility for the loss of the city by ignoring your existence.

Don't make the mistake of expecting your neighbor to pay you three pounds of honesty beyond.

Don't spend all your time writing "to-morrow never comes" but you over look the fact that to-day is gone.

Absalom Rebels Against David.—II. Sam. xv.

Golden Text.—Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.—Ex. 20-12.

Sixteen years elapse between 15th and 16th chapters of the life of David. The principal events in the interval are David's sin, the malice shown by his son Absalom, his great sin, his growing repentance and his unshaken and subsequent restoration of Absalom. And now the hard trouble rain in his own household, with his beloved son, Absalom, in the consequences of his crimes and his punishment in the world although that he had repented and been forgiven and accepted of God, but he was told that the sword should never depart from his house because of the troubled Uriah. His own son raises traitor against him and his government and the most of his people in this world is to have trouble in the world, and the most of his people are more willing; and so the people sit and wait for the breeze.

Absalom's plan was to gain the affections of the people, and so he rose up early and stood beside the gate of the city, and when any man came to the king for judgment, Absalom called to him and said, Of what city art thou? And he said, Thy servant is of such and such a tribe of Israel. Then Absalom said, Behold, thy matters are good and right; but there is no man that hath been appointed of the king to hear thee. Wherefore Absalom said, Oh that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and I would do him justice. Now, plotting against his father. There is a sense of justice in man, even in a person in debate in Such a case will be found on the most sacred ties. Most politics are only the wiles of the devil. Yet we have no sympathy; they are like their father, the devil, who has only a little of the truth, and that only in spite of some and cases to the contrary. Yet, Absalom, in his plotting, he had all the tricks and measures of a modern politician. Here is a measure that he could do far better than the people, and he made sure of it, and he made good the promise. He Additional Locals.

—Miss Florence Smith left Monday for Oregon to visit her sister, Mrs. H. G. Smith. She will be absent two months or more.

—Mr. A. D. Cruikshank leaves this week for Pueblo, Colo., where she will spend the winter with her daughter, Miss Gale.

—Last week the last of the Dougherty property on Bridge street was bought by H. S. Harsha. It consists of 45 feet adjoining the Masonic lot on the south.

—Mr. Louis La Valle, the well known grand opera baritone, will be heard at the Charlevoix Theatre next Friday, Nov. 6th, with the West Henry Company.

—We are every to say there are good citizens of Charlevoix who favor stalling the tax roll for a library building, and yet will vote against issuing for an industry that means an era of prosperity to the city.

—Great suffering Moses! How we did lambaste them! Is there a decent present? Come out and exhibit yourself! Tell us how it seems! Sing us a song in minor key! Whistle a few skips for us! Do something far heaven's sake!

—The democrats are good fellows, all of them, including Doc. Crouter and Herschell Miller. But they are innocently attached to a lost cause, and they ought to realize it. Nothing but a cataclysmic disturbance will change them, and we honor them for their loyalty. But confound their judgment.

—It is reported on good authority that county chairman Lewis, of Hoyes City, wired national chairman Mack Wednesday as follows: "We also ran! Tell Mr. Bryan that I still consider him the greatest statesman since Thomas Jefferson, and that Charlevoix county will be solid for him in 1912."

—Caesar Augustus! Who would have ever thought it. After such a spontaneous and widespread demand for a change! In Charlevoix county, that the proposition should be turned down by a majority of three, 1909 to 1090 is beyond our understanding. The corrupt bunch over at the court house complete an outfit that beats Tammany!

—Mr. Bryan is a man of the high and personal character, and of great ability. He has a personal charm that draws men to him. The American people respect him as a good citizen and a Christian gentleman. But he did not represent the policies that affect the prosperity of the country, and he will retire to private citizenship permanently as an American who loves his country, but had mistaken ideas of the needs.

—We hardly expect about as many years in the rule of industrial inaction that we have acquired a spirit of inference that should be eradicated from our system. But we do some times grow and crawl into our holes and hibernate. The "intellectual and moral possibilities of the young" by building libraries is all well enough, but let us get something for the young to do. Put a little finger into our physical activities, and the "intellectual and moral" question will take care of itself. Charlevoix must come to the front in this matter or what little progressive spirit we have will die. If you have the interests of Charlevoix at heart vote "yes" at the special election.

—Our compliments to the epicenter of Charlevoix Democracy, of Hoyes City, and edited chiefly by our veteran friend W. J. Lewis. It lived but a brief moment, but it cut a swell while it breathed. Its first screech was the challenge of a big Irishlle form-cat emerging from under the woodshed in the last moon was a roar. It is dead now! Deader than Julius Caesar! and the editor, Bill Lewis, is laying palatine to recoup what he lost on his journalistic venture. The newspaper business in Charlevoix county is mighty uncertain as a financial investment. Bill knows it now. Say, Bill! How does it look! Sixteen hundred odd majority for Pearson; fourteen hundred odd for Harris; ten hundred odd for McWatt; fifteen hundred odd for Payton; same for Lewis; fifteen hundred odd for Roney, and about that for Nicholas! What do you think about the newspaper business Bill?

NOTICE—It will all off of my household goods at private sale, any one wishing to see the above goods is invited to call at 701 Bridge street. These goods are as good as new.

LET US REASON TOGETHER.

Why The Bond Proposition Appeals to the Local Patriotism of Every Citizen of Charlevoix.

We know the word "bond" has something in it terrifying to the average tax payer, unless the bond happens to be in his safety deposit box in the vault. Bonds mean interest, and interest means taxes. The average tax-payer will write his name on a subscription paper for an annual amount for the maintenance of some public utility, when the same amount added to his tax will throw him into a fit.

On the path of this month the citizens of Charlevoix will be called upon to vote upon the proposition to bond the city in the amount of $15,000 for the construction of a dock on city property lying on Pine Lake.

It is well understood that there are interests which cannot afford to be hampered by dependence upon private individual interests.

The proposition is for a public dock that can be utilized for public interests and it should be carried by an overwhelming majority.

The Lecture Course.

The next number of the Lecture Course will occur Wednesday evening, November 11th. This number is to be the entertainment of the course. Ethan Dy and Clarence Truitt Day will furnish the attraction, and their national reputation insures the citizens of Charlevoix of a rare treat. Head what is stated by the managers of the State University Course of Iowa.

"One of the most thoroughly delightful entertainments ever presented to the Colleges was that given by Mr. Ethan Day and Mrs. Grace Truitt Day. Without contouur, Mr. Day dresses upon facial make-up and expression and which he ends superbly. Whether he impersonates the Cockney tourist, the Kentucky Colonel, the ardent lover, the loquacious Hoosier store keeper, or any other one of the dozen characters, he is as near perfection as possible. He plays upon the heart-strings, and the most tender impulses of humanity are awakened by his emotional acting—for he readings in the field of sentiment are truly worthy of the stronger word. To the Bureau our thanks are due for a program so unusually excellent."

If you have not already bought a course ticket, do so at once. You cannot afford to miss the fine numbers that are to follow. There will be no better attractions offered in any city of the state.

Reserve your seats will open Monday evening, Nov. 9th, at 7:30, at the city Drug Store. Bring your course ticket with you when you make your reservation. Single admission 50c.

WORRY

One who could rid the world of worry would render greater service to the race than all of the inventors and discoverers that ever lived, says Success magazine.

We Americans pity ignorant savages who live in terror of their cruel gods, their demons which keep them in abject slavery, but we ourselves are the slaves of a demon which blasts our hopes, blights our happiness, casts its hideous shadow across all our pleasures, destroys our sleep, mars our health and keeps us in misery most of our lives.

This monster dogs us from the cradle to the grave. There is no occasion so sacred but it is there. Unbidden it comes to the wedding and funeral alike. It is at every reception, every banquet, it occupies a seat at every table.

No human intellect can estimate the unutterable havoc and ruin wrought by worry. It has forced genius to do the work of mediocrity; it has caused more failures, more broken hearts, more blasted hopes, than any other one cause since the dawn of the world.

What have not men done under the pressure of worry! They have plunged into all sorts of vice; have become drunkards, drug fiends; have sold their very souls to their clients to escape this monster.

Think of the homes which it has broken up; the ambitions it has ruined; the hopes and prospects it has blighted! Think of the suicide victims of this demon! If there is any devil in existence, is it not worry, with all its attendant progeny of evils?

Yet, in spite of all the tragic evils that follow in its wake, a visitor from another world would get the impression that worry is one of our dearest, most helpful friends, so closely do we hug it to ourselves and so loath are we to part from it.

Detroit Journal's New Building.

The Detroit Journal has recently moved into its new building, which cost $125,000, illustrated in the picture herewith. The building is claimed to be the most artistic in the business district of Detroit. Its basement is of Bedford stone and the walls of white enameled terra cotta. The roof is tiled. One of the most striking features is the arcaded entrance, with its gilded coffered ceiling, its marble landing, and the large windows in the sides, giving a full view of the press room in the basement, where three big Hoe presses run off the papers at the rate of 48,000 an hour each. The floors are of hard-wood and the interior fittings of mahogany finish. It is the lightest, airest, most commodious newspaper building in the country.

The whole newspaper press of Michigan jibes in hearty good wishes and congratulations for the success and prosperity of this most prominent Detroit contemporary.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Dorothy Iddings, a member of last year's class who has just returned from her western trip, visited the high school Monday morning.

Frank Campbell, who is attending M. A. C. has played in three football games, and has won his numerals from M. A. C.

A girl Glee Club is to be organized under the direction of Miss Gregory, the musical instructor of the Charlevoix high schools.

Two members of the senior class arranged the Trophy corner in the assembly room. The corner consists of pictures of former football and track teams, several banners, and the cup which was won by Charlevoix at the inter-scholastic field meet three years ago.

The football game of Saturday, Nov. 31, displayed a great amount of spirit on the part of the high school and business men. About two hundred people witnessed the game Saturday, Nov. 7, with be a game with Harbor Springs.

County Normal.

During the last week Jessie Metz, of Rock Elm, and Pearl Hurst, of Ireson, joined the normal class This makes our number fourteen.

Florence Sheldon, Hazel Holliday, Clelie Barkley, Susie Sheldon, Jessie Metz, Alma and Edith Brodk, spent Sunday with friends and relatives in East Jordan.

Miss Lewis and Miss Purdieb spent Sunday in East Jordan. Margaret Hyser was in charge of Miss Lewis' room and Kathryn LaIver taught in Miss Purfield's room until the bost arrived.

Misses Hines, Bird, Kirchner and Sherman attended the State Teachers Association at Saginaw last week Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. While there Miss Hines met Mabel Beardsley, a graduate of the Normal in 1904. She is teaching at Grand Ledge and sent her best regards to the class.

During the absence of the teachers to the Association the Normal girls had charge of their rooms. Chris Hansen visited Miss Kirchner's place; Tessie Durance Miss Sherman's place; Mildred Drescher Miss Reed's place, and Ruth Bowditch taught in the Normal room.

WOMAN MORMON AGAIN EXILED.

Submits to Being Taken from Family Rather than Change Faith.

Hether Allen story in article of her faith, Delphine Dudleworth, an English woman, 51 years old, has twice submitted to exile from home she holds dear and faced death among savages, homeless. Miss Dudleworth became a convert to Mormonism in England. Her first impression after in Boston she was asked if she believed in the principle of polygamy, "I believe in the doctrine of plural marriage," she replied. Under the law no female is allowed to enter the United States. The girl was set aside for deportation and here, despite the personal appeal of Senator Smoot at Washington, was returned to England. An attempt to enter the United States by way of Montreal proved more successful and two weeks ago the young woman joined her family in Salt Lake. News of her coming reached the ears of the immigration authorities and she was put in a train bound for Montreal in the custody of an immigration officer.

ROOSEVELT TO JUNGLES EARLY.

Date of Sailing of Hunting Party to Africa Is Set for March 23.

From an excellent authority it has been learned that President Roosevelt plans to leave New York on March 23, nine days after his inauguration, for the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm. Nothing, where the liner is due on March 25. Besides he will go Kermit, who will take photographs of the big game in Africa, he will be accompanied by a professor from the Smithsonian Institute and an official from the Navy Department. So far no arrangements have been made for the six months the party will spend in Lamu province, but on the return and Port Florence, a distance of 281 miles on the Uganda Railway (to be until) will embark for Khartoum, in Central Africa. The thing is certain that Theodore Roosevelt will not enter the Kaiser's territory.

ONE KILLED IN BOAT COLLISION.

Low Water in Potomac Prevents Ferry Getting Out of Way.

A collision occurred between the Norfolk and Washington steamer City of Washington bound from Norfolk and the Washington and Alexandria ferryboat Lackawanna, bound from Washington to Alexandria in the Potomac river, three miles below Washington. Edward Hendricks, a negro, was a merchant of Alexandria, but also a citizen of Washington, was killed. The collision is said to be due to a confusion of signals in addition to a lowering of the low stage of the water, of the crew to handle the ferryboat. The City of Washington slid off the Lackawanna was then turned back and the bow of the City of Washington was slightly damaged. The Lackawanna was not touched.

BUILDER BALKED BY ROOF.

Frail Wife of Cripple Erects Four-Story Walls, but Then Stops.

After having built with his own hands the walls of a four-story concrete house Mrs. Charles Hine of Verona, N. J., has come to a part of the work which she admits puzzles her. She does not see how she is going to put on the roof. She says she knows how the house should be joined and she knows what the roof over it should be, but she does not know how she is going to put the beams in place. The beams she says are too to lift and she has no tackle with which to raise them. She says she is practically all the end of her means and is unable to hire men to help her. Mrs. Hine is a frail woman. Her husband is a cripple and was born unable to assist her in her house building.

ROOSEVELT AIDS HEALTH MOVE

President Promises to Make Recommendation in New Message.

That President Roosevelt has agreed to recommend to Congress in his next message the passage of a law to conserve the public health, similar to the one proposed by the American Medical Association, was the statement made in an address before the New York Academy of Medicine by Dr. Charles A. L. Reed of Cincinnati, chairman of the association's committee on national medical legislation. In speaking on the campaign for national health force, Dr. Reed said:

"On the heels of the various steps forward I am gratified to be able to assure you that the President has authorized the statement that he will recommendation proposals and transmit them with his indorsement to the last Congress. It now devolves upon the 12,000 doctors in the United States and only to back the President in his work, but to assistance those actions by a perfectly organized force of 100,000 in the documental feature of the public welfare."

Speaking of the pollution of streams, Dr. Reed referred to the 1,000 subjected as a "thousand sullen of river and a thousand miles of typhoid."

Over 60,000 persons die every year of cancer, he said, and the death rate from that cause is increasing by 5 per and hounds.

If only one-half of the persons who die or are incapacitated as a result of tuberculosis and typhoid were saved, the Reed declared, it would mean a saving in money sufficient to maintain the entire national force of health, pay for the army and navy, fortify our coasts, duplicate our armament on the seas, and still have money left to spare and in the power pay for the Panama canal and to pay off the national debt.

TWO PACIFIC PIRATES.

Belgian and Boy Forced Captain and Mate to Walk the Plank.

G. C. Alexander, acting Attorney General for the Fiji Islands, is on his way to Cuba, where he will go to the on a story of piracy that will rival the dirtiest deeds on the Spanish Main. Two men, J. Mortehman, a Belgian, and T. Skerrett, are being held in Suva on the usual charge of piracy, and it is alleged they forced the captain and mate to walk the plank off the Vera Tigre in walk the plank. Then they changed the name of the ship to Kaiser and the crew of the South Seas mail ship were washed on a reef on Mangaia, a small island in the Cook group, where the stolen ship now lies, high and dry.

According to the story the ship sailed from Callao last November with a crew of four men, the captain and the mate being Italians. Skerrett, who seeks to throw the blame on his companion, says that after the ship had passed the Paumotu archipelago the Italians attacked the Italians with a meat cleaver and finished them to the cleaver. Then he threatened to shoot unless they would jump overboard. This they did and having for from land it is certain they drowned.

Fruit Wife of Cripple Erects Four-Story Walls, but Then Stops.

After having built with his own hands the walls of a four-story concrete house Mrs. Charles Hine of Verona, N. J., has come to a part of the work which she admits puzzles her. She does not see how she is going to put on the roof. She says she knows how the beams should be joined and she knows what the roof over it should be, but she does not know how she is going to put the beams in place. The beams she says are too to lift and she has no tackle with which to raise them. She says she is practically at the end of her means and is unable to hire men to help her. Mrs. Hine is a frail woman. Her husband is a cripple and was born unable to assist her in her house building.

William Howard Taft has been elected President of the United States, and James S. Sherman Vice President, according to the early returns, by a vote of 321 to 162 in the electoral college, thus giving him a clear majority over Mr. Bryan of 159. Taft has strengthened more than the number required to elect, but falls short of Roosevelt's total of 336 four years ago. Taft has a plurality of the popular vote in the country of about 1,000,000, against the country districts were meager. There appeared to be no Bryan landslide. Kansas, Democrat, had been elected Governor of Indiana, and the Indiana legislature is Republican and will elect a United States Senator.

Taft carried Michigan by a majority estimated at about 100,000, at unofficial tonight, the position for Governor Warner was in doubt with Thomas (Dem) leading. Governor Warner (Rep) is ahead in the returns from the country districts in which Warner expected a heavy vote and had reported. Hemmed in by the Republican landslide in the state Democrat Governor Thomas appears to be carrying Monroe, Wayne, Washtenaw, Ingham, Ottawa, Kent, Muskegon, Bay, Saginaw, Genesee, Lenawee, Hillsdale, Calhoun, Ionia, Lake and Mecosta counties, which are Democratic gains in the Legislature.

Wisconsin has given Taft an overall majority in excess of 100,000. This is 5 falling off from the 130,000 of 1904, but is the same Republican plurality. Governor J. D. Davidson, Republican, has been reelected, but the vote is behind that of the head of the ticket, owing chiefly to the fact that he was not endorsed by the Progressive Republicans. Eight Republican Congressmen have been elected to one to doubt, and nine Democrats are elected. The Legislature is Republican.

In Minnesota, where there was a bitter fight for Governor, Johnson appeared to have won by a small majority, although Bryan was beaten in the State by considerably over 20,000 votes. This fact is thought to put Johnson in the forefront of the Democratic candidates for the nomination four years from now.

Missouri went for Bryan, and Hadley, the Republican candidate for Governor, could not overcome the normal Democratic majority. The indications are that Senator Stone had succeeded in the primary election, thus defeating Senator Warner, who had hoped to become United States Senator.

Iowa Goes Republican Wide in Iowa.

Iowa has gone for Taft, but by a majority much reduced from that given to Roosevelt four years ago. The early returns indicated that Governor Cummins would be reelected by a majority of the Republican vote, and will therefore so be chosen to succeed Senator Dolliver as United States Senator to succeed Senator Dolliver.

In Illinois incomplete returns indicated that Taft's plurality in the State will be more than 55,000, and that Governor Deneen has returned to the Republican fold, and will be able to win by one or between 35,000 and 45,000. In Chicago a terrific slashing of the Democratic vote in the Republican wards, as well as in the Republican party, which had gone with the Democratic managers on a vote-trading proposition, made Deneen run behind the head of his ticket, and he will be reelected by a margin of 0,000 votes. The majority in Cook County, he said, is the largest he has ever received, and he will be the only one in the country districts to the State.

New York, Taft's affords one of the greatest surprises of the election, instead of giving Bryan the tremendous majority claimed by Democratic managers, Taft carried the state by a majority. This is the second time a Republican candidate for President has carried New York City, McKinley having a plurality of 10,000 in 1900. Four years later Bryan carried the city by 59,000, and in 1904 Parker carried it by 60,000. Four years ago Chanler carried it for Lieutenant Governor by 18,000, and this year the Democratic candidate fell short of this 18,000 in 130,000 for Bryan. Even the Republicans conceded the city to Bryan by 45,000.

Hearst's Independence party did not change the result in New York State, but it did contribute materially to keeping the down the Bryan vote. Hearst polled approximately 60,000 votes in New York City, most of which would likely have gone to Bryan. The liberal candidates for Governor, Lehman and Hearst, polled not enough votes to have changed the result in the Empire State.

The unprecedented Bryan landslide in the West did not materialize. Taft's plurality in Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Minnesota, Michigan and other States was not much less than that given the Roosevelt figures of 1904, but are still comfortably large. Nebraska alone gave Bryan by the

THE NATIONAL GRANGE

Forty-Second Annual Meeting to Be Held in Washington.

A New England Excursion Being Arranged—Secretary Freeman Reports 502 New Granges Organized and Fifty-one Reorganized the Past Year.

The national grange meeting will be held at Washington, Nov. 11-20. It has been a good many years since the national grange met at the Capital City, and the prospects now are that there will be a large attendance of members of the Order at the forthcoming session in Washington in November. The New England Patrons are organizing a special excursion for that occasion, and many others will also attend from the nearby grange states. Headquarters will be at the National hotel, a historic old building, and we believe that the sessions of the grange will be held in the large hall in the hotel. While there will be no election of officers except our annual committeeman, there will be other important items of business to be transacted which will be of very considerable interest to the organization. There should be a very large seventh degree class on this occasion, and for the information of those who may not have taken the sixth degree it may be stated that that degree will be conferred in full form in order to prepare those who take it for the highest degree. National Secretary Freeman reports a large number of new granges the past year. Progress has been notable in nearly every state and particularly in some of the western and northwestern states. Besides the session of the granges, the many attractions of the Capital City make the visit at this time of general interest. It is probable that President Roosevelt will receive the delegates and visiting Patrons on some day during the session.

THE WHITE HOUSE.

While there are numerous places of interest to be visited in Washington—the Congressional library, Corcoran Art gallery, Washington monument, the capitol, bureau of printing and engraving and several department buildings—it is not likely that any one will be quite complete without a trip to Mount Vernon and the tomb of Washington. Mount Vernon lies about sixteen miles south of Washington and may be reached by trolley or steamer down the Potomac, the latter being the most desirable approach to this historic place. We give herewith an illustration of Washington's home and also a picture of the White House.

MOUNT VERNON.

At the forthcoming meeting of the national grange Secretary C. M. Freeman will report the granges organized and reorganized from Oct. 1, 1907, to Oct. 1, 1908, as follows:

The Grange in Vermont

Under the efficient leadership of State Master G. W. Pierce the grange in Vermont is growing rapidly. Not only is the total membership increasing, but the subordinate granges are also growing in numbers.

If you are carrying grange fire insurance see that your dues are paid up. That's a condition of your policy.

The grange discourages litigation. It would also discourage people from going on the other side of the line fence.

New Hampshire state grange will meet at Portsmouth on Dec. 15-17.

Granges' farms should be the model farms of the town. Are they?

Origins of Plants.

The origin of our cultivated plants is a matter of the utmost interest to agriculturists. Of the seeds, fruits and roots which we cultivate for food, 84 per cent are of Asiatic origin, 6 per cent of European, 3 per cent of African, and 2 per cent of American. The Mediterranean region is large contributor from Asiatic

RULES OF PROCEDURE

May Be Made a Feature of an Evening's Programme.

State Lecturer Lowell of New York Submits a List of Parliamentary Questions and Answers Which Grange Members Will Find Instructive.

No member of the grange can be conducted correctly without some knowledge of parliamentary rules, and as there is we believe a very considerable lack of knowledge of such rules and in order that members may be posted upon the more important parliamentary questions that arise without having to take the trouble to look them up for themselves State Lecturer Lowell of Fredonia, N. Y., has prepared the following parliamentary questions, with their answers, which we suggest can be made an interesting feature for an evening's program. The lecturer might assign these questions to members at a previous meeting or call upon members without giving them previous notice and ascertain how many are capable of answering the questions without consulting Cushing's Manual or some other equally good authority:

1. Is it in order to lay an amendment on the table?

No; it is done sometimes to kill a question before the house, to get more one to vote who thinks he is getting rid of an amendment only. If you lay an amendment on the table, do not trouble yourself with it. It is not good parliamentary law.

2. May a member rise to a question of privilege and speak on the question before the house?

No.

3. How many times may one person speak on a question and not be out of order?

If he moves the question, twice; if not, once.

4. When a question of privilege is before the house and a motion is made to take up the order of the day, what becomes of the question of privilege?

It is lost.

5. When a person wishes to make a motion on a matter of his own mind is he done before or after stating the motion?

Always before.

6. Can you tell whether the following questions are debatable or undebatable or whether they require a majority or two-thirds vote to be carried?

(a) Motion to close debate.

Requires a two-thirds vote, undebatable.

(b) Objection to the consideration of a question.

Requires a two-thirds vote, cannot be amended, is undebatable.

(c) Motion to limit debate.

Requires a two-thirds vote, is undebatable, can be amended.

(d) Motion to extend the limit of debate.

(e) Motion to take up the previous question.

7. Can you tell what questions can be amended and what cannot?

There are certain questions which cannot be amended; there are some of no more importance, which can be amended. Any question may be put to a vote, take from the table, withdrawal of a motion, objection to the consideration of a question.

8. How and when may a question be reconsidered?

At the meeting when the motion was passed or the next following. The mover must be one who voted on the prevailing side; requires a two-thirds vote.

9. Can all questions be reconsidered?

No.

10. If an appeal is taken from the decision of the chair and the vote is a tie, what is the result? Why?

It is not uncommon if half the voters are with the chair to make a majority.

11. May a member change his vote after the vote has been announced?

In some cases he may, but he cannot change the result of the question he has voted on on reconsideration.

12. How many votes are required to amend a by-law?

First put the amendment to the amendment. If carried, put the amendment as amended; if carried, put the original question as amended. If not, put the original as they come, beginning always with the amendment.

13. What is a point of order?

Anything which is speaking and states somebody wrong, or one may ask the question, "I rise to a point of order." The chairman then asks, "State the point of order." The one claim shall then state his point of order, or may state the statement and if the chair decides the point of order well taken, he will so state and if not well taken and an appeal is taken, the question may continue.

14. Question of privilege—when made?

It may be made when a speaker has the floor. As soon as it is discussed of the assembly resumes the consideration of the question which was interrupted.

15. Question of order—when made?

When a member rises to a point and you think should you be discussed in order, answer to the assembly. Cannot be amended, is undebatable, requires two-thirds vote, does not require a second and is in order when another has the floor.

New England Grange Excursion.

The Patrons of New England will enjoy an excursion to Washington to attend the national grange on Nov. 11 to that city. The party will be a large one, as reduced rates and first class accommodations have been secured. The party will start Nov. 10 and return Nov. 17. Those who take this trip to Washington by paying an extension fee can attend the American Association of Institute Workers held there Nov. 18 and 17.

The Stark grange of New Hampshire lost all its property in a fire recently. It was insured, however, and the grange will start up again on a new basis, so that it will not be crippled.

The national grange favors a revision of the tariff, particularly on such articles as are used by farmers and which they are at home. Who's the matter with the Ways?

The philosopher of Folly.

"Poverty is to be a wear once more—than to be a rich one," says the Philosopher of Folly. "Poor men are of ten much wise to do with poverty, but not one in a thousand knows wen to do rich wealth."—Cleveland Leader.

No Perceptible Difference.

"The saying that beauty is only skin deep is true," said the philosopher of folly, "doesn't prove anything. What difference does it make, so long as beauties always wear that sort of the outside?"—Cleveland Leader.

TIME LEAKS IN THE GRANGE.

Some Suggestions That May Be Useful to Grange Officers.

The importance of utilizing time and the extravagance of allowing it to go to waste are well stated by Jennie Buell of Michigan, in which the following reasons of time running to waste are stated:

When the grange is not called to order on time because some officer or leading person is not present.

When the set wards distribute badges, song books, etc., after the gavel has fallen instead of before.

While the chorister selects songs after they are called for.

While the secretary shuffles his papers over or stops to write a receipt after the order of reading the minutes is reached.

When a committee audits a bill or passes upon an application for membership after reports of committees are called.

When business that might be referred to committee is transacted by the grange, especially with prolonged discussion.

When members speak upon questions that have not been brought properly before the grange by motion.

When members are allowed to wander to discussion in the lecture hour.

When matters foreign to the time or place are introduced and delay the closing past the time fixed.

THE MICHIGAN WAY.

Grange Dryulles in Michigan and How They Are Compensated.

The compensation of its grange deputies in Michigan is figured on a different basis. Each grange pays the organizing deputy $20, of which $15 goes to the charter. Then by application of a series of bounties, offered by the state grange, if the organizing deputy secures five grangies he receives $22 for each, and in like horizontal proportion for ten grangies he will get $22 each. Then there is a grand prize of $100 to any deputy who will organize ten or more twenty-five grangies during the year. And in order to increase their efforts to get the full twenty-five the chairman are given a repetition of the bounties for the second ten grangies, so that for twenty grangies they would receive $55, and for twenty-five grangies, which would entitle them to the grand prize of $100, they would receive $210. The deputy must fill his charter list a sufficient number to warrant initiating the 30 of the number from the charter members for his own service. Then it provides a safeguard against a charter membership so small as to make them worthless. It is not usual that the charter list should not be less than twenty-five in order to warrant the taking of the five dollar fee. This liberal payment of the deputies will account largely for the marvelous increase in the number of granges in Michigan during the past few years.

Among the measures left for further consideration at the next session of congress are some of the most important propositions of the session, some policies urged by the president and others advocated vociferously by the public press, some of perhaps, of hardly usual importance to measures which have been elicited without eliciting extensive popular attention. An intelligent elucidation of these policies and proposed laws reveals the fact that they are replete with difficulties and that only that product deliberation, which has ever characterized the legislative work of the Republican party can insure the success of such measures when finally enacted and ever, the pitfalls offered by hasty or inconsiderate action. Much time and thought have been devoted at this session to every important subject which failed of action, time and thought which must ultimately result in wise legislation free from those defects which result from inconsiderate or statutory enactment which are not rendered the result of tardy consideration of important and intricate legislative problems.—New York Tribune.

SYMPTOMS OF RABIES.

Signs by Which You May Know When a Dog Is Really Mad.

Hydrophobia is so rare and terrifying that its symptoms and treatment are little understood. As a matter of fact, the commonly accepted expression of madness in a dog is often misleading. The real mad dog does not shun water, as it is said. On the contrary, mad dogs crave water. If a dog with rabies is the subject of your solicitous care, if they are able to swallow. The mad dog does not froth at the mouth. It does not run snapping at everything in its path. What, then, are the indications of the mad dog? To those familiar with a given dog the earliest symptom and the one which should excite closest attention is a distinct and unmistakable change in the dog's disposition, a sudden becoming excitable and irritable over slight provocation. The dog may certainly remain rabies, but it is sufficient to cause the dog to be in trouble in swallowing, as though it were unable to take a lump in its throat, however. That dog should be instantly "up," because it is rabies it is said, but a dog in rabies is ferocious in effects to develop. The unmistakable symptom, however, of a dog with rabies is the sticky, whitish saliva which covers the teeth and shows on the drawn lips. The eyes glare and are red; the dog has paroxysms of rapid fury, during which it barks hoarsely, which alternate with periods of lethargic exhaustion.—Chicago Whitney in Outing.

The Tragical Story of a Ship Struck by Lightning.

"In Dublin, on the docks some years ago, we saw fresh water Ancient Mariners were talking of adventures on the Liffey with Dublin men, an old seaman said: "Captain H.," said one, "it seems to me I've heard somewhere that your vessel was once struck by lightning while sailing, sailing over the boundless main?"

"Yes, twice, said Captain H. "Bagged off Point Aux Barques most fifteen years ago. We were jogging along when a thunderstorm overtook us, and the very first flash of lightning struck the deck, mainmast and bored a hole in it as big right big right down through the bottom of the vessel.

"And she foundered, of course?"

"No, sir. The water began rushin' in, gal! we would have foundered, but there came a second flash, and a bolt struck my forty pounder, and bored a hole in it, too. On the top, turned bottom end up, and as it came down it emptied the water out and left us as tight as a drum. When we got down to dryock we simply stood up, rather end up, left the pug in the planks."—Washington Bulletin.

CHAPTER III.—(Continued.)

The schooner had been observed for the approaching steamer, which did not alter its course on that account. There was no harm to be expected from a small sailing schooner, by a blockade-runner, and as the Greyhound was looking for just such a vessel in order to get pilotage through the inlet, across the sound, and up to Jones' Wharf, she came on hopefully and fearlessly. Her captain, however, was greatly pleased when he saw the private signal flying from the foremast head of the schooner. He immediately set the answering signal in accordance with the agreement and having approached within hailing distance he slowed down and stopped.

"What schooner is that?" he called out. "The Confederate privateer schooner Perry" shouted Smith his voice thrilling with excitement. "What ship is Sail?"

"The blockade-runner Greyhound" answered the captain of the other vessel.

"Good! We've been waiting for you for nearly a week."

"Have you a pilot?"

"Yes," answered Smith, "we're ready to pilot you in!"

"How's the Ellen?"

"She's in fine shape," answered Smith. "Just then a message came from the side of the deck by the captain.

One of the Upshur's boats had been call-1 away. Six men, all heavily armed, dropped into it. In the stern sheets sat Midshipman Brown, Midshipman Robinson and Pelham, the last named officer in charge of the schooner. As the Greyhound approached, the boat pushed off from the long Tom on the forewatch of the Upshur, all loose guns and gear had been loaded, and everything made ready for its instant discharge. The boat was pulled up and the officer in charge hailed and lightly secured. The men left on the schooner had been instructed precisely as to what to do in various contingencies, and, in the uniform of a Confederate officer, stepped over the low rail and down into the stern sheets of the boat. At that instant Captain Evers fired. He had a great enough mark at which to aim. Lt. Sol Smith was standing by the side of his savage hound not quite clear of the deck when the shot was fired. The bullet from Evers' rifle, aimed at the gangway, suddenly stopped into full view of the Greyhound's crew, who turned at the same instant and the two men in the boat, who had been talking, "Mr. Smith! Captain Evers, you are betrayed! This is a Yankee!"

As soon as Ellen Jones had called out, Captain Evers, who was a quick thinker, for an Englishman, realized that something was seriously wrong. He acted with the promptness of a soldier. He had the first of the boat's crew was pulled up, he jumped into the gangway and gave a second's hesitation Evers, who was a powerful man, seized him by the coat and lead him overboard. The man in the boat was so astonished at the action that he let go the ring bolt with his lone hook and was pushed to the bottom of the boat a few feet from the blockade-runner.

Grappling aside Ellen Jones as if she had been a straw—indeed, his impetuosity almost threw her in his deck, for she recoil back against the fife-rail—Smith sprang to the quarter. The ship had locked in a desperate struggle in an instant.

"Your helm!" shouted the captain, striking like a madman in the arms of the assassin. "Port your helm!"

Other officers on the Greyhound, however, had seen everything that happened. The first mate was a renegade Yankee and as he ran aft he saw that the first indication of treachery he had signaled the engine room. The engine room was already in revolution and the Greyhound's bows had begun to swing to port. Mr. Brown here made a mistake. He wanted to pick up the man the captain of the blockade-runner had thrown overboard. By the time he had the astonished sailor safe in his boat the Greyhound was in rapid motion, and he could not overhaul her.

Meanwhile half a dozen sailors had thrown themselves upon Smith and had dragged him from the captain. All was not yet lost, however. Smith had prepared for the contingency which had arisen by certain orders which he had given to Midshipman Robinson. These orders were being carried out. A bundle of rags forward on the Upshur was swinging the long thirty-two pound piece. "Rifle, Yankee, was watching them, however.

"Captain Evers," he cried, "they're going to fire on us!"

It happened that a couple of tiller lashes the muddy hatch cover off. Somebody had seen something that morning. Evers was a cool man. He ran aft and looked up one of the weapons. The Greyhound was going faster every moment. The nearness of the emergency had been announced to the engineer and he was pulling for dear life. Fire as they might, it mattered little now. Smith had the range of the thirty-two and would be in the line of fire. A well-placed shot would cripple the unfortunate of the Greyhound in short order.

Getting the thirty-two shoulder trained to his satisfaction, Midshipman Robinson squatted along the breech for a last minute of aiming before pulling the lock string. At that instant Captain Evers fired. He had a great enough mark at which to aim. Lt. Sol Smith was standing by the side of his savage hound not quite clear of the deck when the shot was fired. The bullet from Evers' rifle, aimed at the gangway, suddenly stopped into full view of the Greyhound's crew, who turned at the same instant and the two men in the boat, who had been talking, "Mr. Smith! Captain Evers, you are betrayed! This is a Yankee!"

SCHOOL NOTES.

Pearl Sheldon, of East Jordan, visited the high school Friday, Nov. 6.

The English III Class began the study of Washington Irving's "Sketch Book," Monday morning.

The Senior Class completed Solid Geometry last week and will take up review Algebra for the remainder of the semester.

Next Saturday the Charlevoix foot ball team plays East Jordan on the home grounds. Everyone should turn out and help the boys to keep up their reputation.

Mr. Fuller, the superintendent of the East Jordan high school, attended the foot ball game Saturday, and arranged a game for next Saturday with the Charlevoix team.

The Charlevoix high school has, this year, one of the best foot ball teams that has ever represented the school on the field. This is the first year's experience for part of the boys and for that reason the showing is all the more remarkable. Our foot ball record for this season is exceedingly satisfactory, being only one game.

How Mr. Putnam will give an illustrated lecture on the "Yellow Stone National Park," Wednesday night, Nov. 18, for the Senior Class. Mr. Putnam camped for some time in the Park and no one is better fitted to explain the natural beauties of this great American wonder. He has obtained the use of especially prepared slides, so this is an opportunity of a life time for those who cannot visit the Park in person.

Monday morning's program consisted of singing by the school from the new books purchased by the Board of Education for the use of the high school. They contain a very good selection of songs. The singing was superintended by Miss Gregory, and the spirit shown by the students was very good considering this was the first time they had used the books. Margaret Durance rendered the famous mastepiece, "Chantonjola." We were further entertained by a duet entitled, "Gaudeis atque Carainus," the university song, sung by Dr. Allan and Frank Wilkinson. It was a treat to see and hear, and brought forth a great deal of enthusiasm, the results of which, being two more songs.

The results of the second month's work in the high school are more satisfactory than those of the first month if the monthly standings are a criterion. The Senior Class has the largest number, gaining an average of 90 per cent or above, and also contains the member of the school who has obtained the highest standing for the month: Lester Crane leads with an average of 94; the other members of the class with an average of 90 or above; Mary Dunlop, 93; Kenneth Bridge, 92; Chas. Dickinson, 90; Dareene Bridge, 90; and Leo Small 90. In the Junior Class are Lila Shapton, 93; Ray Bennett, 93; Guy Laughrar, 91 2-3 and Pearl Small 90 2-3. Of the Sophomores there are Edward Edwards, 90 4-5 and Amos Nesson 90 4-5. In the Freshman Class there are Eva O'Brien, 94; Mabel Dunlop, 93 2-3; Walden Valentine, 92; and Countess Mason, 90 2-3.

County Normal.

Provenge Olson was absent last week on account of illness.

Miss Pearl Sheldon, of East Jordan, visited the Normal Friday.

Margaret Ryan was absent from school the latter part of the past week on account of illness.

Kathryn La Peer and Margaret Ryan substituted in the sixth and fifth grade rooms Monday morning until the arrival of Miss Purfield and Miss Lewis.

Maud Cross, of East Jordan, entered the Normal Class Tuesday. Our class is now fifteen in number, which is the largest enrollment since the organization of the county Normal.

Tuesday morning, of last week, the Normal Class accompanied by Miss Hunter and Supt. Woodley visited the voting precinct of the 3rd ward where Mr. E. D. Ward kindly explained to them the process of voting. On their return the class held an election, following as closely as possible the directions given by Mr. Ward. On counting the votes it was found that the prohibition candidates had received the majority of votes.

Bellaire Independent: At the last meeting of the Magic Weber Club, C. A. Hudgins, of Mt. Clemens, Saturday, October 3, the question was presented of erecting a soldier's monument in front square. The matter was pretty thoroughly discussed, and it was decided to form state plans for the accomplishment of that purpose. About the first step will be to present the question to the board of supervisors, late in session, and secure its cooperation. That secured a gradual working up of plans for a popular subscription will follow.

The Anti-Saloon League.

The Traverse City Herald had this to say the day before election:

"Many law abiding people who are in sympathy with the anti-saloon league's work do not approve of the circular issued for the purpose of defeating Governor Warner. Such methods as these act as boomerangs, rather than the influence expected and we believe this will be the case in this instance.

"The circular was sent broadcast throughout the state. In Grand Rapids all but one clergyman signed it, declining to let politics enter into their church work, many of them believing that the attack was malicious because they know Governor Warner's attitude relative to the liquor interests.

"It is commonly known that Governor Warner uses neither intoxicants nor tobacco. He is a temperance man in every sense of the word and an outspoken advocate of morality and clean government.

"The Herald has constantly supported the Anti-Saloon League in its efforts to abolish the saloons in Michigan, but we question whether the action of that organization on the eve of election in its attack upon Governor Warner, is timely or wise. We believe, on the contrary, that it is inwise and unjust and that it will not have the effect desired."

How is Your Digestion.

Mrs. May Dowling of No 228 5th Ave., San Francisco, writes: "I recommend a remedy for stomach trouble. She says: "Gratitude of the wonderful effect of Electric Bitters in a case of acute dyspepsia, prompts me to testimonial. I am fully convinced that for stomach and liver troubles Electric Bitters is the best remedy on the market today." This great tonic and alterative medicine invigorates the system, purifies the blood and is especially helpful in all forms of female weakness. 50c. At F. G. Hixon & Co's drug store.

Captain Newberry Here.

Capt. George Newberry, of the Salvation Army, arrived here last week to remain some time. The Alpena News has this to say about him:

"Captain George Newberry who came to Alpena eleven weeks ago to take charge of the Salvation Army work has resigned, and will leave with his wife to-morrow for their home in Charlevoix. Captain Newberry will take a long and needed vacation.

Captain Newberry has been very successful in the work in Alpena, and leaves the corps in good condition. He has secured about thirty conversions, and leaves the station in better shape financially than when he found it. Captain Newberry was very active in the relief work for the forest fire sufferers, and leaves Alpena with the confidence and respect of the people with whom he came in contact."

Japanese Woman Found Dead and Husband in Arrested.

Mrs. Tori Yaho Hasimoyama, Japanese, who was to escape treatment for pagdnism and joined the First Presbyterian church in Easton, Pa., was found dead Sunday afternoon on the cellar door in a house of which she and her husband were occupants. There was a deep gash wound in her throat. Her husband, Yasu Hasimoyama, has been arrested, though the police admit there is no direct evidence against him. The Japanese left his wife unattended while he. The police, however, say the woman could not have inflicted the fatal wound, and further declare that the husband had tried to keep her from becoming a Christian. The couple attended church Sunday morning and walked back with one of the women of Easton on steps then the little Japanese woman was talking enthusiastically about becoming a Christian. The couple met in Chicago three years ago and were married there. The woman was anything so because of her husband, while the man was taking a collegiate course.

KILLS BABE AND SELF.

Mrs. Catherine L. Lynn, Despairing of Cure, Is Murderer and Suicide.

Mrs. Catherine Louis Lynn, 34 years old, 7708 Cass avenue, Chicago, killed her 22-year-old daughter, Marion, and then shooted her own chest. In the two passing, absence of a trained nurse who had been employed to attend her. Mrs. Lynn had been ill for six months and she had believed herself hopeless. The insanity is thought by her friends to have led to mental derangement. The victim, Helle Osbourn, was in another part of the house at the time of the tragedy and heard the child's screams as the mother seized her and stabbed her twice with a razor. Miss Osbourn rushed to Mrs. Lynn's apartment on the second floor, but was not in time to aid the child or to prevent the mother from rushing the knife upon her own breast. Mrs. Lynn, it is years old, is one of the suicide, was playing in front of the Lynn home. He heard the screams and ran frantically to the house of a neighbor, who notified the police of the South Chicago station and an ambulance soon arrived. Both Mrs. and child were dead when the physicians arrived, however. The child's body lay upon the bed where it was placed by the mother, who endeavored vainly to stop the flow of blood. The mother lay in a pool of blood where she fell, and the razor with which the deed was done was still clutched tightly in her hand when the police lifted her to a position beside her child. She was slightly clad, and her clothing, as was that of little Marion, was saturated with blood. Harry Lynn, the dead woman's husband, is yard superintendent in the Illinois Steel Company's plant in South Chicago.

SCHOOL FOR CHILD WIFE.

Truant Officer Finds Fourteen-Year-Old Girl a Bride.

Can a married "woman," 14 years old, be forced to attend school under the compulsory education laws? For several days Truant Officer Hipsley of Bay City, Mich., has been searching for Hortha Grover, 15 years old, according to her parents, but 14 according to the school census records, in order to force her attendance at school. Her teacher reported her absent some time ago and the truant officer started in to find her. When the girl was found, she was married to Ernest Grover, 17 years old, according to her parents, but 14 according to the school census records. The truant officer dropped the case when he found the girl married. The girl's parents say they will not force her to leave her husband to attend school.

BIG INCREASE IN COTTON CROP.

The world's production of cotton for all commercial during the year ending Aug. 31, 1908, amounted to 22,540,000 bales the production of the previous year, according to the Census Bureau's report on the supply and distribution of cotton. It is a significant fact, the report shows, that the fluctuations in the world's supply of cotton are caused principally by the variations in the annual production in the United States. If the consumption of cotton in 1908 equals that of 1907 in the United States, it is believed, must contribute about 12,500,000 bales to prevent further accumulation of cotton in the world's stocks. The number of cotton spindles in this country is 27,964,000. The annual exports of manufactured cotton are declared to be subject to a duty of 5 cents a pound, and the annual exports of

A GREAT SURPRISE.

The Singular Nobleman Who Wanted an American Heiress.

The American father of the heiress greeted the count who was a suitor for her hand with dignified cordiality.

"Now," said the count, "your daughter has done me the honor of consenting to be my wife. I am called to complete my negotiations."

"All right," wearily said the father. "How much of a cash settlement do you expect?"

"Nothing, sir."

"What! How much will I have to pay for your poker debts?"

"Nothing, sire. I do not gamble."

"How much will I have to pay to redeem your castle?"

"Nothing, sir. It is in fine repair."

"But there must be some expense for me. Out with it!"

"No, sir; nothing. I simply love your daughter and she loves me, and we wish to be married. Is not that enough? Is it not enough to ask you to give me your daughter without your expecting 50?—

"Come to my arms!" exclaimed the American father and tried to fall upon the neck of the delighted count.

But he awoke on the floor, having tumbled from his bed as a finish to his amazing dream.—Judge.

TO ENTER "SOCIETY."

You must Have Treasure, Temperament and Tact.

To enter paradise you had to be good and you had to be dead. To enter society you do not have to be either. On the contrary, though what you do have to be is harder to tell than it is to get there. But certain requisites may be mentioned. These are treasure, temperament and tact. Treasure, which is the lesser of all accomplishments, speaks for itself. Temperament is more complex. Temperament is the art of holding your own on the subject of nothing at all with experts who have devoted their lives to the subject. That is clearly abnormal. Tact, while less unnatural, is more abstruse. Tact is the ability to put your attentions into harmony with those of others about you. Aspirants may be rich, righteous and ready, yet if they lack that ability, whatever their efforts, they are nowhere. If they possess it, then, though they be moneyless, they have only to choose where they want to go and get there—generally speaking, that is, and provided they are not in a hurry. Taste is very mercenite, besides being unbecoming.—Edgar Saltus in Broadway Magazine.

A Memory Test.

A professor of mnemonics had gone to lecture at or near Canterbury. After the lecture was finished he had to wait for his London train. It was a most comfortless day, and he refused to go out for shelter and refreshment. To pass the ill he began to exhibit his feats of memory to the rustics in the bar parlor, and one and all were thunderstruck except the waiter. There is always one simple in every common place, whether of saints or sinners. To what he would be could not unfly size the aerial castle of self hierarchy of that startled potman! In the midst of one of his most difficult feats the whistle sounded of the only train to London to-night" and he ? rushed off to catch it. He caught it at the station, and his reputation caught it in the bar parlor, for the waiter—coming in with some ordered refreshments and finding himself—poised in the corner where he had been sitting and exclaimed, "Silly? Yes, sir, he's far, far, sir, silly!"

The Rich To relish Beggars.

Beggars are now? suppressed in Turkey. The story is? told and they say it is true: about an Arabian lady who by mistake gave a beggar? of Constantinople a gold piece. The? man had left his post when she retur. ned, but one of his colleagues told her? where he resided. It was a fine house and at the door was a servant, who politely informed the lady that "my master is dressing. He will be down soo. n." And then the well groomed beggar, dressed for dinner, appeared and? politely returned the gold piece, exclaiming in the meantime, "Madam, I? am a? beggar, but? embarrassing.—Chambers and Cosmopolitan.

Force of Storm Waves.

The average storm wave is thirty feet in height. The highest storm wave? ever measured were between forty four and forty-eight feet high. The gigantic force of storm waves is shown by the fact that at Skerryvore lighthouse, off the west coast of Scotland, a mass of rock weighing five and a half tons was torn from a cliff seventy-four feet high and hurled a height of seventy-two feet above the sea level, while a mass weighing thirteen and a half tons was torn from a cliff seventy-four feet high.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Explains I at Last.

"The late Dr. Talmage DIX," said a clergyman of New York, "had a droll way of lightening grave subjects with little humorous asides. Once I heard him addressing a graduating class at a medical school. He began in this way:

"Physiologists tell us, gentlemen, that the older a man grows the smaller his brain becomes. This explains why the old man knows nothing and the young one everything."

Observations of a Woman.

Mrs. C. H. Miller in a recent magazine article says: that the people of Brazil are of a jealous disposition, and that is a general rule after the manner of a schoolboy bully. They do not like to see others of their own race succeed, and the better class of Brazilians take no part in the government.

Difficult Breathing

Short breath, fluttering, palpitation, sinking spells are symptoms of a weak heart, struggling to do its work. It must keep the blood in circulation to carry nourishment to all parts, to make flesh, bone and muscle, and remove the worn-out particles. When it cannot do this, it must have help. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure gives strength to the heart nerves and muscles, and increases the heart action.

"I am sorry to say that I am so much improved in health. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is the cause. I think that I should be dead, if I had not taken it. Not one in a million could do for me what Heart Cure has done for me. I was so bad off I could do no work. I had difficulty in getting up from a chair. Now I do all that I think I can. It has enabled me to live without relief the last two years. Before taking Heart Cure my money was all wasting. I had almost given up all hope of being well. Your Heart Cure is the best medicine I ever took. Heart Cure is the great glad news to all suffering from Heart Disease." Mrs. MARY SULLIVAN, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that its first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)

Though he had failed for the present in his main end, perhaps he might get something out of the adventure after all if nothing more than the compensation of Ellen. He had heard that pity was akin to love, and perhaps if he could not secure one Ellen he might in some way, even though conquered, capture the other.

"It's very good of you to say that," he said gravely. "But I have no fault to find. I'm glad it was I rather than another. I have the pleasure of seeing you again, and that is much. If you had kept still a moment longer my men would have been on board and I would have been your host instead of—"

"My prisoner," laughed Captain Evers, interrupting. "Not at all, Captain Evers. Ellen's cousin did not dare take any risks. All the new arrays shape of war to have come full stopped and it said to me, 'Let the stranger in the northeast racing along under a great press of canvas would prove to be the Hartford or the Brooklyn or one of the sister ships, although he did not think so. He stared at her for a while, when Commodore Paulding, who was a wonderfully tricky old sailor, added the last quantum of deceit to the game.

He piled barrels up sufficiently forward of the mainmast to look like a rifle smoke stack and made a smudge at the bottom of them. Black clouds of smoke came pouring out of the top. That was enough for poor Rover. He swung the Greyhound slightly away to the southward to get out of the underlying set. Really, he had nothing to fear from any of his pursuers except the Wanago, but he could take no chances.

"There had been no hesitation about the movements of the Union gunboat. The captain knew exactly what he wanted—the Greyhound—and he stuck to his course without deviation. Evers saw that his purpose was perfectly clear by the time his maneuvers had been completed and he had settled on his course and was coming along like a hurricane. The Greyhound did not lelie her name. She was a remarkably swift goer, and this time she was going for all there was in her. They fed her furnaces with coals and tar. They battened down the safety valves. Mr. Whitney, the mate, took the helm, but try as they might she had ground steadily, fountainwise on the quarter, with a fairly interested spectator of the pursuit. Near him Ellen Evers was officially examined the chasing steamer. But little had been said between these two during these exciting maneuvers. Their position was strange and unusual. Smith had a thousand things he would like to say to the woman he loved, but under the circumstances he felt that the initiative should come from her, more especially as he was her prisoner—although that would soon be changed. Unless something unforeseen happened he knew what would be the result of the chase. It was evident to everybody that the Wanago had the best of the argument, and that unless something gave way a few hours would see the blockade-runner overhauled and captured.

The two stood to gether for a time, then, the captain and his fellow found of themselves to the working of the ship Wanago, which was also checked. The blockade-runner was captured, after all.

CHAPTER V.

So soon as it was safe the Greyhound stopped in obedience to signal. The Wanago was alongside and Captain Chase dispatched a boat to the blockade-runner in charge of Lieutenant Billingham. Mr. Billingham's boat came to the side in a hurry. He had his one wounded impatiently up the gangway as if they expected to meet with a furious resistance before they reached the deck. They were greatly surprised to find everything as quiet and peaceful as a country churchyard. Mr. Smith encountered them at the gangway. As it happened, Mr. Billingham and he had never met before. As Smith was still wearing the Confederate uniform he had donned, the boarding officer naturally mistook him for the Confederate Captain. He saluted him gravely and asked—

"Are you the captain of this ship, sir?"

"I am, sir."

"I am Lieutenant Billingham, of the United States gunboat Wanago, and I have come to tell you—"

"You have, sir," said Smith, smiling.

"Well, I guess not."

"What do you mean?"

"I am in possession of this vessel and I intend to remain so."

"If this is a joke, sir," said Billingham gravely, "it is a very poor one. You are under the guns of the Wanago, you have struck your flag, and if you do not instantly yield me possession I shall proceed to take it by force."

"Why should I yield possession?" laugh ed Smith, who was fond of joking.

"Because you're a rebel and have been captured."

"I'm not a rebel."

"I don't care what you are. You're my prisoner."

"See here, now, Billingham—"

"Lieutenant, sir. I've had enough of this." He turned to his men. "Just take this gentleman off, will you?"

"Well, if this isn't the most naked piracy that is on record! The United States navy ever received at the hands of its friends!" protested Smith plaintively.

"An officer of the United States navy!" exclaimed the astonished boarder. "Why, you—you—"

"Lieutenant Thomas Beckman Smith, of the United States navy, executive officer of the St. Lawrence, lately in command of the United States schooner Alabama, and now in charge of this ship."

"Why didn't you say so before?"

"You didn't ask me, my young friend," answered Smith calmly. "You didn't give me a chance. You were going to take possession of my vessel without giving me an opportunity to explain to you."

"Is this true, Jim Hall?" asked Billingham, looking around curiously.

"I have some—"

A LESSON IN CAMPING.

Early in his woods experience Dick became impressed with the desire to do everything for himself. As this was a natural striving for self-sufficiency, Stewart Edward White says, in "The Forest," that he called a halt in the long trail at about three o'clock one afternoon, in order to give Dick plenty of time to make camp.

New Dick is a good, active, able-bodied boy, possessed of average intelligence and rather more than average force. He even had a theory of a sort. He had read various "Boy Campers on the Trapper's Gulch," "How to Camp Out," "The Science of Woodcraft," and other able works. He certainly had this enough, and confidence enough.

The mysteries of God.—I. Cor. 4:1.

Man is a mysterious being. He strives to understand himself and his surroundings. He thinks intelligently no matter he attempts—to be sure of his ground—to prove his steps. But although he can know himself and his surroundings, he finds himself surrounded by the unknown. The greatest truths are veiled all about by this veil of mystery. He knows that he lives, but he cannot tell whence his life came. He knows that he can lift his hand, but cannot tell how his will contracts the muscle necessary to the act.

The same mystery shrouds the realm of science. Lord Kelvin, in speaking of electricity, said: "Its secret is as entirely guarded today as it was a century ago, and there is no prospect of its revelation." Yet because forces are incomprehensible, men do not deny their existence, but attempts to turn them to practical uses. "The greatest of all mysteries," says Pascal, "is to be conscious of none." The thinking man sees that in life there are unknowable and uses these facts which emerge from it for his well-being and progress.

Now, it is remarkable that many Christians who have conscientiousness deemed that there be no mysteries in religion. Perhaps the reason is because all the doctrines in which its practical duties are set, they will not lend its support to the idea of the mysteries that most of all mystery should meet them in the shape of difficulties, in relates to the deepest questions and the highest duties of being?

Religion has its mysteries. What these could be more illogical about life myst be? Life is a mysterious thing (see Chamber of Ch. Antiquity). Who can set forth infinite perfection? "Canst thou by searching find out God? Thou canst thou find out Shadd?" Who can set forth infinite perfection? "Canst thou by searching find out God? Thou canst find out the Almighty?" Who can set forth infinite perfection? "Canst thou find out the Almighty?" Who can set forth infinite perfection? "Canst thou find out the Almighty?" Who can set forth infinite perfection? WOULD USE TAX LANDS.

Urges Forest Reserves, and Inaugurate a System of Tree Planting.

Although admitting the wisdom of Pennsylvania's purchase of 400,000 acres and New York's 1,000,000 for forest reserves Charles S. Blair of Grand Rapids in addressing the Michigan Forestry association at Battle Creek last week, would not sanction Michigan's purchase of such lands.

"Plain business principles dictate that for the establishment of state reserves the state shall make use of such lands as it now has rather than purchase other land for the purpose," he said. "The fact that the state is getting a mere pittance for state tax lands (an average of 80 cents an acre including those homesteaded, and about $1.08 for those sold) is one argument, but it is insignificant as compared with the folly of parting with the only land the state owns which can be used for state reserves.

"State reserves should be such as can be efficiently and economically administered. Each must therefore be of very considerable magnitude. A thing that is worth doing at all is worth doing adequately. The aim should be, therefore to secure forests of sufficient extent to adequately provide for our certain needs. Hence the state may and should make use of all its forfeited tax land that is available for reserves.

"All of the state's holdings have already been looked over, examined critically and selected carefully by the self interest of those most concerned. An automatic and impartial process of natural selection has been working for many years. The owners of this land as well as the public who might become purchasers have for long years come to the conclusion that this particular land the states own is not worth the taxes which are levied upon it. As a matter of fact there is relatively little of this forfeited tax land purchased by those who require it for the purpose of establishing a home upon it or of converting it into a farm.

"It is conceded that state reserves should be so located and limited that no undue portion of no county should thereby be devoted permanently to growing forests to the exclusion of tillage and occupation, i. e., a wise balance should be preserved between forest areas and areas occupied in other ways adjacent to them.

"Inasmuch as the maintenance of reserves under state ownership will keep large tracts of land off the tax roll, thereby throwing the entire burden of local taxes in the county and township upon the land thereby rendered so private ownership, an undue burden of taxation will be thrown upon those who own land in the counties and townships where the state reserves are maintained by the state for the benefit of the state at large. It is plainly just that an equitable provision for payment should be made by the state of local taxes or a definite sum in lieu thereof. Regard may and should be had to the local advantages which are an offset. Full justice should be done both to the localities and to the state at large in the framing of a tax provision as well as in the determination of the question of compensation."

Cadillac News: There is so much said about the amount of money the county has lost on account of doing without the saloon license that a few figures might enlighten those who are prone to harp on the cost of local option. According to official figures the tax rate in the city for this year will be $16.40 per hundred dollars valuation. Notwithstanding the fact that included in this one fifth of the paving expense and about half of the ten thousand dollars raised for roads, this is a lower tax rate than the city has paid during seven of the ten years last previous. Local option hasn't raised the taxes after all. The city has saved expenses directly and indirectly caused by drunkenness. In fact there is some talk of further saving by reducing the police force, because of the lessening of the work of the department.

How is Your Digestion?

Mrs. Mary Dowling of No. 328 8th Ave., San Francisco, recommends a remedy for stomach trouble. She says: "Gratitude of the wonderful effect of electric bitters in a case of acute indigestion, prompts this testimonial. I am fully convinced that for stomach and liver troubles Electric Bitters is the best remedy on the market today." This great tonic and alterative medicine invigorates the system, purifies the blood and is especially helpful in all forms of female weakness. 50c. at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

FIRES A BENEFIT.

State Game and Forestry Warden Says Forest Fires Were a Blessing in Disguise.

Chas. H. Chapman, former state game warden and now a member of the Michigan forestry commission, makes the surprising statement that forest fires are actually a benefit.

He says that the gain to be derived by these fires exceeds the loss by 75 per cent, and in consequence, while individual losses have been severe and in some cases disastrous, on the whole the commonwealth is winner.

"A conservative estimate of the expense of clearing land and putting it in condition to farm is $20 per acre," says My Chapman. "However, the fires of the past summer have done their work so thoroughly that it will cost a comparatively small sum per acre to prepare the burned areas and make them valuable for agricultural purposes. This means, in the aggregate, an immense saving.

"The biggest fire ever recorded in Chippewa took place in 1894, when the cutting of timber in that county was burned over. It is interesting to note the result. Within the past 25 years settlers have come into the region without any means whatever and by reason of that fire have been enabled to clear the land with but little cost and to put in a paying crop the first year. Today the district is a veritable Eden.

"The early settlers have grown wealthy. The fires this summer in some respects will compare with those of '48, inasmuch as many hundreds of acres of agricultural lands have been burned over. But when it is recalled what advantages are to be derived therefrom the various tracts will be taken up and converted into farms. There have been some severe losses. Considerable valuable timber has been destroyed.

"However, I am taking this into consideration when I state that the relative benefits derived by the fires in comparison to the losses will exceed 75 per cent."

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Council Chambers, Nov. 12th.

At a meeting of the common council held on the above date the following aldermen were present: Wilbur, Swinton, Smith, Gunsolus and Gelkich. Mayor pro tem, Wilbur presiding.

The council proceeded to canvass the vote of the special election to bond the City of Charlevoix for $15,000 to construct a dock on the shore of Pine Lake. The result of the vote was in favor of same and stood—yes 450; no 11.

Alderman Gelken moved that the members of the council be appointed as a committee to act with the Board of Commerce in connection with the coming of the cement plant. The motion was carried by the following vote: Ayes all.

Council adjourned.

After a week of semi darkness Thompsonville is once more ablaze with electric lights, the current having been turned on Thursday night from the newly completed power dam on the Betsey river.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Among other appointments announced by Governor Fred M. Warner Saturday was that of Ira A. Adams, of Hillsdale, member Mackinac Island state park commission, unexpired portion of term ending April 21, 1907, succeeding Chas. H. Miller, Adrian, deceased.

The Soo is talking of a base ball league to include St. Ignace, Mackinac, Cheboygan, Petoskey, Pellston, and Hoyne City in the lower peninsula. If this could be done on such a basis that teams could be supported by the towns, it would be nice, but we are afraid the Soo would make the other towns spend more money than they could afford.

Boyne Hitem: The second dowling well was struck last Saturday at a depth of 99 feet, and the city now has a gal of as fine refin as the world can produce. The new one is discharging from a six inch pipe and it does full the same as the first one. The two are now flowing at the rate of 250,000 gallons daily of as fine drinking water as could be desired.

Extensive operations in lumber for the burned district of Michigan have already commenced. Wages will be $21 to $23 and board, about 15 per cent higher than last season. An immense amount of timber will be cut to save it. Men who owned tracts of cedar burned over will save all possible ties and posts, while those whose cedar swamps escaped the flames, will get it out this winter to prevent possible loss next year. The prospects for an excellent winter in the woods are good.

He was a soldier by occupation, a strong type of manhood, industrious, honest and generous and during the half century since he first came to this region has done much toward up-building the country.

At the recent sessions of the boards of supervisors of Antrim and Kalkaska counties an appropriation of $500 was made by the former county and $250 by the latter to pay the expense of developing a seven foot channel through Torch River. The contract for dredging has been let to Capts. Joseph Hawley and Ira Sharp, who began work last week, using a sand pump. Since the close of navigation they have constructed a breakwater at the entrance to Torch Lake. The contract calls for a channel seven feet in width, and thirty-five rods in length.

He came to this city when there was but one other residence here, a Mr. Hatt, now deceased. He is practically the father of the city, having made the first plat in this place. In 1857 he made the first plat of the village; in 1888 the first addition was laid out, and in 1893 the second was platted. Mr. Beardsley gave two lots to the Methodist Episcopal church and the lot on which the Presbyterian church now stands with a $200 contribution for a building. The beautiful city park with its magnificent grove of twenty three different forest trees, was a gift from him to the village.

SENTINEL "LINERS" BRING RESULTS

HIS OWN BAIT.

The Giant Alligator Snapping Turtle as a Fisherman.

There is a camo reptile fisherman which makes effective use of the bait which he carries in his own mouth. This is the alligator snapping turtle, a giant among reptiles, known to attain a maximum weight of 144 pounds, with a length of shell of about twenty-eight inches. It inhabits rivers flowing into the gulf of Mexico, including the Mississippi, where it is common. In appearance and actions it is an enlarged duplicate of the common snapping turtle. Its pale brown hues well matched the muddy bottoms of streams in its habitat, lurking for fish with the decoy. The bait is situated inside the lower jaw, close to the tongue, and is a well developed filament of flesh, white and other tints, with the resemblance of a large grub. While waiting the turtle keeps this grub in motion, giving it the aspect of crawling along on a small elevation of ground. Its mouth colored shell, often studded with a growth of fine, waving moss, looks like a great round stone, and close to it is a second smaller one above the back. Close to this smaller stone crawls the plump white grub. A fish sees it and makes a natural dash for it

FOR FREE ENTRY OF SUGAR.

Ways and Means Committee Hears Argument on New Tariff Law.

Consumers of sugar in the United States were particularly interested in the hearing before the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives in Washington for the presentation of arguments for further lowering of duties on sugar and its manufactures. The tight for free entry of sugar was made on the claim that the consumer does not get any benefit from the existing duty. It was also asserted that the present rate of duty on raw sugar is too great, considering the American sugar growers, on the record, can supply about one-fourth of the demand, or, if they can, at most, double their present production of 1,352,584 tons last year, including the output of the Hawaiian Islands, which enjoy a preferential rate of 25 per cent less than the duty imposed on the foreign tariff line. Cuba, which has a bounty of 2 per cent reduction in the established rate of duty on sugar, in accordance with the provisions of the reciprocal treaty, produces about as much sugar as the United States. The Hawaiian Islands, which, on July 30, 1897, prepared for the annexation of the Islands from the Hawaiian Islands, and thus in favor of free entry of their sugar, which were crop that the same should be extended to Hawaii should be granted to the Philippines.

Frank W. Hitchcock, chairman of the Republican National Committee, will probably be rewarded with a place in the cabinet.

Norman E. Mack, Democratic national chairman, said: "My opinion is that Mr. Bryan will be elected on the United States Senate, and if he is he will be the best Senator the country has had in a generation."

Maryland's vote in the Electoral College is stated by Democrats to be for Taft and six for Bryan. Four years ago Roosevelt carried one and Parker when the Democrat of chosen results through the vote of the Democrats, and Taft has placed a crown on the head of the first one of two names in the election of the salmon. They supposed that by so doing they would expand the strength of the Republican party, whereas their votes counted only for those names some crime, they about crowns.

Speculation is already rife as to Mr. Taft's cabinet. Taft's friends say that he will be continued as Secretary of War Secretary of Commerce and Labor may be succeeded by Gifford Pinchot, the young millionaire who at present is chief of the forestry service. Attorney General Bonaparte, who managed Taft's campaign, wants to be Secretary of the Navy. Senator Lodge, Jr., secretary to the President, will have a cabinet position, this time in the footsteps of Dan Lamont and Cortelyou.

CURRENT COMMENT

Five Thousand New Houses.

Five thousand new houses were witnessed—perhaps for the last time—in Washington last week. This is the first time in the United States—the opening of a new era in the history of the country.

The same thing may happen in Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Tacoma, Butte, Reservation, eight hundred and twenty-three and twenty-five. Seattle, which was completely gutted by fire Sunday, lost 823 houses, and in Wisconsin Bay, Oshkosh, was flooded by water, and the stock damaged to the extent of hundreds of dollars. The Guardian Trust Company owns the building, which, with the loss will aggregate $250,000, practically covered by insurance. Two firemen were fatally injured.

Schools and Colleges

Is there a school book trust? This question has been raised on the recent action in the purchase of school children's text books and school trustees at Chicago have begun a investigation of the so called book trust, or the American Book Company. The latter concern has not cease out in the open with a long advertisement in the leading public and weekly papers giving the statistics of the school book publishing business in the country and that there are in this country now over 120 independent publishers of school books and that open and unlimited competition still prevails. Figures are quoted showing that there is one $12,000,000 capital engaged in the school book business and that out of that total no single publisher has over $3,000,000. The advertisement says that the idea that a trust in this line is merely an agre conceived by by rival publishers to injure the American Book Company in the public mind. Its business is not in any way controlling, and in Texas in determine whether or the company is a trust or not, it being held that the suit was inspired by the thirty-six other houses competing for the school patronage in that State.

DENY OIL REHEARING WITH SHARP REBUKE

Rejects Appellate Court Government's Petition in Case of the Big Landlg Fine.

RESENT CRITICISM IN PLEA.

Next Move Will Be an Application for Review by United States Supreme Court.

The petition by the United States government for a rehearing of the appeal of the Standard Oil company of Indiana from the $29,240,000 fine of Judge Landis was overruled by Judges Grosscup, Baker and Seaman in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago. In a brief opinion, delivered by Judge Grosscup, the original opinion of the court, reversing Judge Landis' decision, was upheld. The case now lies in the hands of Attorney General Bonaparte, and it is expected that he will apply for a writ of certiorari to the United States Supreme Court in order to obtain a review of the big case by the country's highest tribunal.

The contents of the petition for rehearing, which had the signatures of Attorney General Bonaparte and Dist. Attorney Edwin W. Sims attached to it, are almost wholly devoted to the previous opinion, reference being made in but two points of contention. Then the opinion concludes with what takes to be a rebuke to the government attorneys for the manner in which they published for another hearing of the appeal. The Federal lawyers were not sparing in their caustic dare and jeers on the Appellate Judges' decision on the appeal.

Fine Could Not Exceed $20,000.

Answering to the judgment, the petitioner of the oil company could have been properly issued only on the settlements made to the Chicago and Alton Railway, from which it was accused of accepting concessions. There were thirty-six of these settlements, and the maximum fine for all these could have been but $720,000 and the minimum $20,000.

In answer to the government's objection that under the doctrine of the brief or court a corporation may use a subsidiary corporation to commit crime, while escaping punishment, the court adds to the opinion as follows:

"True is it that if one corporation uses another corporation to violate law, just as if one individual uses another to violate the law, such offender ought not, though masked, to go unpunished. And there are ways, as old as the law itself, to reach and punish him.

October Business Tottered.

EIGHT ARE SLAIN BY OKLAHOMA DESPERADO

Murderer, at Bay with Rifle, Defies Mob Until He is Shot Down.

DIES IN BURNING FORTRESS.

Militia Is Called Out to Quell Threatened Outbreak in Town of Okmulgee.

Eight persons were killed in a fray at Okmulgee, Ok., Sunday afternoon, which started when an Indian and a negro fought, in attempting to arrest the negro seven men were killed, including the sheriff and assistant sheriff of police, and man were wounded. The desperado was the eighth victim, being riddled with bullets when finally from his burning house.

More than two dozen were fired in the melee, hardware stores being looted for the mob to secure weapons, and at one time the town was in the hands of the lawless. Gov. Haskell ordered ten companies of militia to Okmulgee on the southern frontier.

Charles Dunlap, a negro, and Steve Grayson, an Indian, had a fight in the street, in which the Indian was badly used up. Dunlap was arrested by officers and mobs complicated. Assistant Chief of Police Grant Kimler charged the negro with the crime. While way detained two negroes, Ruff and Fields, charged with the murder of Chief Kimler. When the officers came up to the jail to take the negroes from Deputy Sheriff Dickerson, a fusillade of shots was fired and killed to great Deckard. Before the negro could be captured he killed four.

Barred Out of House.

Deckard then ran to his home near by, barricaded himself and men surrounded the next house, thinking he was there, and set the house on fire. Seeing that his house would soon be ablaze, Deckard ran to the next house and barred out his family, and barred so that he could not stay in it longer, made a rush right through the crowd and emptied a shotgun and pistol at him and he fell dead. The crowd set fire to the house and in the town and it is feared that further serious trouble would follow.

The mob control valley after valley into the burning building and half a dozen shots were fired by the mob were struck by stray bullets and more or less seriously injured. The Okmulgee authorities called in almost a hundred deputy marshals and posses to aid their local officers.

Malodjustment and Depravity.

Edward T. Devine, editor of Charities in the current number of that magazine, says that the question of the minimum cause for dependence and criminality is a malodjustment between the personal capacity. He says he has no disposition to underrate the force of heredity and sentimentality to carry the place of depravity, and yet he is inclined to believe the traditional attitude of these whose personal fault or shortcoming is was the same length as that of Mr. Hammond, and Lizer is good plain, honest girl, married to a Laporte dentist, and found in the debris, was positively identified, contrary to these facts, which will form the basis of the prosecution's contention that Mrs. Hammond is dead, the defense will introduce testimony of one of the coroner's board of physicians, who will testify that they had found some not that of Mrs. Hammond and the remarkable coincidence that the male identifying features of the woman's body were missing when the coroner's board made its report.

The body supposed to be that of Mrs. Hammond was found in the debris of a grain elevator. The woman's right arm was somewhat more formed in good condition, which work as it was destroyed.

The State opened the case with apparent confidence that the network of circumstantial evidence was strong enough to leave no doubt in the minds of the twelve men as to the complicity of Lizer Lizer in the murder of her husband, and to show that it was the woman's forced return from the house in which Mrs. Hammond and her children met death.

FACTS FOR FARMERS

A mass meeting of cotton growers and allied interests of the South generally will be held in Memphis.

Rains in the winter wheat belt west of the Mississippi have improved the crop prospects in that district.

New corn is being marketed freely in the Southern States and considerably in Europe are being made from the gulf ports.

Flooding has been seriously delayed this year in the rice belt of Louisiana and Texas by the drought. In some localities it will be the middle of the month before the work can be completed.

A law has been passed by the State Missouri legislature, allowing co-operative associations to combine for the purpose of marketing their products, exemption from the laws of the State.

The demand for cassava for the insecticide industry has caused a rise in the price of the tuber, which is used in the manufacture of the insecticide, and the acreage devoted to the cultivation of the plant will be increased.

CHINA'S WOMAN RULER DIES.

Closing of Wonderful Political Career of Aged Dowager Empress.

Tzu Hsi, the Dowager Empress of China and the most powerful woman in the world, is dead. The end of that remarkable woman, married in her 16th, or sixteenth, year to an emperor, during more than half a century, of nearly one-third of the world's population, came at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. That is the official announcement from the Imperial palace which follows the news less than twenty-four hours before of the death of the Emperor, Kuang Hsu.

With the announcement of the end of the empress dowager's career of unbounded power, cruelty and unbridled passion an official edict placing upon the throne of China Prince Pu Yi, 3-year-old son of Prince Chun, regent of the empire.

The deceased empress was 74 years of age, and in every one of the years of her life she was never counted startling events, thrills for the entire world. In the same time she had conducted unceasing among the millions in China. Though pronounced wicked, cruel, ex-

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

The Southern Railway connect with Finland, of the Red Star line, are in the future to be known as the Finland.

Commercial failures in the United States for the month of October, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., numbered 1,187, against 1,138 last month and 1,353 in October, 1904. The liabilities in October, 1905, were $15,936,098 in amounts of defaulted, which represents an opinion against the business world of the country, which they need to claim in the net. Nine of the failures were in the industrial group, a slight increase in current and other trade groups, giving manufacturing the lead in the number of failures, as in the preceding month last year, but the actual number of failures in each group was the smallest in the history of the country.

Bradstreet's Review says that the Chicago Board of Trade, the Boston Stock Exchange and the Chicago Stock Exchange are the three most powerful institutions in the country, and that the decisions of these institutions are accepted as the final decisions of the country. The Chicago Board of Trade is the most powerful institution of the country, and its decis

ODD USES FOR FISH.

One Makes a Good Barometer, Another a Weathercock.

Fishes have been put to many queer uses while still alive, but probably the strangest was that suggested to the war department by an inventor. The proposition of submarine torpedoes was the subject under discussion, and he proposed that a shark be implanted in a tube at the rear end of the projectile, its movements to be controlled by the active application of electricity. In case the shark attempted to swim away it was to be given an electric shock and in this way kept on its course until the torpedo had reached its target.

Another remarkable use to which a fish has been put is as a barometer. The shark is very susceptible to atmospheric changes, and when retained in an aquarium is likely to throw itself out at the approach of or during any remarkable change of wind or weather, or if in a pond or stream will sometimes jump on the bank. It has been kept alive in aquaria as a living barometer from the supposition that certain movements indicate particular changes that are about to occur in the weather. In Russia the dead body of Porus gobio, the miller's thumb, is used as a weathercock. Hung by a single thread, it will point to the direction whence the wind blows.—Minneapolis Journal.

MULES OF MEXICO.

They Are Even More Knowing Than Our Own Meek Brand.

"Everybody knows that all mules are brainy, but the mules of old Mexico have something on other mules for a sort of prescience of their own," said a man who has spent many years in the neighboring republic. "A Mexican mule will do just so much work and not a blessed bit more.

"The riding mule, for instance, is fully aware of the distance, down to a rod, he is supposed and required to traverse in the progress of one traveling day, and all the sharp sticks or goads or dynamite on earth won't get him to do a bit more than what he knows to be the correct distance. The Mexicans have got a peculiar saying in connecting with this characteristic of the Mexican mule. You ask a Mexican, for instance, how far it is by mule back to such and such a point.

"'Two days' journey if you are not curious, but three days if you are in a hurry,' the Mexican will reply.

"His meaning is that if you don't ask more of your mule than you should ask of him, the mule will be able to make the trip in two days. But if you attempt to drive the brute he'll sulker on you, and in consequence the journey will take you three days."—Exchange.

To take a picture of your voice it is only necessary to tie a sheet of thin, strong paper over the wide end of a tin trumpet. Hold it with the sheet of paper upward, take a thin pinch of fine sand and place it in the center of the paper, hold the trumpet vertically above your face and sing a note into the lower end. Do not blow, but sing the note. Lower the trumpet carefully and look at the sand. You will find that the vibrations of your voice have scattered the pinch of sand into a beautiful sound picture. Every note in the musical scale will produce a different picture, so you may produce a great variety of them. Some of these pictures look like pansies, roses and other flowers; some look like snakes and others like flying birds. In fact, there is no limit to the variation.

The Gila Monster.

The Gila monster is a large, clumsy lizard from one to two feet long. He is generally too lazy to be dangerous, but if his anger is once aroused he will grip you with a clutch of a bulldog, turning over as he bites so that the venom—which is secreted in a gland in the lower jaw instead of the upper, like the rattlesnake—is pretty sure to mix well with the saliva and so make his attack fatally effective. His five toed hands and feet render him adept at tree climbing. In his wild estate he lives on young rabbits and birds' eggs. When captured, he eats only eggs or a little chopped meat mixed with them.—Los Angeles Times.

Amount of Rainfall Over the Earth.

The discussion of observations on rainfall made first by Sir John Murray and later by Hrnckner and Pritsche permits an estimation to be made of the mean rainfall on continents, which is found to be about thirty inches per year. The rainfall on the ocean is more difficult to measure, but it has been estimated by Supan and Pritsche, taking account of all the known facts, estimates the mean annual rainfall for the entire surface of the earth at about thirty-six inches. Making use of this number, it is easy to calculate that the total rainfall amounts to 464 million millions of metric tons per year, 1,272 thousand millions of tons per day, 53,000 millions of tons per hour, and 15,000,000 tons per minute or 250,000 tons per second.—Scientific American.

Simple Method of Cooking Cabbage.

The simplest and quickest method of cooking cabbage are the best. Cabbage must be thinned and well washed, cut, cubed water, then cut into quarters and tied together again with a string before going into the source. Remove the heart is more tender than the outside and cuttings are wasteful of desired. Have plenty of boiling water with a heaping tablespoonful of salt to the half gallon of water. Let it be boiling when the cabbage is put in and cook it with the lid off, and it will be fresh it will keep a good color. The time depends more upon the age than the size—from twenty to forty minutes.—Delineator.

A Crab Habit.

Catch a fresh crab, mark the end of one of its claws and watch with wonderful growth it will tear off the marked member. Is it pride that causes him to do this bit of surgical work, or is he afraid of being hobbling or is it because the malformed claw might interfere his speed or entangle him in the submarine botany? The crab is an irascible creature and, like his kinsmen the lobster, is so scrappy as to game bantam, often losing a limb in a scuffle.—Exchange.

THE BUCKBOARD.

Invented in the Year 1820 by a Pennsylvania Doctor.

Though the name "buckboard" is applied to thousands of carriages, few people know how the word came to be used.

Back around 1820, says the American Vehicle, in explaining it, when the transportation of goods, wares and merchandise was almost entirely by wagon, a Dr. Buck, who for many years afterward was the military storekeeper at Washington, was in charge of military stores en route to army posts in the northwest.

In east Tennessee much difficulty was experienced by reason of the rough roads, and there were frequent mishaps, mostly from the wagons overturning.

Dr. Buck overhauled the outfit, and, abandoning the wagon bodies, long boards were set directly on the axles of long boxes, and the stores were loaded in such a manner that there were no further delays from breakdowns, and the stores safely reached their destination. In special emergency, too, the load could be shifted or taken off in a hurry.

The idea was globally not new, but Dr. Buck's example was followed, especially when roads were rough, and soon much hauling was done by the use of wheels, axles and boards only.

Now we have the buckboard, both in carriage and automobile forms, coming forward comedy to the original idea, though few suspect the source of it.—San Francisco Chronicle.

HAD BEEN IN JAIL.

Yet It Did Not Prejudice His Standing as a Witness.

An important case was being tried before the criminal court of the District of Columbia. An old negro was in the witness box. The district attorney cross-examined:

"What is your name?"

"John Williams, sah."

"Are you the John Williams who was sent to the Albany penitentiary for larceny?"

"No, sah—not this John."

"Are you the John Williams who was convicted of arson and sent to the Baltimore penitentiary?"

"No, sah."

"Have you ever been in any penitentiary?"

"Yes, sah."

All eyes were now turned upon the witness. The district attorney smiled complacently and resumed:

"How many times have you been in the penitentiary?"

"Twice, sah."

"Where?"

"In Baltimore, sah."

"How long were you there the first time?"

"About two hours, sah."

"How long the second time?" asked the attorney, rather crestfallen.

"An hour, sah. I went there to witnesseah a cell that was wanted for a lawyer who had robbed his client."

The attorney sat down amid the laughter of the spectators.

The Effort of His Life a Failure.

W. S. Gilbert had a novel experience before he wrote for the stage. When he was a barrister walking for his first brief. It was long in coming, and when it did come Mr. Gilbert determined, of course, to make the effort of his life.

He was interested with the prosecution of an old Irish woman for stealing a coat, and when he began the speech that he had prepared and rehearsed so carefully, the old dame at once began to interject: "Oh, ye divil, sit down!" "Sure, now, he's a lder, yer honor!" "Sit down, ye spalpeen!" "He's known to all the perlice, yer honor!" After some minutes of this abuse Gilbert asked the recorder's intervention, but the official was too busy laughing. So the effort of his life was not a success.

The Deceased Wife's Sister.

The law against marrying a deceased wife's sister, which caused so much discussion in England, grew out of the ancient tribal law forbidding a father to sell more than one daughter to the same man when the Britons was emerging from polygamy and when for 31 siblings of the present money a man might dismiss his wife or kill her if she would not do so. As civil law it was to protect the living wife and knit tribes closer together by intermarriage. When ecclesiastical law became supreme a liberating of some Scripture text was used to put the sister of a man's wife among the prohibited degrees of relationship. This was the act of 1041 (St Henry VIII): "A man may not marry his deceased wife's sister or her daughter, but he may marry his first cousin."—London Standard.

Brittle Lizards.

Some kinds of lizards break in two when somebody startled. In the south in Australia the traveler often comes across a species of lizard, which, if apprehensive, leaping on a log or piece of wood, and, as soon as they perceive the intruder there is a great commotion. They dart hither and thither so quick that the eye can scarcely follow their movements. The effects of the lizards are evident from the quivering and wriggling tails lying about which have been cast off in the hurry, while the mutilated owners may be seen scurrying away to safety still wagging the stumps that remain.

Density of City Population.

Although there is a certain area of about three acres in half acre on Manhattan island in which the density of population is at the rate of 760,000 to the square mile, yet the city of Paris shows a far greater average density of population than New York, the figure for Paris being 70,300 a square mile and for New York city proper 40,000 a square mile. The average density of London's population is 36,000 a square mile and that of Berlin 67,000.—Federation Review.

Spasms
St. Vitus' Dance
Many persons who suffered from fits, or those from epilepsy, fits, spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance are today well. The strengthening influence of Dr. Miles' Nervine upon the shattered nerves having restored them to perfect health.
"I endured agony that words cannot express from St. Vitus' dance, nervous and spasmodic fits, and epilepsy, and despaired of ever being cured, but the more I took of this medicine the worse I grew. My mother's decision saved me. After she had become worn out with my care, she read of the good fortune of others who had been helped by the advice of a relatives who procured a bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine. To the great surprise of all, the medicine at once began to do me good. I was soon able to walk, I was well, and in robust health."
MRS. ELLA M. TINDALL, North Manchester, Indiana.
"Our little boy Harry, had spasms during the night and would be so tired with many physicians, he complained so much of his head. We had spasms in one week he was well and has been so ever since. We ought to be thankful to Dr. Miles' Nervine. We tried many things in vain before we found your remedy, but the spasms had disappeared and have not been seen now for years. We will always recommend Dr. Miles' Nervine."

The Mexicans have got a peculiar saying in connection with this characteristic of the Mexican mule. You ask a Mexican, for instance, how far it is by mule back to such and such a point.

"'Two days' journey if you are not rushed, but three days if you are in a hurry,' the Mexican will reply.

"His meaning is that if you don't ask more of your mule than you should ask of him, the mule will be able to make the trip in two days. But if you attempt to drive the brute he'll sulkier on you, and in consequence the journey will take you three days."—Exchange.

To take a picture of your voice it is only necessary to tie a sheet of thin, strong paper over the wide end of a tin trumpet. Hold it with the sheet of paper upward, take a thin pinch of fine sand and place it in the center of the paper, hold the trumpet vertically above your face and sing a note into the lower end. Do not blow, but sing the note. Lower the trumpet carefully and look for the sand. You will find that the vibrations of your voice have scattered the pinch of sand into a beautiful sound picture. Every note in the musical scale will produce a different picture, so you may produce a great variety of them. Some of these pictures look like parades, roses and oak leaves; some look like snakes and others like flying birds. In fact, there is no limit to the variation.

The Gila Monster.

The Gila monster is a large, clumsy lizard from one to two feet long. He is generally too lazy to be pugnacious, but if his anger is once aroused he will grip you with a clutch of a bulldog, turning over as he bites so that the venom—which is secreted in a gland in the lower jaw instead of the upper, like the rattlesnake—is pretty sure to mix well with his saliva and so make his attack fatally effective. His five long hands are feet rather than adapted at least climbing. In his wild state he lives on young rabbits and birds' eggs. When captured, he eats only eggs or a little chopped meat mixed with them.—Los Angeles Times.

Amount of Rainfall Over the Earth.

The discussion of observations on rainfall made first by Sir John Murray and later by Brückner and Frinche permits an estimation to be made of the mean rainfall on continents, which is found to be about thirty inches per year. The rainfall on the ocean is more difficult to measure, but it has been estimated by Supan, and Frinche, taking account of all the known facts, estimates the mean annual rainfall for the entire surface of the earth at about thirty six inches. Making use of this number, it is easy to calculate that the total rainfall amounts to 404 million millions of metric tons per year, 1,277 thousand millions of tons per day, 53,000 millions of tons per hour, 883,000 tons per minute or 15,000,000 tons per second.—Scientific American.

Simple Method of Cooking Cabbage.

The simplest and quickest methods of cooking cabbage are the best. Cabbage must be trimmed and well scrubbed in cold, salted water, then cut into quarters and tied together again with a string before going into the saucepan, because the heart is more tender than the outside and uniform softness is desired. Have plenty of boiling water with a heaping tablespoonful of salt to the half gallon of water. Let it be boiling when the cabbage is put in and cook it with the lid off, and it is to be fresh it will keep a good color. The time depends more upon the age than the size from twenty to forty minutes.—Delineator.

A Crab Habit.

Catch a fresh crab, watch the end of one of his claws and watch with what fierce wrath it will turn on the unlucky member. Is it pride that causes him to do this bit of surgical work, or is he afraid of blood poisoning, or is it because the maimed claw might observe his speed or estimate him by the submarine botany? The crab is an interesting creature and, like his big cousin, the lobster, is as scrappy as a game bantam, often losing a limb in a scrap.—Exchange.

THE BUCKBOARD.

Invented in the Year 1822 by a Pennsylvania Dester.

Though the name "buckboard" is applied to thousands of carriages, few people know how the word came to be used.

Back around 1820, says the American Vehicle, in explaining it, when the transportation of goods, wares and merchandise was almost entirely by wagon, a Dr. Buck, who for many years afterward was the military storekeeper at Washington, was in charge of military stores en route to army posts in the southwest.

In east Tennessee much difficulty was experienced by reason of the rough roads, and there were frequent mishaps, mostly from the wagons overturning.

Dr. Buck overhauled the outfit, and, abandoning the wagon bodies, long boards were set directly on the axles to hold them. Then the stores were loaded in such a manner that there were no further losses from breakdowns, and the stores safely reached their destination. In special emergency, too, the load could be shifted or taken off in a hurry.

The idea was globally not new, but Dr. Buck's example was followed, especially when roads were rough, and soon much hauling was done by the use of planks, axles and boards only.

Now we have the buckboard, both in carriage and automobile forms conforming closely to the original idea, though few suspect the source of it.—San Francisco Chronicle.

HAD BEEN IN JAIL.

Yet it Did Not Prejudice His Standing as a Witness.

An important case was being tried before the criminal court of the District of Columbia. An old negro was in the witness box. The district attorney commenced:

"What is your name?"

"John Williams, sah."

"Are you the John Williams who was sent to the Albany penitentiary for larceny?"

"No, sah—not this John."

"Are you the John Williams who was convicted of arson and sent to one Baltimore penitentiary?"

"No, sah."

"Have you ever been in any penitentiary?"

"Yes, sah."

All eyes were now turned upon the witness. The district attorney smiled complacently and resumed:

"How many times have you been in the penitentiary?"

"Twice, sah."

"Where?"

"In Baltimore, sah."

"How long were you there the first time?"

"About two hours, sah."

"How long the second time?" asked the attorney, rather crestfallen.

"An hour, sah. I went there to subpoena a cell that was wanted for a lawyer who had robbed his client."

The Effort of His Life a Failure.

W. S. Gilbert had a novel experience before he wrote for the stage. While he was a barrister waiting for his first brief. It was late in the evening when it did come to him. Mr. Gilbert determined, of course, to make the effort of his life.

He was interested with the prosecution of an old Irish woman for stealing a coat, and when he began the speech that he had prepared and rehearsed so carefully, the old dame at once began to interpret: "Oh, ye divil, sit down!" "Sure, now, he's a liter, yer honor!" "Sit down, ye spalpeen!" "He's known to all the perlice, yer honor!" After some minutes of this action Gilbert asked the recorder's protection, but the effect of facial was too busy laughing. So the effort of his life was not a success.

The Deceased Wife's Sister.

The law against marrying a deceased wife's sister, which caused so much discussion in England, grew out of the ancient primitive law forbidding a father to well more than one daughter in the same year when the Britons were emerging from polygamy and were for 21 shillings of the present money a man might chastise his wife or sell her if she would not go. As civil law it was to protect the living wife and knit tribes closer together by more marriages. When ecclesiastical law became supreme a literalizing of some Scripture text was used to put the sister of a man's wife among the prohibited degrees of relationship. This was the act of 1541, 32 Henry VIII. "A man may not marry his deceased wife's sister or her daughter, but he may marry his first cousin."—London Standard.

Brittle Lizards.

Some kinds of lizards break in two when suddenly startled. In the bush in Australia the traveler often comes across a number of these little lizard reptiles totaling 50 to 100 in place or out lurk. As soon as they perceive the traveler there is a great commotion. They dart hither and thither so quickly that the eye can scarcely follow their movements. The effects of the shock are evident from the quantity of writhing tails lying about while have been cast off. The severed tails continued convulsive for a long time, and the writhing tails may be seen scurrying away to safety still wagging the stumps that remain.

Density of City Population.

Although there is a certain area of Chicago that is more thickly peopled than any other area in the world, Manhattan Island where the density of population is at the rate of 450,000 to the square mile, yet the city of Paris shows a far greater average density of population than New York, the figures for Paris being 70,300 a square mile and for New York, the present 50,000 a square mile. The average density of London's population is 37,000 a square mile and that of Berlin 67,000.—Federation Review.

Spasms
St. Vitus' Dance

Many persons who suffered from spasms from epilepsy; fits, spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance are today well. The strengthening influence of Dr. Miles' Nervine upon the shattered nerves having restored them to perfect health.

"I endured agony that words cannot express from St. Vitus' dance, which left me a wreck, nervously speaking. Sometimes I shuddered with a chill, other times my frame would be racked with convulsive spasms. Five physicians attended me without benefit, as well as many well-recommended remedies, but after taking Dr. Miles' Nervine I improved rapidly, and now am cured." MRS. FELICE M. Overheard in Broadway:

"When I scuffle with him, just before I strangle him, you rush forward, knock the bottle of poison from my hand and say: 'Fair play, fair play.' Then grab the two pistols, rush to the window, yell cheer, and yell: 'Stand back! I shoot to kill!' CHAPTER V.—(Continued.)

"Do you mean to tell me that you have captured this slim single-handed?"

"Absolutely alone," replied Smith, coolly. "I didn't even have a weapon, as you see. The enemy yielded to my mission, shaky and sadly. I guess I charmed them with my beauty." He doffed his red hood and freckled face in front of the other. "Seriously, though," he added, making pile on the mantelpiece of the young officer, "when they saw it was all up with their ships kindly struck in me, if it hadn't been for your gunboats, the Wampo I would have been leaking for water to a rebel prison in this time."

"How did you get aboard?" asked Jim, in a few brief words Smith explained the situation.

"Do the lady betrayed you?"

"She did," answered the other quietly.

"Why?" said Dillingham. "You have a chance to get even now."

"I have," returned Lieutenant Smith.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" asked the lady.

"No, with the prize. I wash my hands of women," replied the young officer—he had just turned twenty-two, and therefore knew all there was to be known about the mysterious sex.

"Pooty," said Smith. "If you please, we'll secure the Greyhound's crew, overhaul the ship's papers, and be off to unit the Commodore's company with the old wooden ponder, and my detachment joins me from the little Hudson at Jane."

The Pinder was twelve sharp for away. She had stopped firing her guns in fact. She and the St. Lawrence were both coming up rapidly, and it was time for them to secure the two officers and their men until the Commodore arrived. The officers were soon assembled fore and aft. The officers were sent to their cabins and the papers were examined. With these various duties the time rapidly passed on till the old frigate hove to alongside within easy hailing distance.

"Have you got her?" asked Commodore Paulding, standing on the weather rail.

To this utterly unnecessary question Smith answered in the affirmative.

"Well done, and go, lieutenant, Commodore," he called across the narrow space. "If I hadn't been for the Wampo yonder, the Greyhound would have got away from us, taking us along."

"How is that, sir?" cooed the Commodore.

"It's a long story, sir. I'm coaxing aboard immediately and I'll tell you then."

Lowrie Mr. Dillingham in charge of the prize, Smith was presently round to the frigate.

"Well, sir," he said as he saluted the Commodore, "I want to congratulate you, Commodore, on the richest prize that has been taken in this war. That ship and her cargo ought to total up something like four hundred thousand dollars. Besides the remanent for the Eliza, she's chock-a-block with all sorts of military supplies, stores, medical stuff, clothing, everything that could be used in the rebel rebels."

"Good!" said the old Commodore, "we owe you a lot."

"No, sir. You owe every Pole to me."

"How is that?"

"I sighted the blockade-runner from the Cheat early this morning. I was in private signals, and carried out the program you and I had arranged it, until I came to the boarding party."

"You got aboard, though?"

"Yes, sir, but I hadn't more than put my foot on the deck when someone on the Greyhound recognized me. The captain, a lanky man with his legs and arms with his wits, then overboard the blackjacker following me. I grappled with the captain instantly and called for our men to board, but in the confusion the boat had gone north from the steamer. They got way on the ship immediately, and in the time I had the captain down she was slipping along at a terrific rate. The boat could not get alongside again. They made some good practice with the pivot on the Pinder, but did no damage. By the way, sir, I have in report that Midshipman Dillingham, who was left by a ribbon in the hands of Captain Evers while he was trying to board the prize. He informs me by line that the Pinder might have got her, or sunk her, than."

"Big pretty, sir," interrupted a midshipman at this moment, "Pinder's deck's complicated, sir, and we was too tell you that the Pinder is alongside and requests that Midshipman Robinson is slightly wounded, sir, other casualties."

"That's good," said Commodore Paulding. "Go on, Mr. Smith."

"There's no more to tell, sir," said Smith.

"You have forgotten one item, though," said the old man; "who was it recognized you?"

"A lady, sir."

"A lady? What lady?"

"Miss Alice, sir."

"What, the Eliza?" laughed the Commodore.

"The same."

"Well, that was hard luck."

"I'll call it very good luck, indeed, sir. If you will permit me," said Smith gravely, "to pass on the Greyhound's crew, I'm tired enough."

"Explain yourself," said Paulding.

"Well, sir, I don't mind telling you that I have been very much interested in Miss Alice for far more."

"A moment, sailor," exclaimed the old commodore, smiling. "Your name?"

"Jim, or any name."

"I have no doubt we have degenerated since this time," said I, resumed the lieutenant, smiling in his turn. "I don't mind telling you, either, that her father will have none of me. Now that I have captured the ship, I want have a chance to propose."

"But you aren't going to take the young lady with you when you cut out the prize?"

"Yes, sir—at least, not exactly. Just before I left the Pinder I had her on my conscience. Now where can will be safe and comfortable? I'm sure I can find without difficulty."

"Here, with your permission, of course," said the young lieutenant, laughing at the idea of his proposition.

"Why, sir, I don't know that I can do that. I'm in the frigate." he said.

"That wouldn't do at all, sir," said Smith coolly. "Well, I'm ready to go in a barge for a month, and I'm sure you wouldn't care to make a young lady a prisoner of war."

"Are there any other women on the Hibbalo, sir?" asked Paulding, intensely disapproving.

"Yes, sir, but I hadn't more than put my foot on the deck when someone on the Greyhound recognized me. The captain, a lanky man with his legs and arms with his wits, then overboard the blackjacker following me. I grappled with the captain instantly and called for our men to board, but in the confusion the boat had gone north from the steamer. They got way on the ship immediately, and in the time I had the captain down she was slipping along at a terrific rate. The boat could not get alongside again. CAPT. DAHLMER'S FUNERAL.

Dunkirk Fishermen All Unite to Honor the Memory of the Veteran.

We take the following from the Dunkirk, (N. Y.) papers.

"The funeral of Captain Axel B. Dahlmer was held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from the family home on West Front street. Rev. B. A. Ginader, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, conducted the services at the house. There were many beautiful cut flowers and floral pieces which expressed the sympathy of the many friends of the family. The attendance was very large. Olympia Lodge No. 601, the Good Samaritan Lodge and Canton Chatauqua No. 64, attended in a body. Appropriate selections were sung during the service by Mrs. Russell C. Lawrence and Mrs. George Hall, accompanist.

The pall bearers were Walter Hilton, Theodore Dahn, Henry Lutze, Oscar Naetticker, Bert Hish and William Meiwer. The services at the grave in Forest Hill cemetery were in charge of the Odd Fellows.

None of the tugs or gasoline boats which fish for C. J. Alexander left the harbor yesterday owing to the funeral of Capt. Dahlmer, which occurred yesterday. The deceased fisherman was captain of the tug John Smith, of the fishing fleet.

Several of the tugs fishing for the Dunkirk Company also remained at their mooring places out of honor to Capt. Dahlmer. All of the tugs and gasoline boats are out today.

The Duty of the Township.

Charlevoix township will next Monday vote on the $5,000 bonding proposition for bridge and road improvement.

We are confident that when the doctors of the township investigate matter on all sides they will vote affirmatively.

It really means more to the township, in the matter of assessable property than it does to the city, as the plant will not be in Charlevoix township. We know whereof we speak.

The chief benefit, and the one that is permanently affixed to the proposition, is an industrial benefit.

It appeals to the local patriotism and public spirit of every voter in the township.

Do not make a mistake that you will always regret, but vote "yes" on the proposition next Monday.

An opportunity for great material benefit knocks at our door. Do not let us quibble about trifles, but let us grasp the opportunity that means so much to us.

We never believed in "shouting." They sometimes kick back with disastrous effect. But, the fact is, Charlevoix is at the gateway of an Industrial era.

Charlevoix, with its maritime commerce on one side, which more than equals the same area of dry land; its splendid harbor as the outpost of that commerce; an inland navigable coast line that pierces the heart of the country, and to the east and south of us that equals in fertility any in Michigan; a steady and substantial progress in agriculture; a climate that favors nearly every tree product and Michigan boasts of, cannot fail now, with the proposed development of a great inland resource, to move forward to the destiny that nature has decreed.

STOCKHOLDERS AGREE.

Booth Co. Likely to Pull Out Under Assessment of Stock.

Subscriptions to the assessment on preferred and common stock of A. Booth & Co., says the Chicago Record-Herald, are being received in considerable numbers by Henry S. Robbins, attorney for the company and to whose offices subscriptions are to be sent under the circular letter dealing with the re-organization plan, issued by the stockholders' protective committee several days ago.

Agreements to pay the necessary assessments have been received from holders of 16,934 shares of preferred stock and 10,208 shares of common stock. This represents something over 50 per cent of the total stock.

The total amount which will be raised from stockholders, provided all holders of stock agree to the assessment, will be $6,000,000. Even the raising of this amount, it is said by those conversant with the attitude of the bankers' committee which has the Booth affairs under supervision, will be insufficient, however, to reorganize. It is stated that the bankers believe that $10,000,000 should be raised for the company to continue as a going concern. It is thought that the raising of the additional $4,000,000 would be comparatively easy were the $6,000,000 obtained from assessments on stockholders.

Further consideration of the Booth company affairs was had at a meeting of the bankers' committee yesterday afternoon. It was stated by E. A. Shmidt, chairman of the committee, that it will take some time to investigate the assets and liabilities of the company and arrive at a conclusion as to the exact financial status of the concern.

Mr. Hamill, other members of the committee and Jacob Newman, attorney for the committee, denied emphatically that any consideration has been had by the committee of a receivership proceeding against officers of the company. Rumors of criminal prosecutions are based upon facts in individual creditors, some of whom are incensed at the falsified annual statements of the company issued during recent years. It is stated, however, that it will be difficult to place the responsibility for those falsifications. State's Attorney Lowly said yesterday that the matter of prosecutions against the Booth company officials had not been brought to his attention officially. The matter has not been brought to the notice of United States District Attorney Sims.

TWO VERSIONS.

Story of the Climb as Told by the Tourist and the Guide.

"He was touring the Bernese Oberland. At the Four hotel in Grindelwald a nonmainteer sat in the hall, a glass of beer before him and his feet in their leisurely meanderings, extended toward the fire. The mountaineer had just made an ascent of the Tiger, and he talked the thing out about it.

"Well, well, well, a climb lasting four hours of incessant nerve cutting with an ax on an ice slope as smooth as glass and as steep as a wall, look at this bunch of edelweiss. I spent it on the edge of a crevasse! Deception! My guide refused to let me place it, said it was madness. For his part, he would not risk his life on foolishness. But at last, what with eloquence and the offer of 20 francs, I persuaded him to come along. The advance was awful. One misstep meant death. But I secured the flower, when suddenly the guide's feet slipped, he fell and broke his neck against the edge. But I stood no ax firmly into the ice and, freeing myself, seized the rope that bound us together, and—the man was saved.

"And at the same time in the hotel kitchen the guide was giving another version of the ascent in words like these:

"Well, well, what a customer! Another time that chap may I give up the business. From the start he was faint and dizzy. In fact, wherever any real climbing begins we had to carry him like a sack of meal. And meal. Bread—not a single penny extra for all our extra trouble. Last of all, he begged for the sprig of edelweiss I wore in my hat, and I was fool enough to let him have it."—New York Times.

THEY WENT TO CHURCH.

A Bit of Strategy That Won For the Preacher.

"When Bishop Wilmer was rector of the little Episcopal church of Upperville, Va.," said a Virginia minister, "he was much worried by the unattendance at service on Sundays of the majority of the young men of the community. He hopelessly failed that instead of going to church they were in the habit of playing marbles for stakes. Mention to these days, it must be remembered, was a much more serious game than it is now, occupying much the same position in the realm of sports as do billiards and pool in these days.

"Bishop Wilmer was a 'parson' not well known, determined to break up this practice. He just had been an expert marble player in his boyhood. Accordingly one Saturday he came across a number of the young men engaged in a game. The good bishop asked several questions and finally challenged the lot to play him for stakes. They readily consented.

"Much to their astonishment, the young minister was steady, and soon they and no go to the stores to replenish their stock. Toward the close of the afternoon Mr. Wilmer had won every marble in the force of Upperville. Putting his winnings in a bag, he remarked to the astonished crowd, 'Now, gentlemen, since you can't play marbles tomorrow I hope to see you all at church.' And he did."—New York Tribune.

The Emerald Wrecked.

The Detroit News gives the following particulars of the wreck of the steamhauge Emerald, well known here:

"Two deck hands on the steamer Emerald were asleep in the bunks in the forecastle at 5 o'clock yesterday when the bow of the steamer H. Houghton crashed through the Emerald's starboard side and, making kindling of heavy beams and planking in its course, came to a standstill after ripping up the mattresses on which the men slept and reducing the rooms to half size. Neither man was harmed, as I digging themselves out of the debris they soon reached the deck in their tight clothes. Ed. Larson and Oran Smith are the lucky sailors.

"The accident was the result of an attempt of four boats to get through the narrow channel between the tunnel company's works and the Canadian shore. The Emerald was down bound from Cedarville, loaded with lumber; the Houghton had just left the Canadian shore, having a load of sand from the north channel. A steel tunnel steamer was up-bound ahead of the Houghton, when somewhere abeam of the Emerald, the tunnel company's tug Hope came down and stopped in a well, look at this bunch of edelweiss. I spent it on the edge of a crevasse! Deception! My guide refused to let me place it, said it was madness. For his part, he would not risk his life on foolishness. But at last, what with eloquence and the offer of 20 francs, I persuaded him to come along. The advance was awful. One misstep meant death. FIRE BARES BAD MONEY PLOT.

Counterfeiters Flee with $30,000 in Bogus Currency.

With alleged counterfeits of two more alleged counterfeiters the secret service agents in Pittsburgh then had captured all of the gang which has been making bogus $5 bills and counterfeit dies for the bills for several months. These additions were arrested in Chicago and Milwaukee. A dozen in all are in the ring, which has $30,000 of counterfeit money, but bogus "claims" are laughingly responsible for the arrest of the alleged counterfeiters. The building was partly burned about three weeks ago. When the flames were noticed by firemen there was no fire in the house and attempted to force an entrance. They were confronted by two men with revolvers, who prevented the intruders entering. When questioned the men said they had only extinguished the blaze without aid. This action was thought by the firemen to be suspicious, as they were not informed until they began to investigate where the fire was in the building. It is partly insured $5,000 for a million on the lake front. The officers of the building, however, are to be indemnified. There it was discovered that the bogus money was printed. The federal authorities immediately began an investigation, which led to the arrest of Willie, chief of the secret service. It was learned that the parties, business holders, housed a gang of counterfeiters who had for some time been in Chicago and Milwaukee. After the fire this information money was dumped into the lake and the bill that was found in the building. In Milwaukee one bad men wanted values.

KILLS HER FIANCE BY ACCIDENT

Shoots Him with a Revolver She Supposed Had Been Unloaded.

While Rose Gaynor was playing a young farmer living at Owen, Ind., was accidentally shot and killed by her hand. The husband, whom he was engaged to marry 3 years ago, was shot in the left side of the chest. The tragedy occurred shortly after Spencer had finished eating breakfast at the Richard home. Miss Richard, who had been her partner and Spencer, who is a cousin of the bride, sitting when the conversation drifted to revolvers and their uses. Miss Richard said she had one and offered to keep about the house, as usually she and her mother were alone, and she procured the weapon. These were two bullets in the revolver, one in the cylinder ready for use and the other in the hammer, which was pointed toward Spencer. Miss Richard handed the revolver back to her sister, who put the two bullets back into it. Miss Richard did not see the action when the revolver fell, but she heard it back to her and when she pulled the trigger to see if it was loaded the revolver exploded, the bullet piercing the man's heart.

SEEDLESS APPLE FOUND.

Effort Will Be Made to Propagate Them by Grafting.

A seedless Spanish apple that has a sweet apple that basis something like the Spanish Spice has been found on the farm of C. E. Bell at Eldridge, Kan. Samples of the apple were received by the State Horticultural Society, and next spring an effort is to be made to propagate them by grafting the bud from Bell's tree, the usual method of grafting is done in other trees. It is believed a new variety of seedless apples will be developed. The tree on Mr. Bell's farm has been bearing seedless apples. There is no sign of a seed, but there is a small core, which apple men think can be easily removed with a curved penknife.

ST PIERRE FOR ANNEXATION.

Islanders Carry United States Flag With Demanding Free Schools.

Demonstrations supporting rioting have resulted from the demand for free schools, and a mob which besieged the government house in St. Pierre, Mic., tore at its head an American flag and shouted for annexation to the United States. The people want the schools, which have been closed by the government, almost since the fire in all and with religious instruction permitted. Over 1,000 persons joined the demonstration at the governor's residence. Tumultuous cheers were received by a promise that the demands would be carried to the authorities in Paris, with a request for an immediate reply. The islands, closed by France, is not far from Newfoundland, and if the trouble becomes more serious a British warship may be ordered there, as France has none in that vicinity. The police force is entirely inadequate to cope with the situation. The belief is held that should the French government refuse to consider the action the situation would be very serious.

SENTENCED FOR LAND FRAUD.

TWELVE MEN DIE IN BLAST.

Buried in Deep Excavation by Explosion of a Gas Main.

Twelve men are believed to have been killed by the explosion of a gas main in an excavation at Hoist and Frost streets, Brooklyn, N. Y. The explosion tore the street to pieces for rods on each side, and the men who were working in an excavation for a large sewer pipe were buried under the debris. They are believed to have been smothered or burned to death in the fire that followed the explosion. Samuel Tribe, who lived near the scene, has his life in attempting to save a woman who was passing through Hoist street at the time and the explosion caught by the waves from the gas main and roared down the street. The woman was dragged out of the trench by a boy. Workmen were digging a trench through Hoist street for a thirty-inch sewer pipe. The excavation was to be nearly forty feet deep, and as the laborers reached the depth the walls were shored up with large timbers. An accumulation of gas from a main which had been accidentally broken during the course of the work suddenly expanded with tremendous force. The supporting timbers were blown away and the earthen walls toppled over on Charles Schlimmer, a city inspector, who was in a deep water main which was broken by the explosion and a current began to spurt up through the opening of workmen. Side by side with the water roared the flames, fed by gas escaping from the broken main.

REPAYS WHIPPING BY TEACHER

Boy of 25 Years Ago Keeps Promise and Beats Aged Pedagogue.

Twenty-five years ago, Hobert Gamble, a young German farmer living near Greenwich, Ind., received severe punishment at the hands of William Baldwin, teacher of the county school which Gamble attended. Gamble then told Baldwin that if opportunity ever offered after he had become a man he would return and give him a little interest. The opportunity came the other day and Gamble, after a journey of 1,000 miles, attacked Baldwin and thrashed him. The two met on the streets of Greenville. Gamble stopped Baldwin, whom he had not seen for years, and asked if he were not the teacher of his boyhood days. Baldwin admitted as much and Gamble then administered the punishment he had promised. The man was reported to the Humanitarian authorities and Gamble was arrested upon arrival. Baldwin is now 72 years old.

LOSE SON AFTER 13 YEARS.

Woman Denied Custody of Child Adopted by Washington Family.

The court refused to grant to her child for thirteen years and finding the boy in Bellingham, Wash., last June, the adopted son, of A. W. Hunting, Miss Maude Fields of St. Louis failed to secure possession of the child. Judge Neterer of the Superior Court gave the boy into the custody of his adopted parents. When the child was 3 months old Miss Fields left it at a hospital in St. Louis, returning for it three weeks later. It has been alleged and further information was refused her. A long search which ended in Bellingham commenced and for months all facilities followed. Miss Fields insisted upon knowing the whereabouts of her life when the decision was rendered.

PRISON DOOR CLOSES ON A $750,000 FORGER

SENTENCE IS 1 TO 14 YEARS.

Skillful Juggling of Bogus Notes and Deeds Dupes 25 Persons and Extends Over 10-Year Period.

Confessing his authorship of an endless chain, of fraudulent lending operations, Peter Van Vlissingen, for many years a prominent Chicago real estate man and once reputed wealthy, was indicted, tried and sentenced in the penitentiary. Months of terrorism for a term of from one to fourteen years. The startling revelations of how a man who earned high among his associates could carry out a gigantic scheme in which he victimized more than a score of personal friends—out of $750,000 came like a thunderbolt. He first confessed to his crime Saturday to two friends. At noon Monday the case was presented to the State's Attorney, and three hours later he was sentenced. Van Vlissingen to a felon's cell were taken with remarkable rapidity.

The transactions in the real estate men revealed a scheme of systematic and cunning forgery of deeds and real estate notes and mortgages extending over a period of eighteen years. For years Van Vlissingen maintained a system of forgery that did not arouse suspicion. The victims were men, John Vanderpool, his chief clerk, was wholly ignorant of the activities being perpetrated under his nose.

Van Vlissingen's scheme was to loan money and then forge a release or transfer as security. The notes and securities would be made out in due form, signed, sworn to and acknowledged, and recorded with the county recorder. Van Vlissingen would then turn himself in his private office, where he lived a dissipatedly designed to aid him in forgery. In the top of his desk was a small hole covered with a piece of glass, beneath which was an incandescent light. Placing the genuine mortgage on the glass he would cover it with a similar blank form and turn on the light below the desk. The signatures and seals of the original instrument were outlined on the blank by the light. The signatures and seals were then made, the notarial date, and forgeries were turned out, which, when dried, were as good as the original.

Sometimes the forger made one, two or several loans on the same property. Sometimes he mortgaged and sold them. The results he sold in Chicago, the greater part made in New England, in Western and Southern States, and in Germany and Holland, his native country. To make the forgeries perfect, Van Vlissingen counterfeited the signature of the county recorder. For nearly two decades he managed to duplicate the fraudulent paper when it fell due and in that way avoided exposure, but recently he became unable to meet the demands of this endless chain, and disappeared from his office.

GOOD TIME TO BUILD.

Prices of Material Are Low and Contractors Are Anxious for Work.

Country Life in America has been looking up the building situation and in a recent declares that there has not been such another chance in years for people to build cheaply and well. The prices of material have fallen so, contractors are anxious to obtain work, and the time is so ready to jump at the chance of seasoned wages, that a saving of from 10 to 20 per cent in cost, depending on the section of the country, can be made in all domestic architecture. Lumber is lower now than it will probably ever be again. Brick is almost a drug on the market. Good workmen are not yet busy and are not inclined to be. It seems to offer, second to the magazine, the conditions are so improved for the person about to contract a home that he can do so 20 to 30 per cent better than in 1897. However, no extreme is to be assumed and there is only a few sections.

The American Lumbermen declares that prices are from 25 to 25 per cent lower on lumber in the west and south than they will be in a few months. Brick is 25 per cent under last year's schedules. Cedar shingles which sold at $4.50 and $5 a thousand now. Common brick was quoted in Chicago for $5.50 to $5.25 in 1897. The price now is $4.50 to $4.75 per thousand. The saving on domestic cement in Chicago is 10 to per cent, and in New York 20 to 25 per cent. Plumbing rates are down about 25 per cent from the figures of 1897 in the first of the year. Hardware for domestic purposes is about 20 per cent cheaper. So it goes throughout the entire list.

DIAGRAM INDICATING HOW FORGERIES WERE MADE.

To Make the Years Work.

Charlotte Perkins Gilman in the American Magazine discusses the proposition of the aged people that the whole land of the many population that is in a degenerate condition from what is called the "overcrowding" of the industrial army, controlled by the State and under strict military discipline. This army would make it New England, the Western and Southern States, and in Germany and Holland, his native country. To make the foreries perfect, Van Vlissingen counterfeited the signature of the county recorder. For nearly two decades he managed to duplicate the fraudulent paper when it fell due and in that way avoided exposure, but recently he became unable to meet the demands of this endless chain, and disappeared from his office.

FOREIGN LANDS

The most conservative reports from Great Britain tell of an unprecedented condition of unemployment in that country. The situation is so desperate that the government can no longer ignore it. Thousands of men in the iron works have shown signs of extreme discontent, and the government is forced to be on the watch toward London and at centers where the unemployed are kept by the prompt action of the city authorities in providing employment. The iron works, to give relief. Dublin also is in a condition of unrest. Last year, in Leeds, Liverpool, Sheffield, Birmingham and other towns the same population that confronted with an acute situation. It is said that the Queen of England has announced her intention of contributing a general plan for relief.

The industrial situation in Austria has produced a decision invalidating one of the important laws passed in the Reichsrat. Within State lines, and on State issues, it compromised the rights of the Germans on its merits.

And it follows that to become again strong national party, with a fair chance to win on its merits, the Democracy must show national leaders of the same type as Harmon and Stevenson and Johnson.

That it may be able to do so is the sincere hope of every thinking and patriotic American. For it is necessary that, and it is even dangerous, for a union of popular government to have only one party which acts as a unit, when the hour comes and the problem must be made, and that party is to be trusted with the great business of government.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Would Be a Situation.

The Republican party stands for such a tariff on imported products which are also produced in this country as will equalize wages and still enable domestic producers to make a fair profit.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Where Democracy Showed Strength.

Although weak in its national ranks, the Democratic party developed surprising strength in the most important of the recent State elections.

In Ohio and Indiana the Democrats elected their candidates for Governor and may be expected to control the legislature. In Minnesota they were practically carried, and in Kansas they polled nearly secured the Governor, and in New York they failed by a comparatively small margin.

Mr. Stevenson failed, and Mr. Chauncey failed, chiefly because of the defeat of Mr. Bryan. Democrats could not feel the confidence in Mr. Bryan they felt in Mr. Harmon, Mr. Stevenson moved them to vote for Mr. Taft. And, in colloquial phrase, "the tail went with the kite."

A notable feature of the Democratic successes within the States is that the successful, and nearly successful, democratic candidates are known to the nation as men of conservative who are not radical—who are rather of the Cleveland school, than of the association with Bryanism.

Mr. Harmon in Ohio and Mr. Stevenson in Illinois are conspicuous being mistaken as fine types of the historic Democrats who made the name of Jefferson and Cleveland, which, whatever its faults, was always the party of the people, and of democratic principles.

The Democrats revived the tariff issue, and it was the main issue in the two memorable occasions, and years were respectively, from the effects of the Mills and Wilson bills.

In this campaign the Republicans admit that some measures of revision ought to be done, but they also insist, that such a task is safely only in the hands of the friends of a tariff system that in general has brought prosperity to the people of the United States.—Lincoln (Neb.) Star.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Taft Brings Prosperity.

The election of Mr. Taft was in fact a victory for the country than for the candidate himself.

Only those who daily behold the humble life of business men can fully understand the disturbing influence in the word Bryanism. Whether business men are right in their uneasiness or have exaggerated the peril in the Nebraskan, the fact remains that the nation is in no fit condition to play at experiment in government.

The industrial world feels to-day as some frozen blooded lizards feel when, as a great bonfire, they begin to realize that they are in a position to enjoy it. Travelling men who have been "walking the dog" in the last few months have been telling of conditions in the business world. Manufacturers are right in their uneasiness and Music in the Air.

A revolving piano and pianist making music in unison is one of the latest attractions at the New York hippodrome. The exhibition is described as a "Mimic marvel." Under a show of hypnotic influence both piano and pianist rise up from a platform, and having, by some unknown agency, reached a certain height, the instrument begins to sway from side to side, and in due course is seen slowly revolving, together with the performer, to the strains of the "Merry Widow" waltz. The performer is said, never misses a note, even while upside-down.

Raleigh's Costume.

Sir Walter Raleigh wore a white satin pinked vest, close-sleeved to the wrist, and over the body a double-row of forward, and embroidered with pearls, and in the feather of his hat is a large ruby and pearl drop at the bottom of a sprig in place of a button. His breeches, with his stockings and ribbon garters, pinned at the knee, were all white; and his buff shoes, on great court days, were generously covered with precious stones. He had a suit of armor of solid silver, with sword and belt blazing with diamonds, rubies and pearls.

A Searchlight Problem.

Mrs. Bertha Ayrton has succeeded in ascertaining the cause of the refractory behavior of the searchlight in certain respects, and is devising a remedy. The British admiralty called on Prof. Ayrton to investigate the trouble some time ago. After making many investigations he found the problem over to his wife, who is the only woman member of the Institute of Electrical Engineers and who received the only medal ever awarded to a woman by the Royal Society of London for original minded work.

ALL ABOUT THE FLY

OF INTEREST PARTICULARLY TO THE BALDHEADS.

Its Intelligence Truly an Interesting and Exaggerating Study—Believes That Mankind Was Created for Its Amusement.

"The common domestic fly," said a man who is no scholar but has managed to pick up many interesting facts, "is altogether too common and too domestic. She is one of the most interesting animals—"

"You don't mean 'animal,' a listener broke in. "A fly is not an animal."

"Then she must be a vegetable or a mineral," said the first speaker. "Call her whichever you please, but she is one of the most interesting creatures extant.

"An industrious female fly lays about 5,000,000 eggs. There are no indoors flies and few males. The fly does not eat after laying. If she did she would be retired from her wonted activity during longer or shorter periods of incubation. Her eggs hatch without mothers assistance, and it is seldom that one fails to hatch.

"The intelligence of flies is an interesting and exaggerating study. One of the ordinary ways of trying to kill flies is to fold a newspaper in the shape of a heavy flat yard and whack at them with it when they are sitting still.

"Now, the fly is familiar with the unhealthy fact that if she sits perfectly still the descending paper will make no air cushion in front of it that 99 times out of 100 will prevent her from being crushed. The concussion consequently stuns her and she falls to the floor apparently dead, but in a few minutes she has recovered and is again on the job.

"That's why when you strike at a fly hard enough to scatter the butter all over the walls she is able to reappear so quickly on the rim of the sugar bowl.

"When out not for food but merely for the fun of scattering pies the fly knows when she has had enough. Then she sits down on a dark spot in the carpet and watches you prance around the room looking for her on the walls.

"A very good way to catch flies is to distribute fly paper and platters of potion on the tables and window sills. No matter how thick the flies are where this is done, their number will be quickly reduced. You can easily prove this by counting the dead you have caught. It is a great comfort, when there a few million flies in the air and none coming to count up your catch and know that a dozen or so will never teeter you any more.

"This method of settling rid of flies is often employed in restaurants. It was the method used in the railroad restaurant where a passenger lurched in for refreshment, glanced along the display of pies and said:

"'Give me a piece of this huckleberry.'

"That ain't huckleberry," said the waiter girl, waving her hand over the pie. 'It's custard.'

"When we were children we were taught to believe that a fly's foot was a wonderful part of creation—that when it was placed on the ceiling the weight of the fly pulled it away in the center and made a tiny vacuum and that the pressure of the atmosphere around it, in accordance with the law of nature, held the fly from falling. Several human 'flies' broke their necks trying to do the same trick with antiseptic flies' feet before it was discovered that if flies kept their feet clean they couldn't walk on ceilings.

"Flies believe that mankind was created for their amusement, and it has always been a question with me which gets the more solid enjoyment—to burn around your nose and make you get up a few hours earlier in the morning than you want to, or to pester you in the daytime until you rage around the room with a paper slayer in your hand while she watches you from behind a door hinge."

JUST A WOMAN'S LITTLE JOKE.

How It Led to a Suit at Law and Serious Complications.

Mrs. Margaret Gaity, one of Dearborn's wittiest society women, pleased and amused a jokey man who is the defendant in an action at law, while the society of that Vermont city is awaiting with glee the outcome of the affair, says the Boston Post.

It all emanated from a "bright idea" conceived by Mrs. Gaity and a few of her society friends who had become firmly convinced that James H. Hooker, attorney and wealthy clubman, was working altogether too hard and needed a little diversion to distract him from the arduousness of so busy a summer.

One day recently, while the young attorney sat at his desk with papers piled high on each side and an amount of work beside him that promised to keep him in his office into the wee small hours of the night, the telephone at his elbow rang.

Taking up the receiver Mr. Hooker listened to the apparently distracted voice of Mrs. Gaity, one of his acquaintances. Mrs. Gaity appeared to be greatly overwrought and explained that a dreadful attempt had just been made to swindle her out of a sum of money, that the alleged swindler had left a bandbag behind, and would Mr. Hooker come up immediately and open the bag and discover, if possible, the identity of the guilty person.

He was ushered into the drawing room and the bag was shown him.

Without further parley the lawyer opened the bag and extracted a nice yellow lemon. Then the hot fire upon the attorney and amid the titterings which emanated from different recesses of the drawing room he bowed and withdrew, after declaring gracefully that he felt quite relieved. Gaity settled and trusted that his client would be no longer disturbed.

A little later Mrs. Gaity received a bill for services made out to the young man. Under the conviction that this bill was merely the humorous revenge of Mr. Hooker, Mr. Gaity paid it upon him the bill was pigeonholed.

Much to her consternation a writ appeared recently at Mrs. Gaity's home and served the papers in a suit for fees due to Mr. Hooker for services.

The whole city is interested in Lawyer Hooker's plan for revenge and facetious have already been formed.

He Was Not Surprised.

Justice Brewer of the United States supreme court is credited with this by the Milwaukee Sentinel: A millionaire was converted to the ways of thinking of a sect which periodically was inspired with a foreknowledge of the imminence of the day of doom and set the date, preparing for Gabriel's greeting. The date was set and the day came. The millionaire donned his silk hat and went out into the fields to await the coming meeting with the celestial throng. The day passed until it was late in the afternoon, and the millionaire was sitting at the stroke of midnight on the morn of the set doom, when the celestial host threw aug himself down upon a pile of hay, fell asleep at his watch. Hoys, since revived him, and with the natural naive nicevousness of boys, set fire to the pile. The smoke and the heat soon woke the slumbering millionaire, and, sitting up with a start, he cried out in the anguish of the lost: "Just as I expected! In hell—after all!"

Old Persian City.

Persepolis ancient city of Tabiris, one of the scenes of Fitzgerald's "Rubaiyat" is in ruins, can hardly be said to have ever enjoyed a quiet life. When Turk and Turcoman and Persian and Tartar and Afghan have made it a prey to the shaking the old walls with battering ram the earthquake was having a mining. The public buildings have traces of this sort of violence—some by the Kalmd Mazlid [illegible] some constructed of wonderfully arabesque and blue tiles; while the citadel gapes with its earthquake rives sides. As began the Angelo-Indian telegraph run through the city, it is said as a day passed days two or three after it, the earthquake shook the city.

The leaves of the dictionary fluttered wildly for a moment. Then, with a passion of despair, the poem foreigner put the book in his pocket. He evidently thought Eastern idioms hopeless.

Marriage and Sacrifice.

Marriage, unless to the rich, means sadly outside many little sacrifices. The modern bachelor can afford to take little week-end trips to seaside and golf links when he enters the ranks of the benedict. Week-ending is an expensive habit and annual couples even if they can afford it, are much wiser to settle down quietly in their early married life and make a real home. Unless they do this in the beginning, those "good times" will never be an accomplished fact. It takes two to make a home and there is no time like the first years of marriage for making a real "nest" home to "set" through life.

Japanese Army Promotions.

In the Japanese army promotion is not a matter of seniority. It is noted that in the Japanese army he is privileged to "cut" officers, who "accordingly" remain in which are, "efficiency in so-to-to speak—in the same rank, so that it is not in it for promotion." Promotions in the service are, consequently, a selection committee does not, as in Japan, in the army, "cut off" would be aware of his chances of rise. Promotions are, in consequence, records were good would succeed, the duffer going out automatically.

Suggestion.

"I suppose you expect to have a lot of people up in the air before you get through with your flying machine?"

"Yes," answered the promoter, absentmindedly, "especially investors."

Social Acrobatics.

"Do you actually sat out the dances with Miss Gushy?" inquired the girl.

"Yes," answered the promoter, absentmindedly, "especially investors."

Wisdom-Seeking German Fails to Connect with Queer Lingo.

The commuters on one of the New Jersey railroads have lire over much interested during the past summer in the efforts of a young German to increase his English vocabulary by means of terms of conversation overheard on the train. He has the listens with strained attention to what those near him are saying, and when he hears an unfamiliar word or expression searches for it hastily in a little pocket dictionary he carries, and evidently core it over to himself until he has learned it.

The other day he stood behind two women, evidently other from home were discussing their employer.

"You'd better get on the job," warned the elder of the two. "The chief's got wine to your loafin' since the fellers tipped him off."

"Gosoody, is he?" inquired the other, indifferently.

"Yep, he's got a grouch all right, all right, and there'll be a mark like a fire for you if you don't get busy on."

What Would You Do

If three good physicians should pronounce your case hopeless. If they should decide that you could not live longer than six weeks. And if you should get well, after using only $12.00 worth of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine, what would you advise a friend in like condition to do?

"I have to thank God for saved my life through the use of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine. Three physicians had given me up to die. I was so bloated that I could scarcely walk across the room. My heart would jump and fluttering and pain so that I could not lie down. I was so nervous that I could not sleep nor rest. I had to give up my work. I was so bloated that my friends thought I was a case of dropsy. I had taken all the medicine I could get without any benefit. I was given up to die by my physicians. I was induced to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine. The first bottle gave me hope. I got a bottle of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for pain and weakness, and I improved from the first dose. I am in the ministry, and have been for 41 years."

Now the room in which Ellen had continued herself opened into the main cabin in which Smith sat. All that was said by the main cabin was distinctly audible to the continued and terrified Ellen. I have prescribed solemnly to nonversant that her journey had contained the interesting language in question Ellen could stand it no longer.

"You wretched girl," she cried vehemently, from the recesses of her apartment, "I will talking of—the—Lady."

"Woman, what do you mean?" thundered Smith, rising and standing over the frightened black woman in a mockery of menace. "Do you know that I am the captain of this ship? This is rank mutiny! I am hung you to the yardarm for it."

"Mr. Mason Dyke, please dean do dat?" pleaded the servant, falling on her knees and trotting out with terror.

"Bless," again interrupted Miss Ellen, rushing out the curtain, just long enough the shaved dear Smith would she could see her woman, on her knees before the captain, "get up! Do you hear me? You He's only trying to frighten you. Noble never on the part of a sailor, but we might expect that from—"

Captain Smith laughed.

"I spare your life this time, poor, trembling, downcastem female," he said drawlingly, "but beware."

"Yes, sah, I'll beware, 'deed I will, sah," said Jane humble as dirt.

"Do you believe me, Ellen?" said the captain grackly, "and tell her that as captain of this ship I order her to appear before me immediately."

The frightened Ellen, not at all reassured by her mistress' reassurance, ventured to her feet and burst into the little conference again.

"Missy Ellen, yo' heahds come right into de big cabin. Dat outlandishness ha say yo' gov'ne. He done gotine long you by de throat mself. Dis child fetter de back yard youndah to oust."

"I made no such threat, woman," said all the captain, slamming his video, "I merely told you to tell your mistress that I commanded her presence here at once."

"Yes, sah. That's what I done tole hah," answered poor Ellen.

"Tell him from me," returned Miss Ellen promptly and firmly, "that while he commands the ship, he doesn't command me. I won't come."

In another moment the trembling Ellen stood before the incensed captain, who was greatly enjoying the situation.

"Oh, great ship! Sweet Cupid!" began the negro descriptively, "just yo' ki, hah youndah she can't come, sah, she sick, sah. She'd like ter, lev yo' ordahs, sah, with clenched hands, kinder dancin ler hips an' mouth—"

"Chloe!" cried a scandalized voice from the apartment, "hold your tongue, you sad and sashing sister."

"Yo' ma, sah," said Chloe, "you go back again and tell your mistress that if she doesn't come in here at once, I will—"

"Hold hetin done come sah, Missy Ellen," sob poor Chloe. "Ee dat nah cawse yo' ma done gotine long yo' hah, sah."

"He doesn't dare," said Miss Ellen in a very loud tone of voice, not choosing to wait herself of Chloe as a further interpreter.

Captain Smith instantly accepted her challenge.

"Nobody" he called in a loud voice.

A sailor standing outside the door forward in the main bulkhead opened the door, stepped into the little cabin forehead, and made a salute.

"Send me the bo's'n mate and two common hands immediately," said Captain Smith.

"Ay, ay, sir."

A few moments after old Bob Gantlin, followed by two other seamen, shuffled into the cabin.

"Bob's mate" said Smith austerely, pointing out the lady with his cane, "go to the door I found fifteen the young lady is in the starboard cabin, you'll find it in the cabin, you and your mates will go in and bring her out here. Handle her gen'lmen as little force as necessary, but do the job up handsomely."

"Aye! aye, sir, lay a fromsie aboard she," expectorated the old sailor feebly.

"You heard me, sailor?"

"Ee course, sir, hah—"

"Well, then, what are you waiting for?"

"Ee, sir, sah," said the gallant old tar this adjured, his eyes rolling about terrifically at the thought of the fate that pre-ordained for him.

"Now" emitted the captain, looking solemnly at his watch.

"He would never dare!" murmured Miss Ellen under her breath.

"Two!" said the captain impertinently.

"I'll die first!" she continued, with a resonance count went on; but in spite of her agitation she took good care not to lose track of the count.

At three the captain closed his watch and nodded. The old boatswain's mate made a step forward; look and hesitatingly. He was followed at some distance by his mates. Evidently they relished their job as much as he did. The big-footed men slowly shuffled across the deck. It seemed to Smith, who was only watching the performance, that it would take the Gantlin and his slaves an hour to get to the aforesaid door at the rate they were traveling. The old man in his right arm extended to frame of him as it to stand out some possible attack. He had removed his cap. Only a little before he entered the cabin, for his peculiar sense of fitness, he had put on the usual gold, whether from habit or necessary comes could not be told. He stood on his planting glasses at the contain, but that portal man was unrelenting. He hesitated to him to go.

If there was comedy in the cabin there was tragedy in the stateroom. The girl did not believe that Smith would dare to do it. The man who pretended to love her, even if he were capable of the vile, would resort to such an expedient, had proved impotent, yet here the men were approaching her door. She stood with clenched hands, flushed cheeks heaving bosom, the picture of indignation tempered with a trifle fear. The door was given a gentle rap, as for a timid, solid door and a hale and hearty. She waited until the last vestige of the sound approach of the sailors, hoping that he would the entered her stateroom Smith would call them back. But to sailors was impossible of the order fall upon her ear.

Chloe had sunk to the floor and was sobbing wildly, clinging to her mistress skirts. Jane as Sam's had about controlled to stop the hostesses's pants and give it up as a bad job, a self-confessed failure. Miss Ellen's courage was gone, or perhaps it were better to say, under the circumstances, fear had overcome her. In spite of her transport of passion she suddenly threw open the door and dashed out.

The boatswain's mate had his hand extended in the very act of turning the knob. Her sudden action completely threw him off his balance. With a howl or curse he sank down in a footled heap on the deck. Behind him the sailors all touched and have enjoyed the chance, but the man were than he could force. As he fell his mates tripped over him and the whole crew went reeling back in wild confusion. They didn't stop for orders, for expostulations, for anything else. With a will pell the two seamen helped out of the cabin door followed by the lady in the big hands and kicks. It was a most inconsiderate retreat.

Miss Ellen's entrance had been more dramatic. But then the this fashion. Scores trooped up crowded the looking through by the assistance of the unlucky Gantlin. As the mistress swept through the door she had pulled herself together and was quite herself again. With thinking perhaps to go to a brave death with the captain, she had taken fright, fallen at her feet, and again could keep around the ships. A true sailor's wife was her mistress straight into the arms of the captain. Chloe and Jane followed in her train, not knowing what to do, but determined to see how about to see her down on the treasonable cabin door. Smith was in no mood to go to the aforesaid door at the rate they were traveling. The old man in his right arm extended to frame of him as it to stand out some possible attack. He had removed his cap. Only a little before he entered the cabin, for his peculiar sense of fitness, he had put on the usual gold, whether from habit or necessarcomes could not be told. He stood on his planting glasses at the contain, but that portal man was unrelenting. He hesitated to him to go.

ing a woman," she replied caustically. "I am glad to please you," he returned smoothly, "for I will admit that my desire has been to see you. I have to say that you will 'love, honor and—obey' me at the altar."

"You will never hear me say those words!" shouted Miss Ellen; "and if I can get the aid of any other foolish woman who may be inclined thereto, I shall relate this little scene as an evidence of your character and present life, if possible."

"Your solicitude for my future, Miss Ellen—"

"Miss Ellen, if you please!"

"Is truly touching. I may see hear you for some time that you will have leisure and obey me. In the present you will do at least one of these things."

"Which one?"

"Obey."

The girl's hands gripped the arms of the chair. She shut her teeth tightly, but made no reply.

"I am hopeful, too," continued Smith with portentous gravity, "even in spite of the disadvantage under which I labor in this interview, that you will also eventually do the other two whether you promise or not. Indeed, from what I know, I think you do love and honor me just a little bit, don't you?"

"You should never pale from the past," stopped Miss Ellen.

"Yes, then, you did?"

"I hate you now! That's all you need to know."

"That's just what I don't want to know," answered the captain, gently and reproachfully, "and you will perhaps see, I am sure, if I tell you that I don't believe that's quite true."

"Your beliefs, or non-beliefs, are nothing to me. You scarcely did me the honor to disregard them the other day by force to discuss other questions of this kind, in which I assure you I have no interest whatever."

"No, you are right, although ethics is always interesting," resumed Smith, "and I am sorry that I neglect you to come out here to discuss them."

"Forgot me with a lunatic's mate and two ruffianly sailors," she interrupted contemptuously.

"Quite so, poor fellows. Because I mentioned a paper not passed."

"What ration?" cried the girl.

"Ration to this," answered the captain, lifting up from the table the half sheet of the estate of Pandion Sand. The original chart had been so torn in two pieces that no one is possible of it. Chloe piece could make head or tail of it."

"Where did you get this?" asked the girl bewildered.

"I took it from a letter addressed to Cantain Rivers as you heard me say when I boarded the treehound. In the letter was a statement that the other half of the chart was in the possession of his passenger, the amoureaux. You are she."

"What do you mean with the chart?"

"That does not especially concern you."

"Nevertheless" insisted the girl.

"Oh, well," said Smith quickly, "I'm going to tell you. I'm not in the mighty intent without reason, though the ugly of all the universe. It is the business of the infinite on the pages of eternity."

It is a dreary and tiresome business trying to do the divine will by disease, sickness, suffering, the frightened sorrows and problems of every day. It is a hard, hard, hard,

SCHOOL NOTES.

County Normal.

The normal class visited some of the rooms in the central building Wednesday afternoon for observation.

Mildred Drescher spent Thanksgiving at her home in Deward.

Florence Sheldon, Jessie Dutranne, Lucie Sheldon, Jessie Metz, Edith and Alma Brolle and Hazel Holliday spent Thanksgiving in East Jordan.

The children of the training room surprised the Normal class Wednesday afternoon. A short program was given after which we had several games and refreshments were served.

The following letter was received by Miss Reed from Mr. Swift, of the Beulah Farm Home, thanking the children of the grades for the boxes of fruit and clothing sent at Thanksgiving time:

BOYNE CITY, MICH., Nov. 21.

MISS ALICE E. REED,
Charlevoix, Mich.

Dear Miss Reed:—We want you to express our gratitude to all the pupils of your school who have so kindly assisted in sending the box of canned fruit, the box of vegetables, and the two boxes of clothing.

It will prove a great blessing and help to Beulah Boys, and there are now over eighty of them, and so their wants are many.

Every year the Charlevoix school children have been pleased to remember us in great kindness, and we are glad we are not forgotten this year. By another winter our new building will be completed, and then our numbers will be largely increased. May Beulah Farm for Boys always have your true friend and sympathizer.

Yours most sincerely and gratefully,

HERMON L. SWIFT, Manager.

—The council proceedings of this week explain themselves. They have special reference to the result of the recent township special election. It will not be a century before our respected fellow citizens of Charlevoix township will discover that they made a grevious mistake, under the advice of one who had only personal revenge to gratify. The result will be the same as that outlined by those having the public good at heart; but Charlevoix township will be the loser, now and hereafter, both financially and loftily. It is passing strange that a few malcontents can block a project that means dinner pails and dinners on the table.

Bad Weather for Coughs

Don't let a cough or a cold hang on in this weather. However slight it may be, if you get another cold on top of it you're almost sure to develop pneumonia, pleurisy, bronchitis or tonsilitis. Even if your cough grows no worse, unless you get rid of it right away it will become firmly settled and stay with you for months, seriously weakening your lungs from the continual strain.

Buy some good cough medicine to-day and stop it now.

We have several excellent cough remedies, but we will give Rexall Cherry Juice Cough Syrup for coughs, hoarseness and sore throat. One dose of this new preparation is guaranteed to relieve any cough, and one bottle is cure it. This delightfully flavored and palatable cough syrup is as different from the old, nauseating cough remedies as it is possible to imagine. It is very pleasant for children; easy to take and immediate in its effects. Sold with the Rexall guarantee.

MUTINOUS QUARTERMASTER.

How a Distinguished Shipmaster Ran Up Against Maritime Discipline.

The U. S. lighthouse tender Sumac, Capt. Hubbard, as trim a ship as ever sailed either fresh or salt water, with as accomplished and genteel a navigator as ever rang a bell, has been in this port very much of the time for the last two weeks, wind bound, leaving Tuesday morning for the straits, and then to Chicago.

Capt. Hubbard has on board as a guest his personal friend and neighbor, Capt. Mansfield, inspector of hulls in Chicago, who is out on a thirty days vacation, and who declares to the writer that he is having the time of his life.

Well, Capt. Mansfield is an accomplished skipper, as his present position clearly testifies. Last week one of Capt. Hubbard's quartermasters left the ship at this port, to go back to his native Norway. He was the day wheelsman, and his vacancy was not easily filled.

Thereupon, comes into "the presence" as a volunteer, Capt. Mansfield, local inspector at Chicago and a licensed master when the accomplished Hubbard was a wheelsman. The Sunac was steering for a port away over somewhere on the north shore, when the autocrat on the bridge "sang out"—

"Port!"

There was the rattle of the wheel but no reply.

"Port, I say!"

"Well, I did port!"

"Why don't you answer the bridge properly, then?"

"Thought I did."

As the buoy was discerned through the snow flurry, the command came, swift, and vigorous—

"Hard a'port!"

No answer.

"Hard a'port, I say!"

"You go to Ballyhack, you ornery fresh-water clam, the wheel is hard over!"

"Then why don't you answer the bridge properly?"

"I don't have to, you dod-gasted brass-buttoned dude! You cannot work any of your United States Finaforce discipline on this quarter-master. I am a guest!"

Well, the buoy was picked up, and Capt. Mansfield served his stretch" in the pilot house, steering a proper course, as instructed; but thereafter the command came from the bridge—

"If you please, Capt. Mansfield, will you kindly bring her up half a point?"

Capt. Mansfield says:—"Do you think I am going to "Sir" that "stiff," who lays in port whenever there is a breeze over fifteen miles an hour? Well I guess not! I will steer his darned old boat when he gets in a scrape, but I will not stand for any of his idolizing «Sir" business—not me!"

Capt. Mansfield has one of the best cabins on the ship, and he is as a government official, treated with the courtesy that is his due on a government ship; but the trouble is Hubbard and Mansfield are neighbors and chums.

Mansfield abuses Hubbard on Hubbard's own ship, with a freedom that is appalling, and Hubbard tells things about Mansfield that are positively shocking—most of them lies, as Mansfield asserts, but all growing out of a neighborly relation that, sometimes meaning venom, in this case means honey, because Hubbard and Mansfield are chums.

The Sugar Factory.

That little dinky whinie that governs the flow of beets through the slicer to the slicer still squeals by day and yells by night,—which means that something is doing at the factory.

Well, they expect to slice the last beets tomorrow or next day and clean up by Sunday or Monday.

The factory has made no money this year,—neither could it on the acreage, but the factory is on its feet, and will next year slice one hundred percent more beets than it did this year.

The factory is now a positive and permanent feature, and the farmers are joint beneficiaries, with the balance in their favor.

Pioneer Steamboat Man Killed.

Thomas Daley, a resident of Detroit for 70 years and for 14 years, United States steamboat inspector, was run down by a horse cart while attempting to cross a Detroit street one day last week, and almost instantly killed.

Old settlers will remember "Tom" Daly. In 1869, and several years the-after, he was chief engineer on the steamer Idaho with Capt. Burton Penny. The Idaho "wooded" here those days.

In the "70s he and Capt. Alvin Dodge bought the steamer A. C. Van Raalte and for several years ran her between Traverse City and Mackinaw, taking in this place, "Little Traverse" and Cross Village.

THE BOYNE CITY MILL.

The Recently Destroyed Mill to be Rebuilt, and a Boom Expected.

A recent Boyne City special says: "The news that the W. H. White company was interested in a new lumber company to build a large mill plant at Bay City caused a few citizens to feel a bit alarmed for fear that it would curtail the amount of business that the company would do at this point, but the facts prove that the contrary is the case. While there are 18,000 acres of timber to go the other way, there are 25,000 acres to come to Boyne City. That amount means a long cut for this city probably 15 to 20, or perhaps 25 years. This amount of timber is owned by the company and if W. H. White, the president of the concern, says it will come to Boyne City it will.

The facts are about like this. The company expects to build a mill on the site of the one recently burned. It will be a big one, a double band mill, with other things, and which will make it a large institution. The company will enlarge the flooring plant to nearly or full double its present capacity, also build a large wholesale planing mill to dress the most of the lumber sawed at this point; move the round house and machine shops to some other location, not yet decided upon.

A side issue which might be mentioned, and which is of considerable concern to the town, is that Mr. White stands ready to aid, financially, towards the building of a new hotel. It must be a good one, to cost $25,000 or more and must be run by a competent and responsible man.

G. A. R. Election.

Navigation Closing.

The navigation season of 1908 is dying, but is dying hard.

The steamship Arizona and consort Mistee leave today with Boyne City cargoes for Lake Erie ports. The Three Brothers left Sunday for Chicago with a lumber cargo and expects to make another trip.

The up-lake steamers Cummings by Democratic and Dunkirk comely, do not want them. Charlevoix did not like their pouches any too well, less Charlevoix had a county seat war on about that time and it was thought the Beaver Island vote would begin to locate the county seat at Charlevoix as against East Jordan. Beaver Island was attached to Charlevoix county and such islands as did not go with Beaver to Charlevoix were attached to Leelanau county.

The disorganization bill contained a provision for the payment of Charlevoix county's debts. Leelanau paid her proportion of the old Mission county bonds without much difficulty, but Charlevoix tried to evade payment on one pretext or another. We finally appealed to the courts. THE MANITOU COUNTY CASE.

Particulars of the Old Controversy From a One-Sided Standpoint.

(From the Grand Rapids Herald.)

The supreme court has decided that the claim of William L. Curtis and James H. Wylie against the county of Charlevoix is valid, and the prospects are now good that payment will be made of an obligation incurred nearly a quarter of a century ago, and in which the accumulated interest is equal to or greater than the principal.

The debt to be paid was incurred by Manitou county in 1882. Manitou county comprised the Beaver Islands, with a total population of about 300. The county had been running behind in its current expenses. When a bill was to be paid an order or a warrant was issued, but the payment was made for taking up these orders. When there did happen to be money in the county treasury the officials knew better not to notify to pay it then in the payment of old bills.

The outstanding orders continued to accumulate until the islands in dissatisfaction, holding some of the orders and unable to realize on them, began to feel the pinch. And then a delegation of officials and citizens went over to Petoskey to negotiate a county loan to take up these old warrants. The loan needed was $1,500 and the proposition was to issue county bonds payable in five years. Curtis and Wylie, who constituted the bank in Petoskey, made the loan. That was in 1885. The bonds are still unpaid.

"We didn't know as much about the Beaver Islands when we made the loan as we did afterward," said James H. Wylie, president of the National City bank, yesterday. "The islanders wouldn't pay neither the principal nor interest. They very cheerfully acknowledged the indebtedness, but they had an unconquerable aversion to paying out money that would leave the island. I have no doubt in business matters they were honest enough among themselves, but the outsiders had no chance in the collection of debts in that community, if payment meant money leaving the island. They held the machinery of debt collection in their own hands, and threats of the law had no terror for them. We brought suit in the Manistee circuit court to get our money back and were given judgment, but the sheriff of the island county, in total disregard of the law in and in accordance with the island policy, and the only good the judgment was to us was the satisfaction of knowing we had it. The islanders showed no bitterness nor animosity during or after our litigation. They simply sat back and waiting.

"In 1905 a bill was introduced in the legislature to disorganize Mission county and attach it to the mainland counties. In support of the bill it was urged that with less than 1,000 population a county government was too much for the islanders to support. Their well known aversion to paying their outside debts and the equally well known impossibility of self collection helped move the passage of the bill very. Charlevoix, as a matter of self-protection, was obliged to be attached was not so easy, however. The islanders were almost unanimously Democratic and Democratic county did not want them. Charlevoix did not like their pouches any too well, less Charlevoix had a county seat war on about that time and it was thought the Beaver Island vote would begin to locate the county seat at Charlevoix as against East Jordan. Beaver Island was attached to Charlevoix county and such islands as did not go with Beaver to Charlevoix were attached to Leelanau county.

THE FISHERMEN.

Profitable Convention Held at St. Joseph—Next Convention to be at Charlevoix.

(St. Joseph Daily Press.)

Two hundred fishermen and citizens sat down to an elaborate banquet at the Hotel Whitcomb and enjoyed the hospitality of the men who have been holding a three day convention in this city. The gathering was one of the most notable ever held in this city. It was a representative meeting, and the Lake Michigan Commercial Fishermen's Association distinguishes itself at home. The banquet concluded the convention and the delegates left for their homes early this morning.

Long before the hour of feasting had arrived the corridors of the hotel were filled with members of genial men. It was a la quet for men. Each of the guests wore a badge of pretty design, upon which were inscribed the words, 8th, Joseph, 11th Annual Convention Lake Michigan Fishermen's Association, 1903."

With the arrival of Elliott's orchestra from South Bend, the long line began to move into the dining room and soon every chair at the four long tables was occupied. The table decorations were red carnations, while at each plate was a carnation for every guest. The menu was fit for a king, and after the invocation by Rev. C. I. Marquardt, for two hours the gentlemen were busy satisfying the inner man. Throughout the banquet hour, the orchestra furnished music, which was one of the features of the gathering.

The feasting over, all chairs were tipped back, and amid the smoke of fragrant cigars, Herman Ihlow, president of the association, arose and in a few words welcomed the guests and introduced Hon. John W. Foster as toastmaster. In his opening greeting to the fishermen and citizens, the toastmaster gave a goodly of an unfavorable nature, and the short address which followed substantiated his remarks.

Each address was not only instructive, but entertaining. The addresses by the local speakers were excellent, and John J. Bott, of Grand Haven, one of the citizens of the association, gave to his hearers the startling statement that unless the fishermen of Lake Michigan have relief from some of the provisions of the existing laws, they might have to quit their vocation. He also said that the members of the association could not carry out their business without being violators of the law should the present condition of affairs continue to exist. He urged the co-operation of the citizens in assisting the fishermen to have laws passed which would be of mutual advantage.

Telegrams from Peter Jensen of Escanaba to tender the thanks and appreciation of the members of the association to the citizens of St. Joseph for the entertainment provided for them during their stay in the city. In a happy manner he referred to the matter and declared that the convention had been a most pleasant one.

Among the local people called upon, and who favored the audience with short and appropriate remarks, were the Hons. L. C. Fyfe, Hon. R. S. Barr, Hon. N. C. Bliss, Hon. W. H. Hall, Justice Fremont Evans, Attorney James O'Hara and C. E. Sweet of Dowagiac. State Game Warden Pierce also gave an interesting talk.

The local committee who had the affair in charge were highly praised by the members of the association and deserve much credit for their labors.

The season yesterday afternoon closed the official business of the convention. The executive committee, with the indorsement of the convention, for the purpose of making new laws governing the fish industry, will be represented at the coming session of the state legislature by the following committee: G. G. Tetken, H. J. Dornbus, Grand Haven; S. Mollhagen, St. Joseph. The following provision for the new proposed state fish law was indorsed by the convention:

"Gloves season for fishing: Trout and white fish, Lake Michigan, Nov. 14 to Dec. 15."

The association favors issuing a daily permit for state game warden's department for catching trout and white fish when eggs are taken, the same to be sent to hatcheries, providing they are returned in due time to lakes; that a man be employed on each craft to take charge of fish eggs required for hatcheries; that there be not more than three gang nets in one set any one time representing the original firm, and that a period of three months prior to Nov. 1 be set aside for non residents to fish in Lake Michigan.

H. J. Dornbus said: "The fishermen have made many concessions, including the closed season, changing the size of nets which represent a loss to the owners of thousands of dollars, for the purpose of going to the legislature with a spirit of fairness and at the same time to protect their own interests. He concluded by remarking: "Under our proposed new law it will not be necessary for us to violate any law to carry on our industry."

Vice President—Peter Jensen, Escanaba.

Secretary and Treasurer—John J. Bott, Grand Haven.

The next convention will be held at Charlevoix, Dec. 7 and 8.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Council Chambers, Dec. 3rd.

At a regular meeting of the Common Council for the City of Charlevoix, the following aldermen were present: Wilber, Swanson, Glossford, Smith and Ward.

Alderman Ward introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

RESOLVED, by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix, that the temporary office of the City of Charlevoix be opened by taking possession of the room in the Bank Block, formerly occupied and kept as an office by the said city. Commencing at a point on the north line of said Bank Block, where the wall of the said Bank Block joins the wall of the south portion thereof, thence, in township of Charlevoix, south 40 feet, thence south-westerly along the middle of said Bank Block, parallel with the south line of said Bank Block, a distance of 40 feet, thence west about 40 feet, thence east about 40 feet last mentioned line to the south line of said Bank Block, thence north 40 feet to the place of beginning, and that such a long and regular line be the east and west quarter line of said portion; thence east along said east and west quarter line of said portion, to the east line of said Bank Block, and to a point 40 feet south of said angle of said Bank Block, thence north 40 feet to the north-westerly direction along the waving of said Bank Block, to the place of said angle of said Bank Block, thence north and northeastwardly along said Bank Block, to the place of the north-east angle of said Bank Block, thence west along said north line of said Bank Block, to the place of beginning, together with all the rights and privileges of said Bank Block, and the use of said Bank Block.

RESOLVED further, that the City of Charlevoix authorize the Board of Supervisors of Charlevoix County, to take possession of said portion of said Bank Block, in accordance with this resolution and provision in the proper manner, for the use of the required form of Birchard.

Adopted as a regular meeting of the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix, in said city on the third day of December, 1903, by a yea and nay vote as follows: Ayes, Wilber, Swanson, Glossford, Smith and Ward. Nays none.

Alderman Swanson offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

RESOLVED by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix that the Mayor and City Clerk be authorized and instructed to execute and deliver the bond of the City of Charlevoix, in the sum of $1,000 for the faithful performance of the duties of the office of a member of the Fire Department, pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Common Council at a regular meeting held on the 22nd day of June, 1903, and the same shall be in the form and tenor set forth in said resolution.

Adopted in a regular meeting of the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix, in said city on the 3rd day of December, 1903, by a yea and nay vote as follows: Ayes, Swanson, Glossford, Smith and Ward. Nays, none.

AS INTELLECTUAL AS OF OLD.

Boys of To-Day Are at Least as Smart as Their Ancestors.

It is often asserted nowadays that our young men and women attain intellectual maturity much later than did their parents and grandparents, and in support of this theory the precocity of distinguished personages who flourished a generation or two ago is cited. Now seriously, who has probably been bored, like the rest of us, with this rum about the phenomenal brightness of the old-fashioned boy, who looked upon the process of 11 leading colleges to see what eighteen have taken place to the age graduates, from 1750 to 1850 the average age at graduation was 22 years 3 months. From 1900 to 1903 it was 21 years 1.9 months. In 100 years at Dartmouth the average age at graduation has fallen three months. This average age, I suppose, has changed so little on the average scale, or. Thus one or two precocious youths of the long ago are selected to enlist all that common sense has with its quantities. But the fact is the twenties, enough has been taken than any of his predecessors, and conformably in time enough out of the ke known it.

Cheerfulness of Englishmen.

If you ask any intelligent foreigner what his chief impression of England is he will invariably say the cheerfulness of the English. If any proof were needed of the prevalent gloom it would surely be found in the sorry laboured which the few remaining cheerful people make and the amazing popularity they enjoy. Our sunny friends and acquaintances can be counted on one hand, and their channels are all around us. A really cheerful Briton is a rarity, such a rare creature that everybody says he must be a fool. Nothing of the sort! He refuses to believe for when she answers in the affirmative.—Lady Gorgeous.

Work with a Will.

We are not sent into this world to do anything into which we cannot put our hearts. We have certain work to do for our bread and that is to be done skillfully, neatly, and to do it honestly, neither is to be done in a hurry or skill, but with a will and what is not worth this effort is not to be done at all.—John Ruskin.

Of Calumny.

A microscope's man may choose to wear out; but a system of calumny, morsing, is insidious, and stunned, even to poultry.—Isaac Hunnell.

Don't Neglect It

It is a serious mistake to neglect a weak heart. It is such a short step to a chronic heart disease. When you notice irregularity of action, occasioning short breath, palpitation, fluttering, pain in chest or difficulty in lying on left side, your heart needs help—a strengthening tonic. There is no better remedy than Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. Its strengthening influence is felt almost at once.

"I owe my life to Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and can truthfully say it is the best medicine for the heart. I have used it for a long time and feel nearly every thing that I read about. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is a wonderful medicine." Mrs. Ella Reeves, Sec. Ladies' Aux. Knights of Pythias, Springfield, Ill.

"I have got taken care for a very bad heart for years and have tried almost everything for the relief of my heart trouble. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is the first medicine that has done me good. I feel better than I have for years." Mrs. Ella Reeves, Springfield, Ill.

"Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by us on a guarantee that it will benefit the heart disease or money back. If it fails we will refund your money."

"I suppose it is useless for me to deny that I had such a paper; but I refuse to give it up. It is concealed in this ship. If you find it you can have it. You shall have no assistance from me in your search."

"I know exactly where it is," said Smith shortly.

"Impossible! You cannot!" cried Miss Ellen.

"It is in your pocket."

"What?"

"There!" he pointed his finger straight at her. "When I was talking about the papers on Captain Evans I felt you make an involuntary movement towards the waist of your dress."

"I wish I had been paralyzed before!"

"It is still time," he said.

"Why, what did I do?"

"You are, I was right. Please give me the paper."

"I will never give it to you! Never!"

"Miss Ellen, speaking seriously—seriously, I say, you know—I have you in my power. You call the Bill of Lading to which I have been subjected, the attempt to drug you and of the cellar—"

"Miss Ellen," he proceeded, "not one of those men would have dared to do it to you. I was just about to recall them when you came down."

"Oh," groaned the girl in agony, for that there was no doubt in her mind upon this also instinctively recognized, "why did I come?"

"Why, indeed? I wouldn't hurt a hair of your head."

"Man or devil, ruthless you are have played upon me."

"No, I do assure you. I had to get you out. That was the only way."

"Now I am out, you have your power, curse!"

"I listen to no, Miss Ellen."

"Miss Jones, if you please."

"Nonsense! I'll call you Ellen, darling, in another minute if you make me desperate. Miss Jones, I repeat, I depends upon my getting that paper. Without it I can do nothing. With it I can do anything that pleases. As you know, I am utterly without influence. I have no powerful friends. I must depend entirely upon myself. With that paper success is certain. Unless, in this enterprise at the beginning of the way, I embrace the opportunity presented, I shall be a failure. Above all other men I have sworn to serve the British government. I am a street waif. What I might have done had I been trained and an opportunity given me I sometimes shudder to think upon. I have an upper entry here in do my country, a compromise, a notable service, to repay in some measure the debt I owe for my life. I see you with my whole heart and soul. I would do nothing to spare you, but I must have that paper; and there is something more. I said that in capacity the ship that sailed yesterday. I hoped to capture—to win—you also."

"Never, never!"

"I shall! I am an unknown, an illegitimate man among many thousands, as insignificant as my name. I shall make myself remarkable with this opportunity. In spite of your anger, I know—they say a woman's anger—that when a man loves her. Why shouldn't a man know when a woman loves him? I feel that you do love me. When you have time to think calmly over the situation you will see that I am justified by my demand, and you will love me the more for not giving in to you now."

"Why do you mean to do?"

She has grown very pale by this time and her voice was quite low and trembling.

"You ask me what I mean to do. I mean do just it that way, give me the paper."

"I will not! Oh, that I were a man!"

"Miss Ellen, you must."

"I swear I will not!" whispered the girl desperately.

"Ellen," said the young officer relentlessly, and he had the look of cruelty in her face as the girl herself, "I shall have it take it!"

"What?" she said.

"You wouldn't dare—"

"To serve my country, to destroy that side and to save the other, to save the stopped.

"You are a gentleman," she urged piteously.

"Miss Ellen, please give me that paper, for pleaded.

"No!"

"Not a drop away from him when her hands clasped upon her breast. Black she sent off the lashes from her dilated eyes, and he followed her. He stepped nearer her, behind, the stairs.

"There is no other way," he whispered at last. "I must have it."

Perspiration stood upon his forehead. His nostrils flared his lips, moved closer to her, and stretched out his hand.

"Dog!" she said hoarsely, terrified, and outraged, but resolute.

"If there were any witness on the ship beside your servant, I would have them search you. As it is it is better that I take it from another—"

He was very close now, and looked wildly about him for a way of escape in vain.

"The paper!" said Smith sternly. "I must have that paper!"

He had touched her. He was in earnest then.

"No!" she cried, at last giving way before his desperate determination.

She hastily put aside his hand the buttons of her waist with trembling fingers, drew her hand into her bosom and with a piece of paper, which she crumpled in her clenched fist, gave it to the young officer as if to strike him with her hand or throw the paper in his face, but he caught her wrist in his iron grasp and drew out the paper. It was the last chart that he required. She stood before him absolutely ashamed, yet almost beautiful in her indignation. He taken her at her word, a great sorrow, a great pity, in his glance. He would fain have taken her in his arms to comfort her, but he did not dare. She dropped to her seat, her head fell forward upon her arms on the table. She had been into a perfect fashion in tears. He had scrutinized her indignation, he had encounter her shelter. He had only then assured of her weak. Her tears unmanned him.

"Forgive me," he pleaded, kneeling by her side and touching her bowed head tenderly. "Forgive me. I had to do it. Everything depended upon it—"

"Dirk as variety of me."

"Work you leave me—"

Medicine That is Medicine.

"I have suffered a good deal with stomach and stomach complaints, but I have now found a remedy that keeps me well, and that remedy is Electric Bitters; a medicine that is medicine for stomach and liver troubles, and for run down conditions," says W. C. Koestler, of Halliday, Ark. Electric Bitters purify and enrich the blood, tone up the nerves, and impart vigor and energy to the weak. Your money back if not satisfied. It is only 50c. Sold at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The W. H. White company of Boyne City, is the incorporators of a new company at Bay City, known as the Michigan Lumber company. They will control over three hundred million of hardwood and large hemlock and pine tracts in Otsego and Montmorency counties, along the Michigan Central. The company now has several jobs yet to right and will probably acquire more. The W. H. Young Co., also one of the incorporators, last week made a deal for about fifty million feet from the W. H. White company. The capitalization of the new company is $500,000, and they will at once begin the construction of lumber, shingle, lath and stave mills on a 110 acre site at Bay City.

Traverse City Herald: John Monroe is busy pumping out his pile driver, at John Ziegler's, which is at the mouth of the river, or rath-mouth, the scow having been sunk for some time. After she is pumped out, she will be taken to East Jordan, where she will be rebuilt. The pile driver was lost in a wind storm, last fall. The boat was formerly one of the best of her kind on the lakes, being fitted with paddle wheels so that she could move herself around at the rate of four miles an hour, besides for the usual dinking room, etc. but a fire almost put her out of commission. Because of the rush of work this season, only temporary repairs were made, but can easily be done, she will be put back into shape again.

East Jordan Enterprise: Joseph Bullard, a pioneer of this region, was drowned in the waters of South Arm last Friday night. He had left his home on the West Side about 3 o'clock that afternoon and rowed across the lake, in town, leaving his boat at the foot of Kiser's St. He started for home about 8:30 that evening and that was the last seen of him alive. When he did not return home Friday night his wife became alarmed and started a search for him which resulted in finding his boat floating bottom upward near the "lines." This brought the inevitable conclusion that he had drowned and the lake was dragged for his body, which was discovered Sunday morning at the foot of William St. about ten rods out in the lake. Jos. Bullaf was born in Germany 72 years ago. Coming to this country with his parents when but a lad, he has resided in South Arm township for 52 years. In 1859 he was united in marriage with Miss Frankie Lanway who with two sons is left to mourn the loss of husband and father. He also leaves an aged mother, Mrs. Stine Bullaf, a sister, Mrs. Wm. Superneau, and two brothers, Felix and Frank all of who reside here.

East Jordan Enterprise: The Central Lake Canning Co. shipped two large carloads of canned goods to Boston this week, completing their present orders in the east. Their goods go to some of the principal cities of the east and middle west. The fact that the last carload went to a customer who has had their goods for years, speaks well for the quality of the goods packed. The past season's output has been practically all marketed, and on a good many lines the company has not been able to fill nearly all orders in full, particularly canning beans. As soon as Manager Gill can get the yearly reports completed he will begin to make contracts for next season, hoping to increase along some lines. The substations at East Jordan and Bellaire will be continued next season with a larger acreage than last year.

Traverse City Herald: J. D. and J. C. Emerson have seen a while due on the pine plains and although they took several shots and it, the animal succeeded in making its escape. That the Emersons have not lost skill, is shown by the fact that they brought back with them, two fine bucks. While deer are associated with superstition, the Indians long responsible for this. It is said that a white deer possess a charm which renders it immune from ordinary bullets, but can be kill by a specially moulded silver bullet. It is not always desirable to kill these animals, however, as superstitution alleges that after a person has succeeded in slaying one, he will never kill another deer, that just before dying, the deer rides like a woman and it is even said that it takes a woman's shape. The cows of the slayer are also supposed to give bloody pails and many other dire things are promised.

A Dangerous Operation

is the removal of the appendix by a surgeon. No one who takes Dr. King's New Life Pills is ever subjected to this frightful ordeal. They work so quietly you don't feel them. They give complexion, headache, biliousness and malaria. Use at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Harbor Springs high school and Charlevoix high school will debate the question; Resolved, "That the railroads of the United States should be owned and operated by the Federal Government." The date has not yet been set.

Supt. Woodley received a letter from the U. of M. announcing that the high school was continued on the list of accredited schools.

Save a date for the play which is to be given for the Athletic Association.

The Athletic Association will give entertainment at the Charlevoix Theater on Wednesday evening, Dec. 16, which will consist of practically two plays. The first will be "A Box of Monkeys" containing two scenes. The second play will be "A Christmas Chime," of one scene. Remember the date, and also that the proceeds will go to the Athletic Association.

County Normal.

Florence Stebbin substituted for Miss Manson at the Washington school Tuesday morning.

The Normal Class visited Miss Crowell's room for the purpose of observing a lesson in second grade reading.

Alma Brodie substituted for Miss Sherman in the primary grades Wednesday afternoon.

County Commissioner, J. H. Bifford, visited the Normal room Friday. He gave us a very interesting and practical talk, the main point of which was that in all reading the thought should be brought out, thus teaching the pupils to think.

Marked for Death.

"Three years ago I was marked for death. A grave yard cough was setting up lungs to prepare. Doctors failed to help me, and hope had fled, when my husband got Dr. King's New Discovery," says Mrs. A. C. Wilmoth, of Rose, Ky. "After one dose my cough was easier, and I continued using it and improvement kept on until I had gained 35 pounds in weight and my health was fully restored." This medicine holds the world's healing record for coughs and colds and lung and throat diseases. It prevents pneumonia. Sold under guarantee at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Death That Led to Good.

Bismarck vowed that after passing a competitive examination a man was never any good. That the strain wrecked him. Still it was crumbling, the remnants of the tremulous mind of Lord Chesterfield, which brought about the reform of the calendar. Crumbling and flattery did it. "I have been of late a sort of an astronomer, despite myself," he wrote. "I was enticed to take some astronomical person, of which I did not understand one word, but put it by heart and spoke it by rote as a master." He had to make the peers believe that he knew something of the matter, and also to make them believe that they knew something of it themselves. Which they did not. For his own part, he said he could as well have talked Greek or Sanscrit to an astronomer, and they would have understood him full as well. They humored him to the limit. They would not betray ignorance upon a subject as to which he knew as much as they knew himself. Flattery. Time they reformed the calendar.

Bucolic Ignorance.

For humor and sheer long indignation of the tongue and full prevarication in a spirited and novel manner, commend us to Uncle Nick Sherman, of Ionia county. Nick is a "character" and, to be kind of spritual about it, he is to the manor born. He is taken down as a remote ancestor "Dutch Kilian," which is believed by the Hollands from whom he is descended to be the highest title from the lower Dutch nobility. The Dutch, like the people of Holland, are said to be supposed to have dwelt in marshes, and Nick's ancestor, Dutch Kilian, was once upon a time, when he was a little boy, lost in the marshes of his native home. Time they reformed the calendar.

STRANGE USES OF PICTURES.

Have Been Frequently Diverted from Their Prime Purpose.

Though the prime purpose of pictures is to please and instruct, they have at times been diverted to other uses. During the recent hearing of a case at a London police court a witness gave evidence that the prisoner, who was charged with attempted murder and suicide, had drawn his attention to a couple of pictures on the mantel of which, written in pencil was a statement by the accused setting forth the reason for his premeditated crime.

Fire now pictures have been enlisted in Hymen's cause. That celebrated painter of flower and fruit subjects, William Hunt, was on one occasion commissioned by a gentleman to paint his portrait in the attitude of kneeling and holding in his hand an open scroll whereon was written a declaration of love and offer of marriage. The lady to whom this unusual proposal of marriage was ever realized with a half drawing of herself with a sheet of paper in her hand on which was inscribed a hymeneal "yes."

Painters have not infrequently been chosen by wealthy testators to bidding places for their wills. To an even slender length of necessity did a gentleman go when he gave a handsome sum to Mulready to execute a picture suitable for the back of his will which, thus adorned, was framed and hung in his drawing room.

As debt collectors, too, they have proved efficacious. Sir, when a young man, received an order from certain Mazzlebone tradesmen to make a full and faithful representation of the locality who was unlikely serve notice in a manner and what is more trains when finished were displayed in the windows of their subject's house, whereupon the debtor came to move them from the public gaze until their bills were paid. Seeing no way of escaping ridicule save by yielding to their demands the gentleman on condition that the objectionable portraits were destroyed, agreed to discharge his debts.

Soon after he settled in London the famous Lawrence, then a mere youth, was witness to a dastardly assault on a young lady by a villain, who threatened to make good his escape, nothing, however, before he had been well noted by the young artist, who immediately retiring to his studio in Leicester square, drew from memory a recognizable portrait. This, which he handed to the police, was the means of bringing the criminal to justice.

That wayward genius, George Morland, was often compelled, on demand, to pay his debts. On one occasion he stayed at an inn where he specially ran up no account which he was unable to meet. He offered a picture in payment, but landlord demurred. Suddenly, however, he ere hesitated, and, at his request, the artist, in sight of his party, where, he trusted, a measure of amusement might be found, had his dog, and a few days later received his bill receipted. The following Sunday, when he went to his parish church in a truly novel waistcoat, he was surprised to see the painter's masterpiece, stretched across his ample chest, displayed to the amazed congregation the picture of a gigantic pig.

Socialism in Sweden.

Socialism is so fashionable, and its progress so great, that Sweden, after boasting itself to improve its methods, is now trying to outdo its rival. The demand for more fresh air is so great that a fad in progressive circumstances.

A Death Each Second.

The number of deaths in the world annually is 32,000,000, or 91,824 per day, 3,826 per hour, 63 per minute, and one per second. It is estimated that the population of the earth at the present time is being increased at the rate of about 10,000,000 annually.

The Reason.

"Why worry more than women?" "Why, they get only have everything to worry about that women have, but they also take the women to worry about, too."—Smart Set.

Discriminating Woman.

Lady (hurriedly) at the door, upon progress for years, to make sure, she is not mistaken in her choice, and to avoid the bewildering result to improve its methods. Tramp—Lady, I'm a deaf mute. The demand for more fresh air is so great that a fad in progressive circumstances.

Cures Money to Keep Racehorses.

To keep a racehorse in even moderate condition in Cincinnati, the proper attendants, costs $225 a year.

The Mistral.

The mistral is a cold northwest wind which does much damage at certain seasons in France and Italy. From the same cause it is especially violent. It dries up the soil and causes dangerous storms on the Mediterranean.

Daily Thought.

The significance of time act well performed is the best incentive to another effort.

Wear Your Gloves Cold.

When frost gives way, it is likely to be hot times around the house.

Be a Good Man, My Dear.

Just the last words which Sir Walter spoke to Lockhart, his son-in-law, were: "Be a good man, my dear—and with the last tinker of hope in the dying man he added a farewell to his family, and to every blessed thing—William Makepeace Thackeray.

Local News.

—Amos Chaloupka returned home Tuesday night from the West.

—Chief of police says all teams attached to sleighs or cutters must wear bells, according to law.

—W. S. Stoddard, manager of the Bridge Theater, will open a vaudeville and motion picture show in Petoskey Monday night.

—The girls of the Junior Class will hold a cake sale in the Farmers Rest Room, on Bridge street, on Saturday, December 19th.

—On Christmas Eve, the Congregational Sunday School will give a beautiful cantata entitled "Santa Claus Entertained," at the church.

—Henri Elsbach, of the local corps of the Salvation Army, has been ordered to Algoma to assist Capt. Hoy, Marshall is a special Christmas effort.

—The White & Co. steamer Three Brothers arrived Monday with a cargo of hay from Kenosha, and taken back to Chicago her last cargo of lumber for the year.

—Miss May Woods, who was operated upon for appendicitis three weeks ago, is gaining very fast under Dr. Armstrong's care, and expects to join her class at the high school after Christmas.

—Begin to think now, boys, about 1909, and what you are going to do about stepping up to a higher plane, after January 1st. In this glad holiday time put your arms about your mother's neck and make sure vows.

—Chas. S. Osborne, of Sault Ste. Marie, it is said will be a candidate for governor in 1910. There are a lot of creepers' logs in the state who will second his nomination. Mr. Osborne will be the next governor of Michigan.

—Expert accountant J. A. Dresser, of Detroit, in accordance with the resolution of the board of supervisors last October, is engaged on an audit of the county treasurer's books. He is making rapid progress. Up to Monday night Mr. Payton was found to be short ten cents. Payton swears this will show up "in the wash," but Dresser says he don't know, it looks dark.

—The Salvation Army will hold a Xmas entertainment at their hall next Wednesday evening, Dec. 23. A Xmas tree will be arranged and anyone wishing to put presents on into tree may do so by seeing the officer in charge. The poor and needy are going to be looked after, and dinner will lessent out to the worthy poor. Anyone wishing to donate for this may do so; donation in money can be left at Chapin's drug store or sent to Capt. J. Davis, box 81.

—Mrs. Len Kirby and family left here last week to join Mr. Kirby in Spokane.

—Capt. Finnegan, Jr. A. M. Wilkinson, Dr. Swinton and L. P. Adams made the Beaver Island trip yesterday.

—Fred G. Hellinger's Star Jewelry and Optical Store has a holiday ad. in this issue that will be of interest to holiday buyers.

—The fishing tug G. H. Green left Monday for Kewaunee, Wis., where she will fish during the winter. The Beutel Co. tugs Violet and Cisco will also fish there.

—John Nordrum and Sam Halverson, Charlevoix fishermen left Saturday for Boston, where they will work in the salt water fisheries for the winter. Both are Norwegians and are familiar with the work.

—Allen J. Kent, son of Capt. A. A. Kent, of the local life saving service, who recently enlisted in the navy as an ordinary seaman, has been promoted to able bodied seaman and assigned to the battleship California.

—W. S. Spencer, for many years a Petoskey business man, died at his home in that city yesterday. One by one the pioneers are dropping out. Mr. Spencer was a most intimate friend of the editor of this paper, for more than a quarter of a century, and on his bier we lay the tribute of a loving friend and frater.

—To every reader of the SENTINEL and all others whose hearts throb at the thought of the bright Christmas holiday, we cordially wish a Merry Christmas. To the young the day means much; to the old it may mean, possibly, more, because of the near approach of the hour when the sun shall set here and rise again in a better land where life, who was born in Bethlehem, and in the bright morning star of the Christian's hope, shall welcome those who have believed, and whose faith has risen above the tumult of worldly and temporal affairs. To all we give Christmas greetings.

—At the last term of court orders were given the sheriff to notify all saloon keepers in Charlevoix county that the law regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors must be strictly lived up to in the future. In some towns in this county the law has not been enforced, and liquor has been sold on Sundays, holidays and before and after hours set for opening and closing of the saloon in defiance. This order also stops the usual practice of "cleaning out" on Sunday mornings. Hereafter any saloon keeper who allows his refreshment parlors to be opened for any cause other than the protection of his property will be prosecuted. All people interested in good government will watch the result of the strict enforcement of the law.

—The beautiful, balmy spring weather of the past week is making a big hole in the winter. We write this Monday morn, and cannot foretell what may occur between this hour and the hour of our going to press, and will not be responsible for any weather eccentricities that may occur in the interim. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." While in jolly her class at the high school after Christmas.

—Begin to think now, boys, about 1909, and what you are going to do about stepping up to a higher plane, after January 1st. In this glad holiday time put your arms about your mother's neck and make sure vows.

—James C. Chase, a son of Sam R. Chase, has been appointed postmaster at Norwood.

—Harvey Campbell, who has been engineer of the Manistee steamer Helen C., is home for the winter.

—Mrs. J. A. Hawkins, who has been spending two months with friends at Alto, Mich., returned Tuesday evening.

—Chas. Novak, of the Charlevoix cigar factory, went to Beaver Island Monday and came back with a sail case full of orders.

—Capt. E. S. Small, of this city, is now master of the steamer Kaneb. Capt. Stuffelebeam, late of the Illinois, is sailing the Sterling.

—Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kiser in the loss of their infant son, who died one day last week at the hour of his birth.

—The Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational church will hold its annual meeting at the home of Mrs. A. T. Burnett Friday afternoon at 2:30.

—The new Majestic Theater will be opened next Monday night, with fine vaudeville attractions and moving pictures. Although not yet entirely finished, the new place of amusement is a beauty. It is elegantly seated, and plentifully warmed by steam.

—Chief of police, George Reinhardt, slipped and fell on the sidewalk Sunday, breaking several ribs—we did not learn just how many—somewhere from three to a dozen. He is reported as doing well, and the big fat cop will be seen on the street again some time in 1909. We hope sooner.

—A recent call at the county treasurer's office we found Mr. Payton examining an assessment roll of Charlevoix township, dated 1877, when the township embraced all of T. 34-5, T. 34-6 and T. 34-8. A. Bultara was township treasurer, D. C. Nettleton supervisor, A. H. Upright county clerk and Dymn See county treasurer.

—The steamer Lina Rochlech went to Beaver Island Monday morning with a load of coal for the fishing. The whitefish spawn fishing closed up Sunday, but the closed season expired Monday night. So long as the weather permits fishing is required, the smelts that appear on gasoline boats will be out. In all probability there will be thirty days of fishing, subject to weather conditions.

—The Charlevoix Odd Fellows had a high old time at their annual gathering last Thursday night. The event combined the Odd Fellows, wives and sweet hearts, and the latter, we are told, were the majority. The Rebecca were the chief factors in the lodge room and three courses of refreshments were served by the "grub." A most interesting program was presented, including an address by Judge Mayne on "Odd Fellowship." Altogether it was a most enjoyable event, and one that will take rank with the many that have been produced by this pioneer and most honorable organization.

"PETE" TO GO AROUND HORN.

The Popular Master of the Beaver Will Take the Magellan Route to Seattle.

Capt. P. D. Campbell will go around the Horn, or through the Straits of Magellan in January, from New York to Seattle, Washington.

As it is well known, the captain's eldest son, Ira, who went west several years ago, and who is an honor graduate of the law department of the Michigan University, jumped into an enviable legal standing at Seattle, and now has a clientage of which he may be proud.

One of his clients is a leading Transportation company of Seattle, which lately bought the steamer St. Croix, at New York, for service on the Pacific, and she will leave New York January 10th, via Magellan Straits for Seattle. The St. Croix is a steel ship about the size of the Manitou. Mr. Campbell has sent his father a pass for the trip, and it is unnecessary to say he will go, leaving here soon after Jan. 1st.

The St. Croix is to stop at Panama with a delegation of New York business men, which will make the trip doubly interesting.

The Sugar Factory.

The West Michigan Sugar Co's factory sliced its last ton of beets for the campaign on the evening of the 10th, and practically closed the factory Saturday night.

The season so far as the operations of the factory and the limited beet supply is concerned, has been successful. Mr. Marting reports that 25 percent more beets came in on 25 percent less acreage than was secured the previous season. The percentage of sugar in the beets was also been above that of last year, and has demonstrated that a dry season need have no terrors for the farmer who raises beets, as few seasons in the history of this region has given us less rain than this.

The season taught, and pretty well learned by the farmers, is that the beet crop, one season with another, is a profitable crop to raise, and from all directions comes information that the acreage will at least be doubled next year.

On the other hand, the factory folks are encouraged by the results of this season, (although no profit was accrued,) and the outlook for next year is encouraging.

—The remarkable character of Mr. Lon T. Beauchamp, who was found at the Lecture Course for Jan. 5th is known by the following: "Lon T. Beauchamp is a great, a popular life. Loving his mother when a babe, he spents the early years of his life among the Creek, Choctaw and Cherokee Indians, and uses many of the incidents of the tribes as illustrations in his lectures. He has traveled one million miles in the old world and the new, investigating the lives of the underworld in the slums and dens of the world's greatest cities, writing his experiences for the press. He has written books that have been translated into foreign tongues. And of which many editions have been sold. It is doubtful if any man on the platform chooses as much laughter in an hour as does Mr. Beauchamp."

PINE LAKE COMMERCE.

Bridge Tender Johnson Makes a Comprehensive Report of Tonnage.

The River bridge went into commission on April 16, 1908, the steamer Beaver being the first boat to call for the draw. On that day the Beaver made her first trip to Beaver Island in 1908, and up to this date she has made 173 trips and will most likely make 8 or 10 trips more this season. She passed through the bridge 200 times, making a total tonage for the steamer Beaver, up to this date, of 41,266 gross tons.

The largest day in tonnage was on July 18th, which was 23,114 gross tons; the bridge swung 42 times that day.

The largest load was taken out by the steamer Wyoming on August 13, which was 1,200,000 feet of lumber.

The steamer Three Brothers will make a total of 23 trips. This being her last trip, and making a total of 13,000,000 feet of lumber that she has taken out of this port this season.

The steamer Charles Neff, carrying one from Escanaba to Boyne City made her first trip to this port on August 22, 1908, since that time she has added to the tonnage of this port a total of 31,734 gross tons.

The steamer Stanton came into this port primarily on time on each of her schedule trips and without a blight of any kind, making a total of 105 times that she passed through Pine River bridge, and adding 474,502 gross tons to the credit of Charlevoix harbor.

While there was not as many sailing vessels came into this port as in former years there was fully as many steam barges and larger and better boats which brings the tonage more than it was in the year 1907.

The total tonnage for the year 1908 up to December 1st is as follows: April, 91,424; May, 124,799; June, 127,681; July, 145,647; August, 128,321; September, 197,972; October, 91,245; November, 80,842. Making a total of 1,163,821 gross tons.

Bridge Tender.

Hayes, the Handcuff King, opened Monday evening and astonished everybody with his marvelous work. He escapes from handcuffs, shackles and mail pouches. This act is for above and away from any set of this kind. McDonald & Stoddard, the never ever people, are now on the bridge, and are pleasing everybody with their eccentric comedy act.

Next week the Physical Culture Girls will be here, (Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday,) an act that is guaranteed to please all.

Friday night will be amateur and souvenir night. Don't forget to attend this show when you get 50 cents worth of entertainment for 5 and 10 cents.

Bad Weather for Coughs

Don't let a cough or a cold hang on in this weather. However slight it may be, if you get another cold on top of it you're almost sure to develop pneumonia, pleurisy, bronchitis or tonsilitis. Even if your cough grows no worse, unless you get rid of it right away it will become firmly settled and stay with you for months, seriously weakening your lungs from the continual strain.

Buy some good cough medicine to-day and stop it now. We have several excellent cough remedies that will give you relief. We can heartily endorse Rexall Cherry Juice Cough Syrup for coughs, hoarseness and sore throat. One dose of this new preparation is guaranteed to relieve any cough, and one bottle to cure it. This delightfully flavored and palatable cough syrup is as different from the old, nauseating cough remedies as it is possible to imagine. It is very pleasant for children; easy to take and immediate in its effects. Sold with the Rexall guarantee.

The truth, however, was too incisive a thing be could take hold her. There was a relief in its sharpness which was almost too great for words. Mingled with her indignation was a bitter resentment against the man who had tricked her into coming into the cabin at his command, and then locked her like a girl in the prison. The feeling that if she had made a mere standard retaliation, he would neither have entered the cabin nor have allowed his name to do so was most galling to her. And the fact that her disparagement of the court was inevitable greatly contented an't relieved her.

"I suppose," she said, "it wasn't a trick then?"

"I was not."

"Would you have sent those men in there to drag me out? You told me you would not."

"That was true.

"Would you have got me out then?"

"I should have gone in for you myself."

"And you would have dared lay hands on me?" she said, with a little laugh.

"Listen to me, Ellen. For you, for my country, I would dare—you can explain to me, which I must be only temporary, for how it is done. Your father would have some of me before. Now that the war has started and we are in a different phase in this great struggle just beginning he will be more bitterly opposed to me than ever. This adventure gives me a hold upon him by means of which I hope to win you. If I capture the privateer—

"Would you give her up to him for me?"

"Miss Ellen," said Mr. Smith quietly, "you have pulled me for my conduct towards you a dreadfully mean trick in the game of justice, perhaps. That last remark, however, was worse than anything I have done. If you think so meanly of me as to suppose that I would do this for any reward, or even money to my own personal advantage, great though it is, then, for the first time since I met you, I feel I despair of ever winning you for my own. I know you could never love where you did not respect, and you could not respect me if you believed me capable of that. I asked you to come on deck that you might enjoy the evening. I see now that you can enjoy it better alone. I will communicate my intentions with regard to you to morrow. Good-night."

He bowed gravely, and turning on his heel stepped forward. In two bounds she was by his side.

"You will not go?" she said passionately. "Why do you always get me in the wrong? I wonder why it was just a question—

"To be a bitter thing? Well, you said it. Thank you. It's what I might expect from such an affection—

"Stop!" she cried. "Who said that I had any affection for you?"

"I thought so."

"And you thought I could retain it after this sneering?"

"I hoped so."

"Oh, you are impossible!" cried the girl.

He changed his attack swiftly.

"Have you retained it?"

"In what way would your success with the privateer enable you to win—me?" she asked softly.

"I hoped to venture your father with the ship. I reasoned that as soon as the Greyhound was seen coming around the bend he would lend us the Ellen to receive us. With him in my power, I intended to offer him his present freedom in return for his consent to our marriage."

"Did you think so meanly of my father as to believe that he would be a party to a bargain of that kind?"

"No," answered the young officer quickly, "then we out. I knew that, being an honorable and brave old soldier he would refuse that proposal."

"You have not hesitated—

"But I thought that you might be moved by love to secure his freedom."

"By my own slavery?"

"By a sacrifice which I, in letting me love you, for the sake of my life. You would pay anything—

"To stay looks like that, doesn't it?"

"You must not judge by day. The circumstances were unusual."

"I do not own anything but his sloop and I am ordinarily—where you are concerned, that is," smiled Mr. Smith, "if I can only have you. You have the sole own way."

"And do you propose to carry out this little plan now?" she asked.

"I do."

"And you wish to win me, force my consent, by the threat of a serious crime for my father?"

"I want to give you an excuse for obeying the dictates of your heart. Won't you believe me when I solemnly assure you that about the last thing I have ever wished I have loved only you? That I have never had thought for another woman? That your beautiful face"—even the palest women then to be bold that she is beautiful—"has been before me always? I love you more than ever."

"More than your country?"

"Certainly," he answered without hesitation.

"Why, then, do you do your duty to my hurt?"

"Miss Ellen, men do not always do the thing they wish to do. We do the thing that honor demands, though oftentimes the heart pulls quite another way. I feel my loving would give me more pleasure than to be able to turn the ship over to you and to say that I and all in it would do your bidding; that I would sail where you, in your, your words my words. To be able to do that, to be able to feel as I do in heart—nothing would make me happier than that—but I can not."

"What is that?" she whispered softly. "To have you mine?"

"They were done together now. He stopped a little and caught her hand. Her fingers lingered in his clasp, she did not draw them away. Its heat nerved her hand was inverted. Its blood her softly on the cheek. Then she turned her face towards him, crimson, but weakly, to draw away her hand.

"This," she said, still a trace of her former humor, "is the last straw. Yours was a bad touch of defiance in her words and attitude. "You are the captain of this ship. You were on equity, you have the advantage of me. If you choose to kiss your prisoner, why, I cannot help it."

"Ellen, dear," he said his heart throbbing tempestuously, "I ship you your hand and touch your cheek as the captain of the ship, but as the man who loves you. Won't you understand?"

"I understand everything," said the girl hurriedly, her color breaking—"everything, everything, better than myself. I am a fool! You ought to hate me. Good-night."

She turned away from him resolutely gone. He was too wise to detain her, and in a moment she was gone.

"I guess," he said jubilantly to himself, "that I'll get both Ellens before I'm through with this undertaking."

As for Miss Ellen, when she got to her cabin she didn't know whether she hated herself most for what she called her weakness, or loved him more for what she called his strength. Its had insulted her grossly in the afternoon, and he had kissed her in the night. Did he think lightly of a woman's balance that way? She could neither forgive the one nor forget the other. The touch of his lips had been sweet to her, too. She was ashamed, ashamed of her weakness, but she loved him. She wished that she had let him take her in his arms and kiss her again. And yet the shame of it!

There were the only things adequate to these problems and conditions.

CHAPTER IX.

On that fearful night Miss Ellen thought that she would never get to sleep after the exciting events of the day. In no great hurt to her, she felt, in spite of the comfort and satisfaction she took in the fine manner of the man who had dared with her honor, in spite of her insolence to him, she was ashamed of the way she dropped asleep and slept as soundly as if she had not sinned.

Captain Smith was more wakeful. In the first place, the kiss he had taken was too fine from him to time, but his heart was light enough, his conscience clear enough, to permit him that he could not feel. He hadn't dropped of ever winning for my sake. I know you could never love where you did not respect, and you could not respect me if you believed me capable of that. I asked you to come on deck that you might enjoy the evening. I see now that you can enjoy it better alone. I will communicate my intentions with regard to you to-morrow. Good-night."

He bowed gravely, and turning on his heel stepped forward. In two bounds she was by his side.

"You will not go?" she said passionately. "Why do you always get me in the wrong? I wonder why it was just a question—

"To be a bitter thing? Well, you said it. Thank you. It's what I might expect from such an affection—

"Stop!" she cried. "Who said that I had any affection for you?"

"I thought so."

"And you thought I could retain it after this sneering?"

"I hoped so."

"Oh, you are impossible!" cried the girl.

He changed his attack swiftly.

"Have you retained it?"

"In what way would your success with the privateer enable you to win—me?" she asked softly.

"I hoped to venture your father with the ship. I reasoned that as soon as the Greyhound was seen coming around the bend he would lend us the Ellen to receive us. With him in my power, I intended to offer him his present freedom in return for his consent to our marriage."

"Did you think so meanly of my father as to believe that he would be a party to a bargain of that kind?"

"No," answered the young officer quickly, "then we out. I knew that, being an honorable and brave old soldier he would refuse that proposal."

"You have not hesitated—

"But I thought that you might be moved by love to secure his freedom."

"By my own slavery?"

"By a sacrifice which I, in letting me love you, for the sake of my life. You would pay anything—

"To stay looks like that, doesn't it?"

"You must not judge by day. The circumstances were unusual."

"I do not own anything but his sloop and I am ordinarily—where you are concerned, that is," smiled Mr. Smith, "if I can only have you. You have the sole own way."

"And do you propose to carry out this little plan now?" she asked.

"I do."

"And you wish to win me, force my consent, by the threat of a serious crime for my father?"

"I want to give you an excuse for obeying the dictates of your heart. Won't you believe me when I solemnly assure you that about the last thing I have ever wished I have loved only you? That I have never had thought for another woman? That your beautiful face"—even the palest women then to be bold that she is beautiful—"has been before me always? I love you more than ever."

"More than your country?"

"Certainly," he answered without hesitation.

"Why, then, do you do your duty to my hurt?"

"Miss Ellen, men do not always do the thing they wish to do. We do the thing that honor demands, though oftentimes the heart pulls quite another way. I feel my loving would give me more pleasure than to be able to turn the ship over to you and to say that I and all in it would do your bidding; that your words would be my words, your words my words. To be able to do that, to be able to feel as I do in heart—nothing would make me happier than that—but I can not."

"What is that?" she whispered softly. "To have you mine?"

They were done together now. He stopped a little and caught her hand. Her fingers lingered in his clasp, she did not draw them away. Its heat nerved her hand was inverted. Its blood her softly on the cheek. Then she turned her face towards him, crimson, but weakly, to draw away her hand.

LEARNING HOW TO LIVE.

By Henry P. Cope.

"Whoso findeth me (Wisdom) findeth life."—Prov. 8:35.

If you desire to have your boy become a skilled engineer you send him to a school where he may be trained as an engineer; but if you desire to have him keen to his difference between right and wrong, if you desire to have him heroic in man of high character, you are quite likely to take chances on his picking up such difficult attainments.

There is no difficulty in discovering agencies and means, by which one may learn how to make a good living, but if one would learn the great art of a good and worthy life, that is a different matter, apparently one of less importance. It seems to be generally assumed that you have to make the acquisition of this by the natural sciences by educational processes, but the greatest of all the arts and sciences you get by accident.

Character, the fruitage of the whole life, the crown of all, is the last thing considered in education. A child learns to play the piano by persistent practice, and he learns to be good and less so to others, but the practice of virtue, as the science, is not thought of; it is supposed you must wait until the ingoing of goodness happens to strike you.

Can character be developed by educational methods? Can we cultivate and cuts and pigs to whatever habits we wish, can we train men and women to be what we wish, can we produce merchants, bookkeepers, and lawyers of any type and character we know how to produce good citizens, worthy parents, and capable civil and war workers, and good neighbors?

Are goodness and uprightness the result of knowledge? Are they the fruitage of a certain kind of truth? It is worth while to seek up our minds as to what is the fruitage of knowledge, since we find and we one knows just why, then we are in a most unfortunate situation. If the good can be developed and perfected and the evil eliminated, if childhood of life is a subject in processes in our control, the development and training of such eligible and the most reasonable day of his life. The blockade-runner had scarcely completed its ship-through the smooth water of the sound towards the mouth of the Cape Fear when Miss Ellen came on the appearance on deck. The first glance of the Captain brought a flush to her cheek. She strove bravely to overcome the natural nervousness consequent upon the situation, however, and greeted him in a way which, while it was dignified and stately, was not unkindly, and with an intensity of the first four days. It probably developed here a quiet friendliness which seemed to rise from a decision to accept the inevitable and to make the footing of pleasant comradeship, as it

Solomon Dedicates the Temple—1 Kings, 8.

Golden Text.—"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."—Psa. 122:1.

And now after seven years of building, Solomon's temple was completed, ready for dedicating. It was the wonder of the ancient world which has excited so much criticism since the time of its destruction by the Babylonians. Jerusalem is built on Jerusalem, and its successor as a holy place, the Mosque of Omar, occupies the ancient Moriah, which was the site of Solomon's temple. Throughout the middle ages it influenced in a great degree the forms of Christian churches, and in the Jewish synagogues it was and is a rallying point of all associations of holiness. Since the revival of learning in the Christian country its influence has exercised the gifts of many learned men to reproduce the ideal of eternal commonplace taxed their science to reproduce its form.

But it is not only to Christianity that the Jewish temple has been a rallying point, the whole Mohammedan world look to it as the sacred place of Mohammedan knowledge, and the Jews still recall its glories in their prayers, and look with continual longing, unmatched by that of any other people, to the time that it shall be rebuilt.

The temple was a marvelous place of its people and did much to unite them as a nation. It was the place of the national festivals to which every year, out of all lands to which they might have been driven, they came up to Jerusalem. Its feasts or festivals were the means of binding together the people and the priesthood, and the rebel principle of the monarchy. He designed a new dispensation, in which the successive images, taken from points of view sufficiently removed to apply the laws of astronomy, are placed respectively at right and at left in the interior of two double receptacles, having the form of a horizontal axis, plane mirrors are placed at the center to direct the luminous rays coming from the observer may view them with the aid of stereoscopic mirrors, the image will be projected on a screen by reducing the prisms with adjustment.

UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Dispensed In Office Council By Ustorch at the Nineteenth—Person Delivers Ustorch of the Stomach and Therefore a Remedy for Dyspepsia.

Hon. M. C. Butler, U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can not recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the cause of nine-tenths of the ills of mankind. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, can cure it.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

The Panama Canal and Japan have set down in black and white their mutual sentiments concerning the policy upon which their interests hinge. Yesterday, serve in one important particular, may be considered the end of the idealized notion which Secretary Root and Ambassador Takahira exchanged in the State department at Washington. The two governments which to encourage the free and peaceful development of their Pacific commerce have decided to communicate with atmosphere upon these matters; they have no plans for aggression upon each other, no ulterior purpose, no sinister opportunities in Orient, and they will use all peaceful means to secure the integrity and independence of their empires. There are simple termination of a misunderstanding which could at more than this is one mutual problem of the Pacific which concerns each other with the purpose of reaching an understanding, should any event arise to disturb the principles above set forth.

During the past year the General Land office has recommended that suits be brought on these land claims aggregating 377,000. There were secured in indictments for fraud, which resulted in sixty-three convictions and sixty acquittals; the remaining cases are still pending. Patents have issued eight hundred and eighty-five entries, covering 100,000 acres, and cancelled eight hundred and eighty-five entries, covering 100,000 acres. Patents of special agents. By reason of investigations there have been 1,000 entries of lands in Oregon during the fiscal year 1907-8 in total of 300,000 acres, exclusive of many relinquishments.

The Secretary of the Treasury gave notice of a third issue of Panama Canal bonds to be offered for subscription in bids for which will be received up to Dec. 5. A new plan to prevent fake bids in a combination of a few scrips and cash equal to 2 per cent of the value of the bonds required to be bid. The new issue will be dated Nov. 1, 1908, and will bear interest at 2 per cent, being redeemable in ten years and payable in thirty. It will make a total of two thousand of $62,000,000 issued to the treasury deficit, the working capital balance has been reduced to $18,000,000.

The chemists of the national Department of Agriculture report that they have succeeded in making a good quality of paper from cornstalks, and that the new paper can be produced more cheaply than that made of wood pulp. If experience should confirm this gratifying information a new source of wealth will be opened to the world of corn-growing States, and the depletion of the forests will be checked. But it will be necessary that experiments be made on a large scale before the commercial feasibility of the discovery will be made certain.

By order of the Treasury Department the Internal Revenue bureau has hereafter to required to unit directors of national banks to ascertain their stockholders and report to the Comptroller of the Currency. Secretary Root and Ambassador Takahira exchanged in the State department at Washington The two governments which to encourage the free and peaceful development of their Pacific commerce have decided to communicate with atmosphere upon these matters; they have no plans for aggression upon each other, no ulterior purpose, no sinister opportunities in Orient, and they will use all peaceful means to secure the integrity and independence of their empires. CONGRESS RESUMES ITS IMPORTANT TASK

National Lawmakers Meet to Finish Business Which Was Dropped Last Summer.

NEW LABEL BILL IS OFFERED.

Plan to Bleed Imitations of Goods Other than Food Products Prison Term.

Convening of the sixteenth Congress brought to the capital the usual throngs sent on gathering authorities to the House of Representatives or the Senate chamber for the opening exercises. For days the Senate had been outfitting the benches to seats in the galleries had been great. When the hour of the session arrived there were thrown upon it it seemed a great many idea attempted to take up the entire seating capacity of the two chambers and succeeded. From that time on the visitors arrived in droves. The work does on both floors were soon filled with people who thought to have a good long line of people stood outside each gallery awaiting an opportunity to get acquainted the Senate or House thought some of the more fortunate ones vacating their seats.

Immediately after the Senate had been called to order at 12 o'clock by Vice President Fairbanks, Rev. Edward Everett Hale, the chaplain, opened the session with prayer. Senator Burkett of Nebraska presented the credentials of his colleague, Gurdon W. Hugo, who was sworn in and took his seat in the Senate. The House was called to order by Speaker Cannon. Representative James S. Sherman, entered the chamber as was recorded on another by his Representative Hall of Iowa, making it a unanimous to announce for the ensuing session. Government Tries to Obtain Big Loan and Meets Refusal.

With an annual deficit in the treasury to pay the November salaries of the Portuguese officials, the government at Lisbon the other day made an unsuccessful attempt to borrow $7,000,000 from the Banque Portugal. The loan was refused, owing to the unsatisfactory condition of the government's collateral. The hypothecated condition of the Portuguese treasury was shown more strikingly illustrated. The revolutionists have seized upon the situation and begin to of that date.

DENIES CANAL GRAFT.

President Calls Charges Falsehood and Reviews Public Oil Case.

President Calls Charges Falsehood and Reviews Public Oil Case. Emphatic denial that there was any graft in connection with the purchase of the Panama canal; that the United States government paid $40,000,000 or a single cent to any American citizen, in connection with that deal; that Charles P. Taft or Douglas Robinson, brother-in-law of the President, had anything to do with the purchase of the ditch, has been made by President Theodore Roosevelt. This answer to charges made in the recent campaign appears in a reply written by President Roosevelt in a question by Winthrop Dudley Foulke and made public by the latter.

"Willful and deliberate perversion of the truth" and "falsehoods needed up" are terms used by the President in referring to the above charges as made in the Indianapolis News and in other Indiana papers. The President looks up his cost to sailing of the canal and the records in the canal purchase case are open to the public. Detailed details and charges verbatim are made by Mr. Roosevelt concerning articles in the New York Sun in the Public Oil case.

There Is Promise of Unprecedented Loss on Cattlemen Ranges.

Thousands of cattle on the ranges in Colorado have perished and thousands of others are reported to be starving. The prospect is that there will be unprecedented loss to the cattlemen during the winter, unless there is a change in the weather. Many of stockmen interviewed, in the path of the storm, say that it is the worst early in October, still covers the ranges, and the cattle have been caught in the first storm. This number was increased by the cattle driven down from the high plains. Reports from Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Trinidad and other points in the path of the

The youngest grange in the Grand Traverse district is the East Bay Grange, which meets in the school house in the No. 1 school district in East Bay township.

Boyne City Journal: The large steam freighters Aztec and Mitter, are in port, having come in during the recent blizzard. We understand that they will not go out again but will lay up here for the winter. This is no good harbor for such a purpose as there is on the Great Lakes. Our foundries and machine shops are well equipped to do all necessary repairing or rebuilding and there is no reason why other boats should not choose this place for a winter refuge.

Boyne City Journal: Charlevoix county has always been prosperous but just at present it looks as though prosperity was being thrown at her in chunks. The three leading towns within her borders are being handed some good big factory plants that ought to make things continue to hum. Charlevoix is going to have a large cement plant and another railroad, East Jordan is going to have a Chemical plant and an iron furnace, and Boyne City is going to get still more good things. Charlevoix county is this blessed with good soil and climate and will be had very cheaply. The market for farm products will be excellent for years and years because the big factories will employ thousands of men and they and their families must eat. We want the factories but we also want the farmers.

Central Lake Pioneer: F. J. Church, of Banks township, is an enthusiast on the subject of this new world language, and at his request we print the following translation from the declaration of the 9th world congress of Esperantists at Bologne, France, August, 1906: "Esperanto is attoingt to disseminate in the whole world a language neutrally human, which, not intreding itself in the internal life of the people, and altoing not at all to crowd out the existing natural languages, would give to the people of different nations the ability quickly to understand each other, which can serve as a peace making language in the public institutions of those where different nations fight among themselves about the language; and in which can be published works which have an equal interest for all peoples. Any other idea or hope which this or that Esperantist cocsets with Esperanto, is his purely private affair.

Central Lake Pioneer: Uncle Dan Blakely, father of Henry, Blakely of this village, who was buried at East port last Thursday, had resided in that place since 1864. He was a veteran of the civil war. Uncle Dan farmed and ran the Stimson mill, was book keeper at Elk Rapids, blacksmith at Torch Lake, a popular landlord at Eastport for nine years, mail carrier for several years between Elk Rapids and Charlevoix. He served as justice of the peace forty five years and was for many years supervisor of Torch Lake township and a useful member of the board of supervisors. Fraternally he was an enthusiastic Mason, being a member of the North Star Lodge, to which four of his sons also belong. He was also a member of Tent No. 627, K. O. T. M. M., and a charter member of Geo. Martin Post, No. 227, G. A. R. He leaves a wife and four sons, William, Joseph, Daniel and Henry, and a daughter Anna, to mourn a worthy father and husband.

Boyne Citizen: Supt. H. L. Swift informs the Citizen that $7,000 of the necessary $10,000 to build the new addition to the Inebriate Home has been received, and he has great hopes that the remaining $3,000 will be forthcoming within the year from the time the fund was started, which ends the last day of May next. The report that J. H. Hill had given $5,000 to this fund is incorrect. Mr. hill has written the Home that he will give $1,000. Mr. Swift was in Petoskey last Saturday and he was the recipient of several acts of silverware for the home from "Little Will," the jeweler, consisting of silver knives, and forks and spoons and the same gentleman says he will give a knife, fork and spoon to every boy that is received into the home. Mr. Swift, as usual, spoke very enthusiastically about "his boys," as he calls them. This institution is a very worthy one and is receiving much encouragement from all over the state. The new addition to the home will be built principally by the labor of the boys from the home, under the direction of a master mechanic.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Miss Ruby Russell, who has been away from the Island the past five or six years, returned for a few week's visit with her parents.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. "Val" McDonough, a girl.

Mrs. Mary Norton, Edward McCauley and Theresa O'Donnell are victims of pneumonia.

Chas. Novak transacted business here this week.

Miss May Gallagher and Miss Della Mooney returned from a two weeks visit at Charlevoix.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Dick Parent last week, a twelve pound boy. This is quite a neat little parcel.

Mr. George Halsted, of Traverse City, was here a few days last week looking after his timber interests on High Island.

County Normal.

One of the northern birds that we put in water some time ago is now in blossom.

A letter was received from Miss Grace Duplessis, who is teaching at Atwood, Antrim county.

The Normal Class went to the training room Tuesday afternoon to observe a lesson of the fourth grade language class.

The Normal Class held an open literary meeting Friday evening, Dec. 11. The program which was given was very interesting to all.

The children of the training room have finished the rattle picture frames they have been working on the past week. They are interested in bean bags at present and this gives them a quite game for recess. Besides the work in keeping the score it gives them good drill in arithmetic.

With the assistance of Mr. Howard the training room children have made some pug boards to be used in arithmetic.

State of Michigan,
Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office in the City of Charlevoix in said county, on the 30th day of November, A. D. 1908.

Present, Hon. John M. Harris, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Joseph B. Lewis, deceased.

Nancy Lewis having filed in said court her petition praying that her dower in the real estate whereof said deceased died seized be assigned to her, and that commissioners be appointed to allot the same to her,

It is ordered, that the 21st day of December, A. D. 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for hearing said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the probate office, in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, and show cause why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

It is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sun, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

LIABLE TO BECOME IRKSOME.

Some Drawbacks in Having Disease Named after an Occupation.

A New York man was brought before a magistrate the other day for speeding. The magistrate asked his prisoner, "Illiteracy" was replied the prisoner. It was so recorded.

When you think of it, he was probably not far wrong. If anything will cause a man occupied in the pursuit of knowledge to become irritable, this. Give it a chance and it will make either nervous and irritable or tiredly unimportant. It will prove the undoing of many a student.

It has one advantage over the gift many ones; hard times—or rather the lack of them—have no effect on it. Every twelve-month it the world may close, but the man who makes his disease his occupation will find that his occupation will not be touched. It will always be open, and at the "chance and chance of the unstead planets." But it has the disadvantage that it tends to grow more and more capricious. A man begins, say, with a little light and easy complaint and is indigestion. His hours at first are reasonable. Soon he discovers that he must pay more attention to it if he would do the thing right. He gives it several hours a day additional. He begins to think about it at odd times. Before he knows it he is occupied with it for practically all his waking hours.

ASTONISHED BY THE GIRAFFE.

Frenchmen Were Slow to Admit Existence of the Animal.

Dr. Johnson, as is well known, refused for many months to believe in the Lisbon earthquake, and Frenchmen have been slow to admit practically the existence of the giraffe, a new specimen of which had just been added to the Jardin des Plantes. The earliest specimen of this queer creature was seen in Paris in the reign of Louis XVI. It was given to French officials who thought that the giraffe was first heard of in 1757, when it was described by a Frenchman visiting Egypt last, who had journeyed in the lands of the Hottentots and Caffres. When the explorer referred to the animals with the long necks he was looked back at a Munchausen and told that he was rude to use the noblest language. It was only when some little specimens arrived in the French capital that the Munchausen reputation for veracity was re-established, and then the animals for a long time formed the wonder of Paris, not only among the merely curious, but in all scientific circles.

Nancy Lewis having filed in said court her petition praying that her dower in the real estate whereof said deceased died seized be assigned, and that commissioners be appointed to allot the same to her,

It is further ordered, that the 21st day of December, A. D. 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for hearing said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the probate office, in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, and show cause why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

It is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sun, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

A GRANGE STORY.

The Legend of the Blind Man and the Cripple Applied to Farming.

(Special Correspondence.)

Can I tell the difference between knowing how to cultivate a crop of corn and why we cultivate it? Yes, I think I can. For I have made mistakes aplenty in my life because I did not know the why. Yes, the how and the why of things is something I am qualified to speak of from experience. "A burned child dreads the fire," and I have been blistered times enough for not knowing the why, and that at times when I was very cocky in knowing the how. I now handle firebrands with great circumspection. It is from a fullness of such experience that I am able to answer your question.

Yes, I know Sol Davis. You are right—he is a good cultivator. I grant you, and he has a good crop of corn. I mean as a rule he has, but he sometimes gets a crop and his crop fails to come up to his average. Not knowing the why of his failure, he is liable to repeat his mistakes. He knows there are cogs, but he does not know what they are for, and he is not to overestimate the value of some and underestimate the value of others.

Now, there is Sol's wife, as good a housekeeper as ever toted a pan of baked beans to a grange feast. Yes, those mixed biscuits that she brought the other day were fine—good enough to take first premium at the county fair—but she did not get her success the first time trying. The first batch she kept at home. It was good enough for the family and for the children's lunch to take to school, but improved to be just a little off for public inspection. She, too, failed to understand all the cons for success. She first did not give the proper emphasis on knowing how much on other.

When a boy I got no further-than setting the stove pretty when the dinner came to town. To me the most wonderful man in the procession was the driver of the food wagon, with six or eight horses. I was able to handle two three on one team and feed the bit, but to hold six or eight and let the food stuff go on some and not run right on others was a marvel.

The agricultural world is getting to be of the one horse stage and regular rigging men who are able to handle more horsepower and their results and livelihood in some things and undoing in others.

The conditions are different now from in pioneer days and more in the mind of man than then. There are several qualifications in the test. Yes, I know how to cultivate a crop. Sol Davis, the man we have just been speaking of, raised the best ears of corn on his farm's savings by adding it with something else. He sifted his corn ground one year, and it so happened he had a good crop, which was sold at a premium because of the sift. Next year he put on salt again. He reasoned if a little salt was a good thing that it would be better, and he put on so much as to be to the detriment of his yield.

Yes, I think I understand your question, where is whether a farmer like Sol Davis, who knows the how, but not the why, is a better man than some of those monthly platform talkers who know the why and are unable to raise a hill of beans. This is easy to answer. Why, Sol Davis, of course, finds more sense in the single blade of sheaves—not much good when separate, but a full team when together.

You have heard the story of the lame man who was on a journey and the cripple, haven't you? One could walk and could not see, and the other could see and could not walk. They were stranded for the roadside until the blind man took the cripple on his shoulders, by which means the cripple contributed his eyes and the blind man furnished the how and the why should be joined together to the blind man and the cripple.

There, I hope the grave Grange is laying cellar to order. I'll here the natural word of our compass's end and not stammer with stage fright when I am called to give it. Come back just a minute. Let me tell you what I am going to do. When the lecturer has her sermon I will ask the member of the grange to tell me why water pulls out fires. Some will say because it is wet, but that is no reason. Water will wet a waistcoat, but it will not put out a fire.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by J. N. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y.
From Correspondence New York State Grange.

MEET OF THE PATRONS

Reports of Important Committees of the National Grange.

The Position of the National Grange on Important Public Questions Indicated by Resolutions and Reports Adopted—Legislation Favored.

Mr. Birdsall of Kansas submitted the report for the standing committee on co-operation. Our Order, said he, is peculiarly adapted to advancing co-operative interests. The grange should take steps to investigate all co-operative enterprises and formulate rules of government for practical co-operation and place them in the hands of every subordinate grange, but the grange should never become financially responsible for the operation of any co-operative enterprise. Co-operation should be furthered along the lines of distribution of supplies for farm and home, establishing banks, co-operative creameries, elevators, mills, grain fire and life insurance companies and other such lines of work.

On Education.

H. J. Patterson of Maryland presented the report of the committee on education. He recommended that the proper authorities have school text books prepared so that they would be of more practical value to the people who are to use them. For instance, arithmetics for the rural children should contain problems which pertain to rural life; text books for mining and mechanical communities should pertain to their respective activities. This idea should be injected into most all of the subjects taught in public schools. The committee further recommended the teaching of domestic science and manual training by trained teachers in rural schools wherever practicable; also the training of industrial teachers in our schools and the establishment and national support of industrial country or district high schools; also that these rural schools should be so organized that they would serve as local bureaus for agricultural information and places for demonstration work.

On Foreign Relations.

Mr. Rapley of Washington submitted the report of the standing committee on foreign relations. The recommendations of the committee are as follows: First, that the treaties of arbitration with foreign nations be resolutely opposed; second, that the legislative committee be instructed to demand of congress that the raw materials of manufacture of all monopolistic combinations be placed on the free list and that all manufactured products sold cheaper than at home be also placed on the free list; third, that a special commission be appointed to open negotiations with the farmers of the Canadian northwest with a view to establishing closer fraternal relations; fourth, that a special committee be appointed with a view to cooperating with other peace associations in all worthy efforts to advance universal peace.

On Good of the Order.

The committee on the good of the Order recommended the establishment of a lecturer's bureau in charge of a national lecturer, who shall prepare a list of grange speakers, with the cooperation of state masters; also suitable grange literature should be provided as a help in the extension of the Order. They also favored the Davis industrial school bill providing for the establishment of county agricultural schools.

On Transportation.

The report of the committee on transportation was submitted by Mr. Atkeson of West Virginia. He said: "We favor reasonable improvement of our waterways by the national government, the principle of governmental control of railways to the extent that such control shall be exercised as will secure equal justice to all shippers as well as to the railroads; we favor a general inventory and valuation on the national property on railroads and a limitation on their capitalization; we demand the enlargement of the powers of the interstate commerce commission; we oppose a state railway scheme, and we congratulate the government on the progress made in the construction of the Panama canal."

On Tariff Revision.

Following is the substance of the report of the committee on tariff revision: We believe it to be the duty of the government to protect agriculture of such output burdens as are placed upon it by the exactions of combinations and so-called trusts, made possible by the double advantage given them by excessive duties and rebates of duties paid on raw material used in manufactured articles exported. We believe the duty upon any article should be and never exceed the difference in the cost of labor in this country and in foreign countries in the production of such articles. We believe that the product of the forest, coal and iron ore should be placed on the undutiable list. We believe this would give relief to agriculture and be an aid in conserving the natural resources of our country.

On Taxation.

The report of the committee on taxation was adopted after lengthy discussion and by a very close vote as follows: "We recommend to the congress of the United States the appointment of a nonpartisan tariff commission, composed of representatives of the agricultural, labor, manufacturing, transportation and commercial interests of the country, whose duty it shall be to examine into all phases of the subject and secure exact information, considering all disputed points and report their findings to congress at the earliest possible date. It is be found that the tariff laws enable manufacturers to sell to citizens of foreign countries, and they do sell, their product cheaper than to citizens of the United States we favor such change of the laws as will make such practices impossible. In the matter of local county and state taxation, all taxable property should be listed and assessed at a just valuation and assessed at the same rate, to the end that every dollar of tangible, visible or invisible property should bear its just and fair proportion of local and state taxation. The farmers should have fair representation on all tax and equalization boards, to the end that the farmer may secure his rights and his interests and pay his just proportion of all taxes and no more."

The closing session of the national grange brought out three or four very important resolutions, which were adopted. One was to the effect that the grange favors the adoption of a special post system on rural delivery routes. And it enthused its desuisite for a general parcels post law. Another resolution indorsed the memorial before congress providing for the establishment of a postal savings bank, in which senate bill No. 6,8204. Another resolution that found favor was to the effect that the representatives of agriculture be given a fair share of the appointments in the administration of the national and state government, especially in the matter pertaining to agriculture and good of states. Another quite important resolution relating to both parcels post and the postal savings banks was to the effect that it should become the duty of the national secretary to file a list of the United States senators and representatives who are opposed to the above named propositions and that printed copies of this list be furnished to all state secretaries for the subordinate granges and that all grange publications be furnished with a copy of this list, with a request to publish it.

IMPORTANT MISSION.

State Master Hill of Pennsylvania Delegate to Rome, Italy.

Hon. W. F. Hill of Huntingdon, Pa., master of Pennsylvania state grange, was appointed a delegate, written by President Roosevelt to represent the agricultural interests of this country at the international institute of agriculture held at Rome, Italy, in November.

The original idea of an international institute of agriculture was that of King Victor Emanuel of Italy, whose desire was to bring the peoples of the world into closer touch and establish friendlier relations in a broader sense among the international industries. The United States had requested that each nation send to Rome accredited delegates, and forty-two of the civilized nations complied with his request. America's representative to this first congress were United States Ambassador to Italy Henry V. White, Dr. Albert P. Woods, chief of the division of plant industry in the Department of agriculture at Washington, and Mr. Hill, whose broad work as an active leader in grange work had brought him into national prominence. The Italian government has gone to great expense in the building and equipment of the palace which will be the permanent home of the institute. King Victor Emanuel gives the work his personal attention.

W. F. HILL.

New York Has 60,000 Members.

New York State Master Godfrey says that the grange membership in New York has made an increase the past year of about 5,000. The total membership on Oct. 1 was about 60,000. Jefferson county reports a membership of over 2,000, and it is largely thus of some entire states and indeed of several of the contiguous states united. Only seven counties in the state are now unorganized, and many of these will be organized the coming year. The four great factors working together harmoniously for the advancement of agriculture in the Empire State, says Mr. Godfrey, are the department of agriculture, the College of Agriculture, the state experiment station and the grange. The grange is a recognized factor in securing just and equitable legislation. Nature study in the public schools and other lines of educational work are among the interests which the grange has at heart in New York.

ALEXIS OVERTHROWN; NEW RULER IN HAITI

Bloodless Revolt Deposes Aged Executive and Makes Legitime President.

NOT A SHOT FIRED IN COUP.

Movement Led by Citizens of Port au Prince—Committee of Safety Controls the Capital.

Through a well organized and seemingly elevated even a bloodless revolution in Haiti was accomplished Wednesday, when the people of the capital seized power, deposed the President, Nord Alexis, and proclaimed the government of their own, and made their Legitime their own President.

The only leader remaining loyal to Alexis is the Cannite district, his region, who for the last six months has directed the policy of the administration. He remained at the palace with Alexis. All the soldiers and high military officials under Alexis took refuge in the fortress Dipitoes. There are the same men who nine months ago even preceding conference against the granting of the right of refuge to unsuccessful revolutionists by the foreign diplomatic and consular representatives.

The revolution had been well organized. Early in the day bands of citizens, armed and armed, moved quietly about the town and took possession of various points of vantage. The movement was led by Louis Cassel, a member of the Senate. Not a shot was fired. The soldiers of Alexis were that the rebels had the upper hand and quickly let it be seen that they had no inclination of striking a fight that might result in much bloodshed. The presence of the American cruiser, the Machias and Tacoma, and the French cruiser Dugouy Trouin undoubtedly had a restraining influence.

Gen. Nord Alexis, who has been President of Haiti since 1902, was born in 1821. He was elected for seven years. The salary is $24,000. Haiti is the society of French portion of the island of Santo Domingo. Its area is 9,282 square miles and its population 1,500,000. It is a country of revolutions, in October, 1867, when Alexis was sentenced to death on a charge of conspiring to overthrow the government. In January, 1888, on charge of conspiracy under Jean Jumeau, marched on the capital, Port au Prince, but were repulsed by government troops under the leadership of Gen. Celestin Cyriaque, the minister of war.

The stirring events of the exciting and historical day that saw President Nord Alexis driven from his capital with an intrenched and in his forts were followed by a night of looting, pillage and murder in Port au Prince. Twelve men were killed before order was restored. The passions of the populace had been aroused, and after being defeated in their endeavors to do bloody harm to Alexis they turned their attention to well-shaded storehouses and the residences of the supporters of their late president. They were rapidly getting out of hand when the authorities succeeded in quelling the disturbance.

NEVADA OIL FIELDS A MYTH.

Inquiry Shows Petroleum Is Absent Where Believed to Be.

"Alleged oil prospects in Nevada" is the title of a report issued by the United States geological survey and which effectually disposes of the report that extensive oil deposits exist in Nevada. The geologists investigated the oil fields of Nevada, the region of the head of the Walker river, east of Walsonia, in Smith valley, south of Wellington, and in a small area south of Pahrump.

POLITICS and POLITICIANS

William H. Hearst was the backer of the independence party in the recent election, the contribution was $42,285.

It is believed that the subject of women's suffrage is gaining the public ear in the U.K. has been strengthening by the discovery of the existence of an organization known as the Women Suffrage Union (?) in New York City, the membership of which includes a number of wealthy and prominent men and women.

At a dinner given by the Cincinnati Commercial Club, Taft was the guest of honor, along with Congressman Longworth, who is expected to be a national prominence. He expressed himself as full of hope that investment in Cuba, as abroad and some possible the continuation of the administration. He said that the tariff revenues could be expected from the new administration by men who break the law.

One of the most interesting results of the recent election in Colorado, where the return came in very slowly, was the reelection of Mr. Tomas Jones of the Republic Court, Lindsey, who ran independent, by a number of votes that the Democratic organizations had refused him, and the Republicans, who refused to sacrificing principles of high degree to both parties. Lindsey's election was made possible by the almost unanimous support of the Socialists, who, in spite of a strong on the national ticket, almost without exception marked their ballot for the chief justice's friend and helper.

At San Antonio, Texas, where Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bryan stopped on their way to Mexico for a vacation, the delegate from Nebraska received a call from friends that he hoped it would never be done necessary to run for presidency again, but that he would not attempt to decide that question until the time comes to do so. In reply to the direct question whether he would run for a presidency again, he said he was not discouraged as to the future of the Democratic party. That party, he said, is a great democratic force, and he had no doubt that the future would be able to do it for the accomplishment of necessary reforms.

NOW A BUTTER TRUST.

Efforts, Chicago and Eastern Dealers Secure Corner on Commodity.

The "butter trust" is the latest combine to send thrills of anxiety through the homes of the country. Chicago, their inner circle, has secured a corner, a group of Chicago, Elgin and Eastern dealers, who have formed a "pool" for this purpose, and it is said that they intend to send the price soaring until butter will be a luxury.

The "butter pool" is the latest combine to send thrills of anxiety through the homes of the country. Chicago, in its certain extent, has been "cornered." A group of Chicago, Elgin and Eastern butter dealers have pooled their interests and have begun to "corner" and send the price soaring until butter will be a luxury. The "butter pool" is said of a necessity. The "butter pool" is said to be gathering in a rich profit of the transaction of pounds of storage butter, purchased last spring. They bought this butter in a season of 22 cents a pound, and are now selling it for 27 cents a pound wholesale. The butter in the cons of the country come to the towns and cities, and the pool is the agent for the independent dealers, the butter trust will have the honors all to itself. The entire amount of butter in the warehouses of Chicago is little more than 1,000,000 pounds, just about four pounds for every inhabitant in Chicago. Just above the dyke in Berlin's Derry stable. The water is calling, but the dyke is protected by a portion of it tumbled into the river Wednesday afternoon, entailing a loss of several thousand dollars. The rear wall of the annex of the courthouse is about fifteen feet from the river.

PERISH IN STORM ON LAKE.

Steel Steamer Cleveland Is Given Up for Lost with All on Board.

The steel steamer D. M. Clemson, owned by A. H. Wolvin of Duluth, is given up as lost and the twenty-four men aboard are believed certain to have perished. Several days ago she entered the Soo, bound from Lorain, Ohio, on her last trip of the season. No one can say that in all probability she foundered in the terrific storm that raged at the time and of Lake Superior, or is stranded somewhere on the north coast, in either event her entire crew must have perished.

New City Law Is Enjoined.

A restraining order temporarily enjoining the commission form of the local municipal law in Hancock county, was granted by Judge Grover E. Pelatch in Toledo, Ohio. Hearing for a permanent injunction is to be held five days. The York county was voted "dry" by over 2,000 majority recently.

Moderate Use is Medicine.

"I have suffered a good deal with malaria and stomach complaints, but I have now found a remedy that keeps me well, and that remedy is Electric Bitters; a medicine that is medicine for stomach and liver troubles, and for run down conditions," says W. C. Coulter, of Halliday, Ark. Electric Bitters purify and enrich the blood, tone up the nerves, and impart vigor and energy to the weak. Your money will be refunded if it does not cure you. 50 c at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store

The Matter of Phonographs.

You are certainly deceived if you are misled by slang and blarney to buy an inferior article because it is cheap.

We do not guarantee our records not to break if you hit them with an axe but we do guarantee them to produce the finest music possible to any phonograph, without the metallic rattle that accompanies a record that is hard enough not to break when thrown on the floor.

As usual we lead with the best of its kind, and others follow with cheap imitations.

The EDISON PHONOGRAPH, is all those who are posted know, is the best phonograph in the world, with the reputation of its maker, Thos. A. Edison, behind it, and just as surely the Victor Talking Machine is miles ahead of any other talking machine made, so that it is considered in a class by itself by all those competent to know.

The great slave houses of this country, like Lyon & Healy of Chicago, and Grinnell Bros., of Detroit, handle these phonographs exclusively, and we are their exclusive agents here

We urge you to investigate the matter, and listen to the music produced by each instrument, before you buy a cheap imitation, thinking you have something "just as good" as instruments which are famous all over the world.

Yours Very Truly,
F. N. CHAPPELL & Co.

Marked for Death.

"Three years ago I was marked for death. A grave and cough we tear ing my lungs to pieces. Doctors failed to help me, and hope had fled, when my husband got Dr. King's New Discovery," says Mrs A. C. ALCOHOL UNDER OTHER NAMES

Light Shed on Various Temperance Beverages in England.

A Board of experts has recently made its report to the British government on the therapeutic character of some rare drinks sold in the United Kingdom. It finds that many of the most popular beverages sold under this category contain all the way from one to twelve per cent of alcohol. The British taxation takes no cognizance of beverages containing less than two per cent of alcohol, but three-quarters of the annual revenue of temperance drinks consumed by the board far exceeds that proportion.

Some apparently hot beers were found to contain as much alcohol as cider or hybrid wine. The English public has been greatly surprised by this report, and its sagacity for astonishment is proof that England has had an experience worth mentioning with "nonalcoholic bitters."

Our government, on the other hand, as a result of its confiscation some years ago, found that gin by another name was drunk in opposition that defrauded the internal revenue.

VICTORY THAT WAS DESERVED.

The Struggle of One Scottish Youth for an Education.

Many hardships endured by students attending university or college in Scotland have been brought to light from time to time. A student of industrious habits and of high ability, attending university or college some years ago, found that gin by another name was drunk in opposition that defrauded the internal revenue.

The Hyrian.

The Hyrian province formed a short lived government, being instituted by Napoleon in 1809, from various territories taken from Austria, south and east of the Adriatic. The government was abolished in 1813-15. The model Hyrians are now represented by the Albanians which fact doubtless gave the little Mitchell his title.

Art.

Now nature is not at variance with art, nor art with nature; they define both the servants of his providence. Art is the perfection of nature. Were the world now as it was the sixth day, there would be no room for art. Nature made one world and art another. In brief, all things are artificial; for nature is the art of God.—St. Thomas Browne.

—Almost before another issue of the SENTINEL is printed, a new year will be ushered in, and the moral debts of another year charged up to your account. You cannot recall that year, young man, therefore you cannot add any figures to the credit side of the books. The account is closed, and the ledger for 1908 is filed away. Neither can you carry forward any entries to the new account. Young man, you start out January 1st, 1909 with not an entry on the books. What sort of an account will you keep that year? Will you begin the number of items that have heretofore appeared on the debtor side, and up a good page of credits? Young man, elevate the standard of your life. Cheer some stricken soul next year, and let it be that of your mother, if you have one. School yourself in a higher conception of manliness. Cut out the foolishness that deprives your life and brings sorrow to the household. Take at least one step forward and upward, the second will come easier. And while you are doing it, help some other good hearted chap up the hill with you. Meanwhile, the SENTINEL wishes you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

—The Charlevoix K. O. T. M. M. will give a charity ball on or about Feb. 22d.

—Charles Novak goes to Detroit to do the usual Christmas turkey stunt with relatives.

—Miss Nota Fritz, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Indiana, is home again with her parents.

—Billy" Schetd, book-keeper for the Beaver Island Lumber Co., was in town yesterday, on his way home from Manistee.

—Mr. F. L. Kientz, superintendent of the sugar factory, has resigned and leaves with his family next week for California.

—Mrs. Fred E. Gomplik is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Isabrow, for the holidays. She will be joined by her husband today.

—Until further notice all Charlevoix barber shops will close at 7:30 p m., excepting Saturday night, when the closing hour will be 10:00.

—Special communication of Charlevoix Lodge, No. 282, F. & A. M., Dec. 28th, for work on third degree. All members requested to be present, and visitors welcomed. By order of W. M.

—The Charlevoix Lumber Co's operations are in full blast again with about the same winter cut as last year. Wm. Scroggie is running the Marion camp; Joe Shores is at Horton's Bay and Joe Cooper has charge of the work at the Two Heart River camps, in the upper peninsula.

—The new Majestic Theater, a specially equipped place of amusement, opened Monday night to a good audience, and with good vaudeville attractions and moving pictures. The place is certainly a beauty, and involves an enterprise that deserves recognition. Good attractions are promised all next week.

—One of the most artistic features of the Charlevoix Theater vaudeville features recently has been the work of Miss Katherine Ridgeley, a pupil of that distinguished vocal teacher, Dennis Mehan, formerly of Detroit, but now of London. The Sunday papers acknowledges that its scribe is at fault, after having listened to a most delightful entertainment of solos, in which Miss Ridgeley was the chief attraction, in not speaking of her merits last week. The young lady has a voice of rare quality, backed by a personality that cannot fail to emphasize a musical opinion. Miss Ridgeley is a soprano of rare good qualities, and deserves everything good that may be said of her. Her voice has not only a phenomenal range, but has a quality that touches the soul of the true lover of vocal talent.

PROMINENT RESORTER DEAD.

A Charlevoix Summer Home Resident Passes Away in St. Louis.

Fletcher W. Rockwell, a comparatively new comer on the Belvedere side, and who built an elegant cottage the past fall, and which he hoped to occupy the coming summer, died at his house in St. Louis recently. We take the following from the St. Louis Post Dispatch:

"She six sons of Fletcher W. Rockwell, 65 years old, vice president of the National Lead Co., who died of a complication of diseases in Chicago Saturday, will act as pallbearers at the funeral of their father from the Wagoner undertaking parlors, 3621 Olive street, at 10 a. m. Tuesday. The Rev. Dr. Bance of Chicago will officiate. Mr. Rockwell leaves a widow and three daughters besides his six sons. He was a nephew of Henry Platt of Platt & Thornburgh and a brother in law of Dr. A. C. Robinson of 5203 Westminster place."

A Big Mistake.

Last Thursday afternoon the sheriff received a telegram from the chief of police of Saginaw to "arrest and hold one Arthur McDonald, charged with larceny," and the Saginaw daily papers of that day contained the following:

"The police are looking for a smooth couple giving their names as Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McDonald, who came here six weeks ago and rented rooms of Mrs. Tracy A. Shaw. He claimed to be promoting a big stock concern at St. Louis, Mich., and under pretext of giving Mrs. Shaw an important position in the head offices at St. Louis secured from her $500 for stock in the concern. That was about 10 days ago, and he left at once for St. Louis on business. The next day a telegram was received by Mrs. McDonald, and she left between darkness and dawn. The next morning there was nothing but a doll found in their room.

"McDonald was slight, short and fair, while his partner was a most attractive young woman with wavy brown hair and brown eyes, and she seemed to be an important factor in the proposed concern, as she took the money. Mrs. Shaw earned the money by hard work, and the loss is a heavy one to her."

A St. Louis (Mich.) paper continued the following: "Mr. and Mrs. McDonald finished up in St. Louis as actors two years ago and have been here several times since. They have lived here a part of the time. He was a solicitor and paper hanger. He was here last week and left Monday for the north. The officers here are looking for him. A card from Mr. Rockwell, received from him at Charlevoix by a friend here, today."

Now that means Arthur A. McDonald, vaudeville performer at the Charlevoix Theater, and the stage partner of "Mrs." McDonald. He is six feet high, weighs about 170 pounds, of dark complexion. He exhibits his stage skills when he reaches the north.

He has not been in Saginaw in eight years, and his wife is in a hospital in Detroit. He will keep on doing business with "Doc."

—Kalkaska Leader: Empire Sitter, of Wilson township has rented his farm to Mr. Gail Phillips of Barber Creek, and goes to "Charlevoix the Beautiful," as in terms it, with the intention of making that pleasant little town his future home. Mr. Sitter and his estimable wife have lived the busy life and will be missed by the community to which so long a period has been spent, and which commenced back in the early pioneer days of the county. They have fairly earned the enviable reputation of being excellent neighbors and faithful friends, and their well known worth and merit was highly appreciated and helped to enthrone many a social gathering. Mr. S. is also a fine mechanic. For a long time he served his township as a member of the board of supervisors, and for several years as chairman of that body, and in that capacity won the hearty good will of his colleagues for both ability and fairness. This worthy couple will be missed by the many who have known them long and well, while Charlevoix will gain some excellent citizens by their removal thither.

DON'T miss the Bridge Stock Co. in the big act—strongest and better than ever—on Christmas night (Friday), "20 Minutes in a Madhouse."

OUR OLLIE AT FRONT AGAIN.

Champion Roller Skater Go Way to Chicago in His Sloop Yacht.

From the Manitowoc Daily:

Champion roller skater of the United States and a free sailor aboard his own small two masted craft is what a surprised News scribe found yesterday in investigating the arrival of the little boat "Sea Wolf" in the local port. The captain, senior, cook and deckhand was Ollie Moore, of Charlevoix, Mich., who holds all records for a mile, two miles, three miles and five miles on rollers. He is enroute from Michigan to Milwaukee with his craft, and intends to participate in roller race there.

He arrived here last Saturday night but had been unable to continue on account of adverse winds. Moore says he delights in sailing the lakes alone, altho the reporter would hardly like to take a journey with him at this season of the year. The "Sea Wolf" arrived in port all tied up, but the craft is a seaworthy one and looks able to stand the buffeting about that the wind and wave provoke at this late date.

The Sea Wolf is but 20 feet long and 9 feet beam, and not a cargo of wood here. Mr. Moore will stay here a day or so and may book a race here with F. Tinburg, of the local rink. Moore has a score of medals that he had won the three past seasons in roller races all over the country, said his credentials were no doubt that he is "some" skater on the rollers. He holds the record for a mile on rollers 2:21 minutes, the two miles 5 minutes and 2 seconds, the 3 mile 7 minutes and 55 seconds, and the 5 mile 15 minutes and 2 seconds.

When talking of his trip alone in the little craft Mr. Moore said: "I delight in making trips alone, and have been out all summer in the same boat. I have no fears of the water, and believe that I will not die any quicker in taking these trips, than if I were on land. We all have to die sometime, you know, and our end will not come any sooner because of the business we pursue. I would like to get a rare here just to show the people of Manitowoc what I have been doing."

Mr. Moore then exhibited his medals and a large book of clippings from all the metropolitan papers, describing his winnings in the big rinks of New York, Chicago, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Minneapolis. He stated that he expected to get some races this winter in Milwaukee. He has been in the skating business for three years, and is known as the "Canadian Boy" and "The Michigan Wonder." During that time Mr. Moore has captured eleven of the world's championship medals and his come out the victor in no less than one hundred and fifty straight races.

Mr. Moore was the world's championship at the Exposition Roller Rink at Pittsburg, Pa.

Amusements.

At the Bridge Theater the Morrells are certainly convincing the people of Charlevoix that Mr. Stoddard, the manager is admirable now to please them by placing in high-class acts, for in their change it seems that every change they make is an improvement on the last one. This week's show is far ahead of anything in the vaudeville line ever seen in Charlevoix. The Bridge Stock Co. is to use a thrilling act, simply convulsing the audience with an entire change of face comedy every night. Mr Stoddard is sparing no pains nor expense in this Christmas week to please his audience, and the large attendance is an illustration that he is succeeding, as the crowds continue to grow larger each evening.

The Majestic Theater will give a ten dollar box of candy to the person holding the lucky number next Friday evening. The prize will be awarded at the close of the entertainment. Isabell Jackson and Company the high class comedy sketch artists, will appear in their highly entertaining act, with change every evening. These people are playing to crowded houses, and you can be assured their act will please you. Special moving pictures will be shown, with illustrated songs in connection. Stay as long as you like and enjoy the show.

The Matter of Phonographs.

You are certainly deceived if you are molled by slam and blarney to buy an inferior article because it is cheap.

We do not guarantee our records not to break if you bit them with an axe, but we do guarantee them to produce the finest music possible to any phonograph, without the metallic rattle that accompanies a record that is hard enough not to break when thrown on the floor.

As usual we lead with the best of its kind, and others follow with cheap imitations.

THE EDISON PHONOGRAPH, as all those who are posted know, is the best phonograph in the world, with the reputation of its maker, Thos. A. Edison, behind it, and just as surely the Victor Talking Machine is miles ahead of any other talking machine made, or that it is considered in a class by itself by all those competent to know.

The great music houses of this country, like Lyon & Healy of Chicago, and Grinnell Bros., of Detroit, handle these phonographs exclusively, and we are their exclusive agents here.

We invite you to investigate the matter, and listen to the music produced by each instrument, before you buy a cheap imitation, thinking you have something "just as good" as instruments which are famous all over the world.

Yours Very Truly,
DENA CHAPPELL & CO.

Market for Death.

"Three years ago I was marked for death. A grave yard cough was ravaging my lungs to pieces. Doctors failed to help me, and hope had died, when my husband got Dr. King's New Discovery," says Mrs. A. CHAPTER IX.—(Continued.)

"Oh, what does that mean? There's the second time you have said something like that. It's cryptic if it doesn't mean—"

"It does mean something. It means that while I'll never forgive you for what you did yesterday, yet I'll admit—and the war is over for you. So you must be a good fellow for—"

"I won't," he answered forcefully, "with you in view. I'll—"

"Sail on!" shouted one of the lookouts forward. "There's a schooner heading down on us from the mot'arsh, sir."

"Now, we'll have trouble," said the Captain to the chief companion standing at his side. "I have observed that treacherous cousin just where you don't want her. Especially to love affairs and courships."

"Have you had experience?" she questioned archly.

"Only this one," then he confessed sheepishly. "My Heroes!" he called.

"Sir!" answered the young midshipman.

"We'll hold on just as we are. If they hail us, I will do the talking."

"What do you intend to do?" asked Miss Ellen.

"I think yonder vessel is a Confederate gunboat, commanded by a friend. We have reason to believe that there are a number at Hatteras inlet. I believe the gunboat intends to—but there, you're on the other side."

"If you are correct," said the girl, "you will be captured."

"No, I think not."

"You will fight?"

"That will be quite unusual."

"I see. But you can run away."

"That would cost—reputation. Perhaps I can delude them. They must know the Greyhound is expected and—but I think I shall have to ask you to go below."

"But I shall not do so," she said decisively.

"I shall suppose you would, in fact, if we were you wouldn't. But, you see, while I'm endeavoring to deceive the captain of that yonder vessel I'd about be a Confederate gunboat, and from the way she's heading about as fast as she can, I'd would be very easy for you to betray me by declaring the truth."

"Would you do that were the case reversed?"

"Yes," he answered gravely, "it would be my duty."

"Duty!" she pouted. "I hate that word."

"So do I, sometimes. Just at present, I know one case where a duty would be forgotten charming."

"What is that?"

"The duty of marrying you."

"Nonsense!"

"Do you think marrying you would be nonsense? Now, I think that would be a very serious business."

"Captain Smith, will you cease be serious and attend to your own business?"

"Not until you finally reject me."

"I shall do so at once. Have do you feel now?"

"I feel as if I didn't believe you. However, this is beside the question. I shall have to leave you to go below."

"And if I refuse?"

"There's the lassie's mate," with a wave of his hand.

"Jealous man?"

"Which man?"

"Both of them."

"There's one thing, I'll grant you," he said, laughing at her reply, "if you don't give me your word of honor that you will not see a single soul aboard this craft, the slightest inkling of the truth, you may wait on yourself."

"I promise," she answered thoughtlessly enough.

"You give me your word of honor?"

"Yes."

"I trust that as far as I would that of any man I ever knew."

He spoke heartily, yet there was duplicity in his proposition. He realized that the sight of Ellen Jones, who was probably well known on the shores of the guidons, standing by his side would do more to confirm the impression he desired to convey, that he is a Confederate still in the possession of her original crew, than any other incident. She was so full of romantic sentiality, "were she perverse, coquette" and Smith was no exception to the rule.

CHAPTER X.

During this tedious conversation the Confederate war steamer, converted from one of the swiftest passenger steamers by mounting a heavy gun on the forecastle, had been rapidly approaching the Greyhound, which, in accordance with her Captain's orders, made no effort to run away. The blockade-runner undoubtedly had the lands of the gunboat, but it was not Smith's desire to run away. As he had said, to do that would certainly give notice, and as the success of his subterfuge depended entirely upon a surprise, it was imperatively necessary for him not to awaken any suspicion as to the changed condition of the Greyhound.

Consequently when the gunboat fired a shot across the bows of the blockade-runner Smith promptly ordered his ship. The gunboat rounded to a short distance from the starboard quarter of the Greyhound and an officer standing forward of the pilot house hailed:

"What ship is that?"

"The blockade-runner Greyhound from New Providence," replied Smith briefly. "What ship is that?"

"The Confederate gunboat Pamlico, Captain Coley. We've been expecting you!" continued the Confederate. "Have you got the guns for the Ellen aboard?"

"I have somewhere aboard my vessel."

"They were at present safely stowed below in the hold of the St. Lawrence. However, that didn't matter.

"Good!" said Captain Coley, "the prize—he is still ready except mounting the guns."

"He still lies at the wharf at Jones' Inlet?"

"Yes, just where she was."

"Good."

"You seem rather high in the water," said the Confederate captain.

"My cargo's light one—medical stores and so on, bulky but doesn't weigh very much," answered Captain Smith readily.

"I see. Is that Miss Jones on board of you?"

"It is," replied Captain Smith, coolly stopping quite as far to bring Miss Ellen into full view.

"Is she? By the two ships had met, Miss Ellen regretted, first, that she had stamped on her foot and second, that she had pledged her word not to betray the state of affairs on the Greyhound. She stood her lover, but she also loved her father. Captain. "I can't tell what departure work there may be before us. I can't insert your name in my log. Are you accounted?"

"Not I—"

"It is useless to argue, Ellen, darling," he said firmly, and again her heart responded to the caress in his tone and words. "If anything should happen to you on this boat, it would kill me. You must go ashore before the battle begins."

There was a timidity in his voice that silenced her.

"I had hoped," she continued, "that in some way I might—could be helpful to you in this adventure. I had dreams of forcing your father's consent to our marriage, of bribing you to accept my hand. But I have put that away. You know that I love you, that I have always loved you since I first saw you. I can hardly expect to win your father's consent, but you are of age, I believe, and I am my own to give. If I be a fair, square, manly man I can win you, with or without your father's consent. I shall be very happy and grateful. If I cannot"—he smiled lovely but sadly—"I shall die a bachelor."

"You needn't do that," said she girl softly.

"You mean—"

"Why, I don't know what I mean"—she confessed as he caught her in his arms—"indeed, I was not necessary for her to explain. After a faint resistance she suffered him to kiss her upon the lips and after a little pause she returned his caress. After a longer pause, filled in the most happy way, they found time for artless pillow speech.

"You are so masterful," she said. "I hardly know who I obey."

"Don't you love me?"

"I suppose—well—yes, then."

"I shall never consecrate you again. I swear it!" said Captain Smith solemnly.

"Why, Captain Smith, darling, beautiful Ellen, if I am the Eastern failure in this enterprise, I shall have some to be thankful it the happiest time of my life, for I have seen you for my greatest, sweetest, pure, plain, unknown self—for that I am—and I love you. You must not say that. I won't have you despising yourself. You are the nobler, the braver man I ever saw." she pointed vehemently.

"But you the handsomest." he laughed like a boy.

"Then, I may be not that, but you are just the kind of a man I like to look at," she admitted with a glance of such love in her eyes as one in the smooth heaven of delight.

"You can give me no greater proof of your overwhelming affection than that," said Smith, shaking his red head joyfully with an air of great satisfaction.

"Those were a tap at the door."

"Yes," said Ellen, sadly, said Mr. Holdeness darkly, "that is the tide is drifting by ship towards the shore and—"

"Hello, Holdeness!" cried Captain Smith, "we'll be on deck in a moment. Is the ship's—"

"Yes, sir."

LIGHT ON GERMAN RULER.

Emperor Called the Most Bereaved Person in the World.

October Midland contributes to the American Magazine a remarkable pictures of Emperor William. It includes a mass of new material, but the most interesting of which is Prince Bismarck's account of how the Emperor showed his authority over his uncle the day he came to the throne. The following paragraph on the character of Emperor's wife are pretty spicy:

"In the last few years he has changed a good deal. His trembling his exasperated fits and he grimaces have grown more pronounced. He has become a bit of a tyrant. He is fond of giving his orders and seeing everything movement. He has kind when speaking. His laugh, formerly so buoyant, has acquired a false tone. Likewise he you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also. We shall surely meet again, our souls there, for God will wipe away all tears from our eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

Most men would like to be rich without the trouble and pains of making the money. They would like to be good and great without the grinding process out of which greatness and goodness grow. And they would like the charm of grace of refined and beautiful character without the essential processes without which such an attainment has never been reached. The best growths require sunshine and shadow, daylight and darkness. If the sun of God's continuance shines upon us, we may well be content to be wet with the rain of affliction. How often we have seen the heavens overcast with clouds and the rain descending in torrents for a fort, but when the clouds are exhausted and the sunshine has broken forth we seem much brighter all nature seems and in the cheery light of the returning sun we forget the sorrow of the storm and its shadow.

CYNICS AND PESSIMISTS.

By Rev. A. Mac Donald Reech.

Because an excellent poem is called "Abdul-Abulbul-Amir" a cynical spirit in a man is one more impertinent than anything else. The sun of spirit are the men who do the work.

In us and story, but it will always be so. The men who are hammering and sifting and pebbles will stay the about where strong men in pendentes stroke small and fine. Cynicism and spirit do the best armor. Even the golden rule seems little unless it is applied in the golden spirit.

The spirit may become diseased as well as the tissue and the cynic is a sick soul, unlike the poet, are made, his sense of the most delicate of the twisted and warped and knotted unit at length he is forced loose among men and cynics. Men are not to be judged by their ugly doing harm wherever they are found, but we are to be judged by their pardonable crime. We have institutions for the criminal and the lunatic and the cynic. Society has to be there for the sake of gloom and despondency and sorrow. Yet, we are to be forbearing and to feed the though kindly treatment until the malady of the spirit are corrected. Cynicism is a disease of the spirit. The thoughts we dwell upon are the souls food and nourishment of the soul. Dwell on the fallings injustices and indelicacies of life and you will have a despondent, cynical, sour and soul-sick spirit. Dwell on the noble, the good, the true, and your spirit will be made strong and healthy of those things and the "joy of elevated thoughts" will be yours. Cynicism is a thing that we will not only pass for good rhetoric, but it usually leads to a miserable life. Cynicism is not accountable the vital importance of a judiciary which shall be in force with the controlling facts of the social organism and as a mere automatic force of three) secretary. Applause Tribune.

Farmers and the Tariff.

The National Grange will urge upon Congress the necessity of immediate tariff revision, referring particularly to those articles that are alleged to be sold by American manufacturers in foreign markets at lower prices than in this country. In this class are sold to be agricultural implements, and naturally the farmers object to paying more for the same article than the European farmer has to pay.

But now about the farmers' own product. Are not many of them sold cheaper in foreign markets than at home? Are not the prices on them at one proportionately higher and better maintained than the prices of most manufactured articles? The Free Lumber men have been compelled to report that the price of lumber, which was down some, number is cheaper, all except the stuff the farmer produces. Standard Oil sells about as solidly together on prices as the farmers are doing only, but on the other hand it is not easy to compel, but to beat public opinion, and the farmers organization has kept him from getting too far away from those in he lands. His usages, and very notably his latest outrage, are remarkable expressions of the worst constitution and temper of the American people. They are essays in practical democracy, formulating the better purposes and aspirations of our people, and leading us on to our next stage of development. The sunshine and the cyclo may sincer at their tributes, but in public documents and in national conventions of political and Tilton policy these tributes are dynamic and shall will.

The President's reference to the incompatibility of the Democratic party's existence on settled principles, and the true problem is more specific than ever. They are "vain demonstrations," as he declares, which unify each other. It is well at this time to have it driven home to us that it is necessary, if it be well also, that centralization in business has taken place in large measure and should be not, to be for a time, to be controlled to the public interest, by the Government, and that it is well also, to have it recognized that combination and concentration are in business, as in social life, necessary and accepted and taken advantage of, and utility and disadvantage, and that it is well also that certain interests of the nation which transcend State lines should be conservative of the general national resources—must be dealt with by the national government and from the national point of view.

The message also is significant in calling the attention of the Democrats to the which they are called upon to apply the enduring principles of our law. The popular impulse and profound social and political instinct of the land are against work hour laws on the ground of preserving the freedom of contract, and the still greater wrong of that interpretation of the doctrine of assumed risk which has, in many instances, and which the sound judgment and humanity of the Democratic party trusted aside in the Narraguse case—these mistakes of certain of our courts have given a second impulse to the strong and accentuate the vital importance of a judiciary which shall be in force with the controlling facts of the social organism and as a mere automatic force of three) secretary. Applause Tribune.

Carnegie and Protection.

Mr. Carnegie has written an article up in his experience with the tariff in which he states that "steel is now produced cheaper here than anywhere else, notwithstanding the higher wages paid per man," and that the great manufacturing plant in which he is connected needs no further protection. It does not follow that less powerful American steel making establishments are as well prepared to give up protective duties, or that if the tariff were taken in abundance competition with the vast Carnegie plant would be possible.

Protection was the ladder by which the Carnegie industry was developed and it is certain that other steel makers are not as able as he is to climb the ladder down. He is much stronger financially, for example, than the great makers of Alabama and elsewhere in the United States. Wages of steel workers might suffer without protection, and to night competition Mr. Carnegie, thanks to many years of prosperity, may not feel his strongest to do without it, but his competitors are not multimillionaires. The position Mr. Carnegie occupies is exceptional, its fellow citizens are in quite another class financially. Many of them are struggling along as he was many years ago, and have as much need for protection now as he had then. Mr. Carnegie should be able to see that he does not represent the average American manufacturer.

A Rise in Prices.

To the complaint that prices have been under a protective tariff therefore not one reply. Back in 94, according to a story that Congressman Madden, of Illinois, is telling a farmer came to town and bought a wagon. He came again last summer and asked the dealer how much the same thing. "I paid $60 for that wagon, didn't you?" asked the dealer; "well, another like it will cost you $70."

The farmer begin to use bad language concerning the tariff, but the dealer in wagons broke him "a-pattest. "You had to give me $90 instead of corn for the wagon, didn't you?" he inquired. "Well, this year if you will give me one bushel of corn I'll give you a new wagon, the best cook stove in the store, the best sofa-lounger in the shop and all the kitchen utensils your wife can use."

The dealer's arithmetic was correct. Corn was selling at 10 cents in 1894. In 1908 it is selling for 90 cents and upward.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

PULPIT

IN QUIET PATHS

By Henry F. Cope.

"He leadeth me beside the still waters."—Psalm xxiii. 2.

By far the greater number of us must live quiet, simple lives. To the few who live in the limelight the existence of the many may seem to be humdrum, but we are mistaken. How we are all too ready to measure living by its extremes and to decide that the best and most worthy of life must be quite must be lived in a pitiable ground.

Are there not for all our lives, for these ordinary, simple lives of ours, high tights, times that redeem the soul from world living high levels to which we may rise in spirit at least and save life from the dull level of mere ease and from the world we find and know such occasions.

Life is more not, too, what is of greater importance, splendid motives, lofty aims and inspiring ideals that stir us for into and fill all the dull valleys of the low land life? May not even the most commonplace life be transfused with the glory of a great sacrifice or a splendid ideal?

Life is what we make it. Greatness is not in circumstances, but in character. But of character. Who has not known great hearts, high minds and noble souls that have lived in humble homes beyond their little circles, who have shed a sweet and wholesome influence and sung because the sounds of their living have never reached the ears of the world. Mind you, I don't insist upon a woman's being beautiful; I only ask that she be gracious. More than to his religious education, more than to what he considers political necessities, William II. owes to his wife that sort of absurd piety which often gives his discourses a note so comical and false.

"The Emperor regard for the 'protection' has led her to exercise the influence upon him of remaining the pieces which are presented at the Schoepenfelder of Berlin, and I can assure you that she fills the place conscientiously. She crosses out without mercy the word 'love' in all manuscripts. It is a word which she regards as highly improper. She only tolerates it in the drama of Schiller and in the French works played at the National Theater by Coquelin. Of course the awful word when said in French sounds so much cooler. One man virtue. If the Emperes Viella a woman who composes pious pictures and states to be draped in advance of her arrival."

Keeping Up to Date.

"Yes," said the housewife, "yours is a sad story. Put it in the same story you told last year."

"Well, lady," answered Plodding Pete, "you wouldn't expect a tramp to go all dat time an' not show any improvement!"—Washington Star.

Political Comment.

The Message.

The President's message is a document which will be read by a very considerable number of people who are the collective mind ideas which will finally widely. It is in other words, an utterance of great moment, which will have a pervasive and lasting effect upon the social and political present and future of the republic. President Roosevelt is, as himself has said, does not try to compel, but to lead public opinion, and his powerful personality has kept him from getting too far away from those he leads. His messages, and very notably his latest message, are remarkable expressions of the more constitution and temper of the American people. They are essays in practical democracy, formulating the better purposes and aspirations of our people, and leading us on to our next stage of development. The sunshine and the cyclo may sincer at their tributes, but in public documents and in national conventions of political and Tilton policy these tributes are dynamic and shall will.

The President's reference to the incompatibility of the Democratic party's existence on settled principles, and the true problem is more specific than ever. They are "vain demonstrations," as he declares, which unify each other. It is well at this time to have it driven home to us that it is necessary, if it be well also, that centralization in business has taken place in large measure and should be not, to be for a time, to be controlled to the public interest, by the Government, and that it is well also, to have it recognized that combination and concentration are in business, as in social life, necessary and accepted and taken advantage of, and utility and disadvantage, and that it is well also that certain interests of the nation which transcend State lines should be conservative of the general national resources—must be dealt with by the national government and from the national point of view.

The message also is significant in calling the attention of the Democrats to the which they are called upon to apply the enduring principles of our law. The popular impulse and profound social and political instinct of the land are against work hour laws on the ground of preserving the freedom of contract, and the still greater wrong of that interpretation of the doctrine of assumed risk which has, in many instances, and which the sound judgment and humanity of the Democratic party trusted aside in the Narraguse case—these mistakes of certain of our courts have given a second impulse to the strong and accentuate the vital importance of a judiciary which shall be in force with the controlling facts of the social organism and as a mere automatic force of three) secretary. Applause Tribune.

Protection and Wages.

Mr. Carnegie has written an article up in his experience with the tariff in which he states that "steel is now produced cheaper here than anywhere else, notwithstanding the higher wages paid per man," and that the great manufacturing plant in which he is connected needs no further protection. It does not follow that less powerful American steel making establishments are as well prepared to give up protective duties, or that if the tariff were taken in abundance competition with the vast Carnegie plant would be possible.

Protection was the ladder by which the Carnegie industry was developed and it is certain that other steel makers are not as able as he is to climb the ladder down. He is much stronger financially, for example, than the great makers of Alabama and elsewhere in the United States. Wages of steel workers might suffer without protection, and to night competition Mr. Carnegie, thanks to many years of prosperity, may not feel his strongest to do without it, but his competitors are not multimillionaires. The position Mr. Carnegie occupies is exceptional, its fellow citizens are in quite another class financially. Many of them are struggling along as he was many years ago, and have as much need for protection now as he had then. Mr. Carnegie should be able to see that he does not represent the average American manufacturer.

A Rise in Prices.

To the complaint that prices have been under a protective tariff therefore not one reply. Back in 94, according to a story that Congressman Madden, of Illinois, is telling a farmer came to town and bought a wagon. He came again last summer and asked the dealer how much the same thing. RAILROADS

Officers of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad have set out to prevent the stealing of coal from their cars and stealing its tracks into the new terminal.

The Chicago and Northwestern has ordered from the Baldwin Locomotive Company 15 Atlantic type locomotives and 15 Mikado and 25 ten-wheel freight engines.

The organizers of the American Federation of Labor have formed a railway employes' department in the hope of bringing into the federation the big railway unions.

The Rock Island Company, which is the leading concern for the Rock Island railroad and its numerous branch lines with a mileage second only to that of the Union Pacific, and which has been the subject of the vice president and more of the president, the public and the press, is reported to have promised to be interested in more prominent in financial circles than ever before. It is believed that further prosecutions will be unnecessary to bring the management to the unexpected evidence should be discovered.

MESSAGE ON BROWNSVILLE.

President Urges that Negro Soldiers Be Given Exact Justice.

President Roosevelt sent a message to the Senate Monday submitting the report of the Secretary of War with papers on the shooting up of Brownsville, Texas by negro troops on the night of Aug. 13, 1906. The report exhaustive, the President says, not only the fact that negro soldiers did the shooting, but also the identity of some of the guilty men, and the conspiracy concerned in the raid was discharged without honor, and many of the enlisted men who were excellent records.

The President recommends that the members of the companies not actually taking part in the raid, but who by a conspiracy of silence shielded the real offenders, be restored to the service on condition that they tell all they know about the affair and help in fixing responsibility for the crime. The President appeals to his message a great number of documents showing the negro soldiers guilty of the murders committed in the raid on the white inhabitants of the Texas town.

ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF KILLING DR. RUSTIN

Omaha Jury Sets Charles E. Davis, Who Was Held for Murder, at Liberty.

IS END OF A NOTED TRIAL

Defendant Is Related by Ties Thus to Prominent Officials of First National Bank.

After thirteen hours of deliberation the jury in the case of Charles E. Davis, charged with the murder of Dr. Frederick T. Rustin, Sept. 2, in Omaha, agreed upon a verdict of "not guilty." Two hours later Judge Sears received the verdict and ordered the immediate release of the prisoner. It required nineteen ballots to reach an agreement. The first ballot stood 11 to 1 for acquittal of the charge of murder in the first degree. The last jury remained in the room during four ballots, and after that was joined by another in voting for conviction on a lesser charge.

The case attracted attention not only because of the prominence of the victim of the deed, who was one of the leading physicians and surgeons of the city, and the mystery surrounding the tragedy, but because of the family connections of the defendant. Although himself holding a minor position in the First National Bank, he is the son-in-law of the vice president and niece of the president, the public and the press of the country, "plaintiffs in error" in the case, which was carried to the supreme court of Nebraska, and the decision of the court in the case of the Rock Island gen-

JAPAN TO STOP EMIGRATION.

Last Possible Cause of Trouble Between Two Countries Disappears.

All Japanese emigration to the United States is to be stopped by the Japanese government, writes a prominent Washington correspondent. When the Japanese had sent a few weeks ago Baron Komura, Minister of Foreign Affairs, will make official announcement that the government has decided to prohibit all emigration to the United States after a given date. Thus will disappear the last remaining difference or possible cause of trouble between the United States and Japan.

Japanese prohibition of emigration to the great non-Japanese Hilton Head has achieved in the State Department. If war Secretary Root who induced the Japanese government to take this step and, though the announcement to Taft may be made upon the assumption that the Japanese government has voluntarily decided upon this course, it is matter of fact the decision was reached through a long series of negotiations between Secretary Root and Baron Takahira, the Japanese ambassador to the United States. The order of the Japanese government will prevent all emigration of Japanese laborers to Hawaii, Canada, Mexico and Central America, and will make it impossible for Japanese to come to the United States.

MAINS TRIAL BEGINS.

Brother of Army Officer Who Killed Annis Is First to Face Jury.

The trial of Theodore Jacques Hains, author of the notorious letter to the Secretary of the Navy, in which Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Hains was charged with the assassination of Ensign Annis, was begun in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia Monday morning. The Senate was not in session Friday, and the trial was postponed until Monday. It is expected that the trial will last two weeks, lasting for several days, was passed with little debate and priority in the Senate, and was reported from committee. An unusual feature of the bill is the provision that it shall be in force until the bill enacting the appropriation of $21,000,000 for the Panama Canal, which provides for a commission of three members to be appointed by the President, and without debate passed a resolution authorizing the appointment of a committee of five to consider the reference to the secret service of the President's message.

The Senate was not in session Saturday. No particular progress had been mapped out, but under a call of committees many bills were reported. Some members were especially interested in the report of the Senate Committee on Commerce, which reported out the Elkins bill, which was referred to the Senate Commerce Committee. The Senate Committee on Commerce has spent months in hearing and considering the bill, and it was passed by a vote unanimously after the roll had been called.

The Bloomsville Office consumed nearly the entire session of the Senate Monday. Senator Clapp outlined the case of Lieutenant Colonel Lee, former soldier of the Twenty-fifth regiment, in the procedure of court martial directed to attempts to get a confession from him. Mr. Fardell introduced a resolution calling for a full list for the reinstatement or those soldiers participating in the mutiny of three colored army officers be restored to duty, whether discharged soldiers are entitled to pensions for the shooting up of Brownsville, as a propaganda for their reinstatement, and of having that duty with the President, provided by the Warner act, which was passed by the House, the origin of the War Department's investigation of the Brownsville affair, was read and Mr. Lorimer again took the floor to continue upon the same. The Senate Committee bills dealing with affairs in the District of Columbia, the House passed a measure the Senate gas in Washington. The bill now goes to the Senate, as well as another bill authorizing the sale of liquor in the District. A bill providing for free burials in the public schools was voted down. An attempt by Representative Henry of Texas to obtain a change in the referendum of a bill prohibiting the making of future contracts on agricultural products brought forth the protest from Chairman Scott of the agricultural committee that the measure would soon grant hearings to farmers unions and others on this subject. The House voted to adjourn not only Dec. 19, to Monday, Jan. 4.

WORK OF CONGRESS

The Senate session Wednesday was devoted little to the formal presentation of departmental reports and the introduction of bills. The reports have been made public from time to time and the bills, numbering 352, were mostly for the granting of pensions. Senator Johnston of Alabama introduced a bill to commute former Senators Russell and Weaver, dismissed from the military academy for hazing. He declared that the punishment was excessive and said that every less Senator was forced to bring given similar punishment and being reserved in his privileges. For nearly five hours the House considered the bill providing for the taking of the title to each and subsequent decennial enumerations of the Representatives in Congress, and proved it without material change.

The Senate held a short session Thursday, during which an appeal was reached for taking up the omnibus claims bill Monday with the understanding that it will not interfere with the consideration of the postal savings bill or any other measure to which conferees are especially interested. After a short especially session the Senate adjourned Monday in respect to the memory of the late Representative Bishop, of New York, who for the time was there a question in the House. The legislative appropriation bill was passed and several bills passed, among them being one authorizing the President to appoint a commission to inquire into deserters in the military and naval services.

A Scotsman was travelling in a third class carriage on a train in England. Five others at a small station boarded with a cheerful "Good morning." JUST WHAT HUNTINGTON SAID.

Clever Salesman "Got" Railroad King in Book Purchase.

The late Henry Miller, who was golfer, philosopher and friend to many back years, which is thousand miles of New York, was a great concentrated salesman. One day he called on C. C. H. Huntington and showed him a rare copy of Izaak Walton.

"There are two varieties of this," said Mr. Miller. The other volume is in perfect condition, you see this one is. You cannot possibly let them go side by side, you know. I have only this like this in my library."

"What is the price?" asked the railroad king.

"Seven hundred dollars," said the bibliomaniac.

"These are two valuable volumes for my library," Mr. Huntington exclaimed.

Mr. Miller went back to his place, and sent the books to Mr. Huntington's house with a bill for $700. Next day the railroad king sent for him.

"Why did you send me those books?" he demanded, abruptly.

"Because you bought them," was the calm reply.

"I certainly did not!" cried the millionaire.

"Oh, yes, you did," answered Mr. Miller. "You'll remember perfectly well when I tell you what you said. You told me distinctly: 'These are two valuable volumes for my library.'"—Harper's Weekly.

IN EUROPE WITH MOTOR CAR.

Much There That Is Perpetual Delight to Traveler.

Belgium and Holland, though not blessed with good roads as a rule, live much in shady, cloistered in their quaint towns and old-world cities. One has, of course, to travel slowly over the brick Dutch roads and the towns gains ever, but the towns are so close to one that the former need not be monotonous. And the lassitude, seduction of leisurely, the mystery that enfolds antique towns and historic associations of Dordrecht and the dead cities of Zeeuwse Zee, are sufficient recompense for the slight discomforts of the route. But once east of Namur the pave ceases, and one can travel in the delights of speed along the valley of the wonderful Meuse, Lesse or Semois. The latter river is charming, and a tour through its ranks down it from Laroche to Bouillon, the grand ruins and its medium woods gliding a never ceasing variety of view.—Vogue.

Squabbling the Cause of It.

A magistrate who has taken upon himself the difficult task of adjusting domestic troubles says that petty quarrels break up more homes than opinions ever could do. He has no sympathy for adulterers and is shocked one concerning the influence of unfaithfulness on the average individual class household, which he mainly maintains is more! In the strongest terms he condemns nagging and squabbling and sounds a warning against the effects of overwork. He is the only person who believes that in one very cases of faithlessness the reason can be found in a cloud some atmosphere. Believing in humanity generally, he finds causes too trivial to give an excuse for causing breaks.

English and American Contrasts.

"The Double Business men's Smart are shorter than ours, and, besides, seem to be worn in some, be turn to some eccentric, culture, thought, art or literature." American business man is believed to be too materialistic. His work is too serious, too practical, too, and when he is through—and we work long hours—he wants something with a long to it, something he can take home and show his wife and family. Without a fundamentally work and follow up these public meetings, with successful organizers.

The Official Paper.

The official paper proposition is one that needs revision. It may not be generally known that the executive committee selects one paper in the city where the national grange meets in which to publish the proceedings. About 2,500 copies of this official go per are purchased and mailed to a list of names furnished by each state master. These papers cost from $2 to $2 a hundred, according to the arrangements made. Thus the national grange expends from $50 to $70 a year for the papers sent to each state gets the official report. It doesn't say unless everything can be printed in the public should know, and only the limited amount will not a venue to print all that the grange would like to have its constituents know. This would seem to be a good place for a newspaper could well afford to give us a page for the price it gets. This year enough copy was furnished to the official reporter to fill seven volumes each day but the paper never carried over two. Unless a newspaper can be secured that will print what is furnished by an experienced reporter than the plan would better be changed, cutting much from all side, who should be Patrons one of which is New York seems to be selected rather than some other city as neither the official reporter nor the state master.

I respectfully suggest that the interests of the national grange call for a better selection of a city, where we have a paper if only fairly reports of the proceedings were mailed to 600 or 700 states and members in grange states, some of which I am sure would suffer from them. AN OBSERVER.

FOR FAIR REPRESENTATION.

This is the Resolution That Didn't Pass at Washington.

The following resolution was presented by the executive committee of the National grange for a vote of the assembly in the national grange, unless one dissent or in substantially the same form as follows:

Whereas, The National grange is composed of delegates from the various states, and

Whereas, The various local granges in the various states represent the interests of the farmers, and

LARGE DEFICIT SHOWN IN NATION'S TREASURY

IS DUE TO PANIC OF 1907.

Country Now on Up Grade Financially, but Estimated Receipts for 1909-10 Is $143,046,789.

The annual report of George B. Cortelyou, Secretary of the Treasury, shows a reversal of conditions for the fiscal year 1908, as compared with the fiscal year for 1907. For the latter year the receipts were $80,230,280, in excess of the disbursements. For the fiscal year 1908 the disbursements were $570,530 in excess of the receipts, due to business depression and increased appropriations. Fortunately, the report says, the available cash balance at the beginning of the fiscal year was $272,061,445.

The treasury was called upon in the latter part of October, 1907, to render assistance in a financial panic which started in New York City and which gradually extended over the entire country. Through treasury operations during this financial disturbance the amount of public deposits with national banks reached $236,000,000 on Nov. 30, 1907, and on Dec. 27, 1907, the total amount of $279,000,271 was attained, after which it was decreased to $256,029,154 by the close of the month. Subsequent withdrawals decreased this amount to $115,525,320, on Nov. 30, 1908.

The aggregate of trust funds, consisting of gold coin and standard silver dollars held for the redemption of certificates and notes for which they were respectively pledged, increased from $1,000,000 during the year. The monetary stock for the year increased $283,203,000. The growth in gold was $151,544,231. In silver, $17,916,263; national bank notes, $11,535,227.

At the close of the fiscal year 1908 the money in circulation amounted to $3,929,055,926, or a per capita of $44.74. The percentage of gold to circulation was $37.95. There was an increase of $94,945,227 in the volume of national bank notes during the fiscal year closed July 1 last.

The amount of interest-bearing debt on June 30, 1907, as shown to have been $894,962,750, and on June 30, 1908, $897,365,000. The report shows that from the date of the passage of the national bank act in 1863 to July 1, 1908, charters were granted to 3,714 national banking associations and at the close of the last fiscal year there were in operation 4,827 associations, with an authorized capital stock of $623,824,734. Banks to the number of 1,876 have been closed by the voluntary action of their stockholders and 66 insolvent associations have been placed in charge of receivers.

There were purchased for the coinage of subsidiary silver during the fiscal year 50,000,000 ounces of silver at a cost of $32,252,000.

The receipts from internal revenue taxes for the fiscal year 1908 were $265,711,426, a net decrease from "907 of $125,000,000. The expenditures for the same period amounted to $286,142,139, a decrease for the year of about $40,000,000.

Basing his figures on the estimates of appropriations already submitted by the several executive departments, the secretary is of the opinion that the excess of expenditures over receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909, will be $125,000,000. The secretary estimates the deficit for the present fiscal year at $141,000,000.

ELEVEN MEN ARE KILLED.

Premature Explosion of Dynamite at Las Obispo, on the Panama Canal.

A giant blast of dynamite, already prepared for firing, was prematurely exploded by the sound of the whistle at Las Obispo, on the Panama Canal. Eleven men were killed and fifty injured. Las Obispo cut is about thirty miles from Colon, and the shock of the explosion was distinctly felt here. Numerous reports are current as to the cause of the accident, but the official version from Colebra states that during the loading of the last holes of the blast the dynamite, we are charged and the remaining twenty-two have exploded by contact. The latter holes were not connected electrically, as the discharge of the blast was set for 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The majority of the victims are Spaniards. Relief trains were sent to the scene of the disaster. Tradition has it that the Panama Railroad cost a human life for every tie. With accidents, insurrections and disease, the construction of the canal has not gone along without knocking its toll.

BOMB WRECKS A BUILDING.

Tenement-House Scene of Explosion Is Another Bank Robbery.

More than a score of persons were injured, five of them seriously, and a few dead others were thrown into a panic when a bomb was hurled into the all-Italian tenement house at 330 East Sixty-third street, New York. The building was wrecked. It was occupied exclusively by Italians, and threatening letters had been received by some of them in the last few months. The succession of the blast shook buildings for blocks.

CONGRESS HITS AT ROOSEVELT.

House Names Committee to Act on Part of Message that Offends.

A fight between the President of the United States and Congress, which some seemed to think may extend very much since the famous Andrew Jackson impeachment case, began Friday. It was precipitated by the President attacking the legislativ of the members of the House and Senate. Action against the President was taken in the House when a committee of four was appointed to deal with the objectionable portions of the message. When the President in his message declared that the mile pennon for Congress curtailing the scope of sewer service operations was because the members themselves feared investigation, and that the amendments benefited only criminals, he stirred up the true Blue. While the more deliberate Senate was quietly planning a rebuke to the President the House acted openly.

The resolution providing for the "impeachment of the President" was offered by Representative Perkins of New York, and been unanimously passed by a prominent Republican. The resolution Mr. Perkins made a brief statement, saying that he was satisfied that the House would not hesitate to take such action as the dignity of that body required. He said that some of the President's expressions were unfortunate.

Vice-President Fairbanks, Ambassador Bryce and Other Men of Note Deliver Addresses.

One of the most notable gatherings ever assembled in the history of this country is the inland waterways conference convened was called to order when the National Rivers and Harbors Congress met for its second session in Washington to 47th annual convention. The congress is annual in its purpose, representative of sections and all waterways, and is devoted to improvement of waterways for the benefit of a comprehensive policy for improving rivers, canals and harbors.

Vice President Fairbanks, ambassador Bryce, senators, representatives, diplomats, captains of finance, governors and other men of note were in attendance.

VENEZUELAN SHIP IS SEIZED.

Dutch Cruiser Sails Under Guns of Forts for Capture.

The Dutch cruiser Gelderland came into port at Willemstad, island of Curacao, Sunday morning towing the Venezuelan coast guardship Alix with the Dutch flag below and a Dutch crew on board. The Gelderland captured the Alix off Puerto Cabello on Saturday. At that time the Alix was lying close to shore, and notwithstanding the threat which the Venezuelan government had made to fire upon any of the Dutch warships committing a hostile act, the Gelderland steamed at speed towards the guardship and said officer and guard in a launch in seizure. This they did without resistance and no shots came from the forts. The crew of the Alix was put ashore and the Dutch officer and surface remained on board, the Gelderland duly taking the prize in the harbor. He declared her a lawful prize, and the crew were put upon board, and so soon and he had offers written with the day touch on his arrival almost unconditionally—pending up from time to time at 2 cents, and face, into deep violet eyes, now 10.

So he wrote on, feeling a little his age, that Chloe had not spoiled, for after all he only had another half hour's work before him, and then they could sit and chat, and perhaps drown the sound of the bells that he knew would ring out in a few hours.

He was just in the frame of mind to summon his landlady's children, but except for himself, the house was empty. There was a Christmas Eve party going on, and Mrs. Marsh and her progeny were attending it.

He had been writing for half an hour since Chloe had left him, and felt the old familiar touch on his wrist. It was imagination of course, he did not even turn his head, and then he was looking into blue eyes, in the round golden-curled framed face of a boy of four, who laughed up at him and presented a rosebud to his lips.

"Goodness, child—where on earth do you come from? Who let you in and what job? What is your name?"

"Nobody let the child began to make preparations for—finishing a lofty knock. "Why, don't you know, Santy Claus? How did you come?"

NOEL CLAYTON'S CHRISTMAS

NOEL CLAYTON was tall and slender, with a pale face, black eyes, and his white hands, small and nervous, looking, and was spoken of as those of a woman.

He was forty years and a splash of gray on his temples, a strand or two of white in his moustache, and his hair was older.

He was broad-chested and muscular—by all rules—he should have been a soldier—he had spent three years in Africa for five years he had been writing short stories, sometimes two a month, for the magazines, and he had yet fully met expectations. He was a quiet man, generally speaking, and was beginning slowly to crawl from excessive hours to diversions and others and two from despair of his stories, one from failure of large debtors and one from general stagnation in the money market.

The Comptroller estimates the number of depositors in national banks at 5,250,000. Here are figures showing bank earnings:

Consolidation the reports of earnings and dividends for the year ended July 1, 1908, on a average capital and surplus of $2,015,000,000 and $48,876,470, respectively, the gross earnings are shown to be $1,000,000,000 losses, etc., charged off $202,538,295, and expenses and taxes paid $176,551,449, leaving net earnings of $131,235,386. The aggregate amount of dividends declared during the period was $97,336,282, an average of 10.80 per cent.

Continuing, the report says:

On or about June 30, 1908, the banks of the country had on hand $1,308,326,000, against $1,117,742,000 on June 30, 1907, of $254,582,267 during the year. About two-thirds of the cash holdings of the

CHICAGO.

While the comparatively mortality exhibits a surprising resilience of weak concerns, the progress made this week in attempts to establish gold, is one of paramount importance. The issue and similar conditions in manufacturing, some branches now prepare for the annual inventories and reports, but there is increase in trade employed and a better tone of specifications and estimates. Landlord relief times here and in interior points are a assembly stimulated by colder weather and the absorption of heavy-weight apparel, household goods and food products makes gratifying headway, whereas wares sell slowly. The improvement also appears to some extent in the big cities. Heavier movements are seen in the breadstuffs, provisions and live stock, with prices at a lower average and more remunerative to consumers. A strengthening influence is derived from the sensational recovery in securities of the chicago steam roads. Freight offerings are here unstable, but industrial and general merchandise steadily expand. Mercantile collections show a slight improvement in local bills, but country settlements are prompt. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 18 against 20 last week, 22 in 1907 and 25 in 1905. These with branches, number 24 against 26 last week, 22 in 1907 and 25 in 1905. Three with branches, number 24 against 26 in 1908—Dun's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK.

Retail and wholesale trades are more in evidence this week, and as these have expanded business in certain lines has been quite satisfactory. Cold weather and the approach of the season of the year have helped to stimulate fuel bolt remove refill. Provisions are firm and the demand here and there for yet fully not expected. Dry goods are in good demand, largely at the South, where best-priced cotton is a rebuilding feature. Wool goods come from the southwest and the spring wheat and Pacific Northwest to wholesale and jobbing centers where the latter trades are engaged in quick shipments to meet current needs. Iron and steel are firm, the latter selling a larger view of year-end distribution which is taking of inventories. In industrial lines, while there is still some idle machinery, the demand for orders is so much better as to induce manufacturers to go ahead freely, though this branch notes the influence of higher prices on some raw materials. Business failures in the United States for the week ending Dec. 10 number 238, against 231 last week, 281 in the like week of 1907, 229 in 1906, 226 in 1905 and 226 in 1904. Business failures in Canada number 30, against 28 last week and 30 in the like week of 1907.—Bradstreet's.

We always did think that Aunt Jemima would soon feel jealous of her sister, the Mighty Hunter. Nothing is so disturbing to the peace of mind as the work would be followed again by a story of rustic life in the dear West Country that he loved so well.

He "died quite alone, worked—and smoked—from morning to night, lived his profession, and had pretty fairly had all his troubles—male and female—and when a fit of the not infrequent blues set his by the throat, threw his tools into the grate and ordered up his landlady's children, and gentlemanism relaxed for an hour.

OFF FOR THE HORN.

Capt. Pete Campbell Leaves Next Week For New York to Sail For Seattle.

Capt. P. D. Campbell received a letter Monday from his son Iris at Seattle, enclosing his transportation on the steamer St. Croix, around the horn to Seattle.

Accompanying the pass was a letter to the owners of the St. Croix, which reads as follows: "This will be handed to you by my father, who writes me, in effect, that he considers himself a good enough mariner to see the St. Croix safely around the horn. You should duly instruct master and crew to initiate him into the mysteries of the Order of Neptune."

Therefore when Pete crosses the line he will probably conclude that the I. T. P. A. and the S. S. S. are imitations of marine tribulation.

The St. Croix, which leaves New York Jan. 15th, will call at San Juan, Porto Rico; St. Thomas, Barbadoes; Para, Pernambuco; Bahia, Rio Janeiro, Santos, Montevideo, Buenos Ayres, Valparaiso, Iquique, Callao, Panama, San Francisco, and then direct to Seattle.

The trip is expected to last eighty or ninety days.

The Question of Local Option.

It seems quite likely, indeed, it may be considered conclusive, that the local option wave has reached these shores, and that the electors of Charlevoix county, at the next spring election, will have an opportunity to pass on the question of licensed saloons.

The law provides measures for the submission of the question to the people, and there is very little doubt that the necessary forty per cent of the voters of the county will, on the 4th of January, ask the board of supervisors to submit the question.

In a county like this, where the people rule, no good citizen can rightfully object to the plebiscite. Argument, self interest, prejudice and even fanaticism, are buried in the one colossal fact that the people rule.

The question is a very vexing one, and is likely to be for many years to come. The liquor traffic is firmly planted in the vitals of society. In the abstract, it is idle to attempt to belittle its effects. But where and what is the remedy?

Among honest, God fearing citizens, there are those who believe in constitutional national prohibition, and those who do not; those who believe that high license would eliminate most of the evil effects of the business, and those who hold up both hands in horror at the thought of "accepting tribute from the devil"; those who believe that the evils of the trafic can be abolished by the state local option law, and those who contend that it is better to endure the evils of the open saloon than to fly to even greater evils. Of the latter class there are many conscientious temperance people all over Michigan, where local option has been tested. Then there are those who believe that a rigid enforcement of existing laws would eradicate the depraving and distressing features of the trade.

All believe, rightfully, that the liquor traffic is the great, terrifying spectre of the hour. The question is, however, does prohibition prohibit, and whether or not a seige by "gradual approaches" in the stringent enforcement of existing laws will not result in a more successful reduction of the enemy's works?

While we are inclined to the latter opinion, we believe the temperance people of Charlevoix county are within their legal and moral rights in demanding the plebiscite.

Medicine That is Medicine.

"I have suffered a good deal with malaria and stomach complaints, but I have now found a remedy that keeps me well, and that remedy is Electric Bitters; a medicine that is medicine for stomach and liver troubles, and for run down conditions," says W. C. Roseler, of Hartshay, Ark. Electric Bitters purify and enrich the blood, tone up the nerves, and impart vigor and energy to the weak. Your money will be refunded if it fails to help you. 50c at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

THE FIRST GUN.

Local Option Campaign Opened at Methodist Church Monday Evening.

What seems to be strictly a business men's movement for local prohibition was inaugurated last Monday night at the M. E. church. About one hundred were present, mostly business and professional men, and it was the unanimous sentiment of the meeting that Charlevoix should nail the prohibition banner to the mast.

Dr. Allan M. Wilkinson was elected chairman and Albert R. Mason secretary. Three officials were made permanent, and E. S. Stacks added as treasurer. The following committees were appointed:

Executive:—E. S. Stacks, H. Berdan, W. H. Miller, Andrew Rose, H. W. Kane.

Finance:—W. W. Washburn, F. E. Wood, S. J. Alcox.

It is the intention to petition the board of supervisors at its session, Jan. 4th, to submit the proposition, and to this end the following committeemen were appointed to secure our quote of names on the petition: 1st ward, Chas. Amoth; 2nd ward, S. J. Alcox; 3rd ward, W. W. Washburn; township, north side, A. A. Reynolds; south side, G. W. Dennis.

The canvassers are already at work, and there is no doubt that the necessary number will be secured here. In other parts of the county the work is also reported to be not only active but aggressive.

As it looks now, there is no doubt whatever but that the local prohibition question will be submitted at the spring election.

Meantime, let us possess our souls in patience. At the proper time the SENTINEL will be heard from. The time to strike is when the iron is hot.—It has not yet been placed in the forge.

Silver Wedding Anniversary.

At the Chatauqua day, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shapton celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, at their home, Glenwood Farm, in Barnard.

There were forty one guests present. They were the families of Edward, Richard S. and Thomas Shapton, George Anderson, M. S. Bowlish, James Cook and R. L. Bowlish, of this vicinity. The guests from outside were Rev. and Mrs. E. Mayhew and two children, of Hersey, Mich., and Mrs. Edson M. Chase and two children, formerly of Traverse City.

The house was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, large artificial Christmas bells, evergreen and holly.

At two p. m. a bountiful dinner was served. While the wedding cake was being eaten, Rev. Mayhew gave a toast, which consisted of a poem, composed by him for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Shapton received many beautiful presents, useful ware as tokens of congratulation on the past and best wishes for the future.

At a late hour the guests departed for their respective homes, pronouncing the day as having been a very merry Christmas day indeed, and one which they would long remember.

The SENTINEL cordially congratulates its old friends on this happy anniversary, and expresses the hope that they may celebrate their golden wedding as happily. Long life to Mr. and Mrs. Shapton.

Hymenial.

Married, Dec. 30th, at the home of the bride's parents, in this city, by Rev. H. A. Wright, Mr. J. Harrey Campbell, second son of Capt. and Mrs. P. D. Campbell, to Miss Linda Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cook. Only the immediate relatives and a few personal friends of the contracting parties. Mr. Arba Cameron was best man, and his wife, a sister of the groom, served as bridesmaid.

The floral Cevrations were profuse and beautiful. The wedding gifts embraced not only many articles of a household adornment and utility but included a house and lot on River street from Capt. Campbell, and a check for $100 from Mrs. Campbell with which to "set up house-keeping."

The young couple left on the 10:15 train for Petoskey, from whence they will go to Grand Rapids, Detroit, and other points, where both have friends and relatives.

The SENTINEL extends most hearty congratulations.

FISH TUG LOST.

Gasoline Boat Dashed to Pieces and Four Men Drowned.

A Frankfort special of the 29th says: Trying to make harbor in the face of a strong southwest gale Saturday night, the 15 ton fish tug Hiline, of this place, was dashed against the corner of the pier, broken in twain, and the entire crew of four men drowned. The dead are: Henry Hancrath, captain; Julius Dorry, Charlie Uibble and Gus Strauble.

The tug crew had been out on the lake lifting nets and were trying to make the harbor when the accident occurred. News of the catastrophe did not spread over the town until Sunday morning, when the cabin of the tug was found on the beach. The cabin stove had stopped at 7 and it is presumed that the accident occurred about that time Saturday.

None of the bodies has yet been recovered, and the beach for miles with watchers waiting for the waves to give up their dead. Hancrath, the owner of the tug, was the only unmarried man of the crew, the other three leaving wives and families.

A Great Lecture by Lou J. Beauchamp.

An unusual opportunity is offered to the people of Charlevoix in the next number of the lecture course which occurs Wednesday evening, Jan. 6th. The number combines the best features of an entertainment and an instructive and inspiring lecture. There is but one Beauchamp, and he is a man of such thrilling interest that everyone wants to hear him. A speaker of world wide reputation such as one of our Chatauqua assemblies: "Let me tell you people something. The best part of this Chatauqua program is yet to come. My dear friend Beauchamp will make you laugh and laugh and laugh. He will make you cry and cry and cry, and he will make you think and think and think."

The Meridian Herald says: "The universal verdict appears to be that Meridian has never had within her borders a more scholarly, nor a more entertaining speaker."

Reserved seat sale will open at the Ivy Drug Store on Monday evening, Jan. 4th, at 7 o'clock. Single admission 50 cents.

Amusements.

At the Bridge Theater the Stock Company are keeping the audience in roars of laughters at every performance. McDonald & Hoffman, the comedy sketch team, are well taken and considerably that they change their acts every performance they are a team of unexceptional merit. Manager Stoddard is to be congratulated on the class of entertainments he is giving to the people of Charlevoix, and the increasing patronage shows that the citizens appreciate it. Mrs. A. A. McDonald has been engaged as musical director and this guarantees a good class of music to theater goers.

Central Lake Torch: Judge Mayne at Traverse City this week submitted to the Grand Traverse bar for an expression of opinion, a proposed movement to place a number of judicial circuits in a district and have the judges of the different circuits change courts. On it's face the plan would appear a good one, operating to divide more equally among the judges the work of the district and in instances removing from the court the usually unjust burden of suspicion of political or local interests exerting an undue influence in matters before the court. In some cases no doubt it would do away with demands for change of venue and would, apparently at least, have a tendency to increase confidence in the absolute impartiality of the courts. Circuit judges are being requested to give opinions upon the question and Judge Mayne submits it to the bar of his circuit for an expression.

The supreme court last week affirmed the case of the People vs. John Coffey and remanded Mr. Coffey to the circuit court of Charlevoix for sentence. Mr. Coffey is a wealthy fisherman of Manistique and was arrested for violating the fishing laws of the state. His plea that the law was unconstitutional and carried the matter from Justice Bissinger's court up to the Supreme. Pros. Atty Chris represented The People in the case throughout.

LOST—A pocket-book containing $25.00 and two tickets to the Bridge Theater. Keep the money but return the tickets to R. Swain Ferguson House.

PIONEER DEAD.

An Old Settler of Charlevoix County Pass Away at Traverse City.

We take the following from the Traverse City Record. Mr Bartlett was a "homesteader" in Evline when the SENTINEL was founded, and will be remembered by all the old settlers.

Mr. Bartlett was born in Compton, Dorsetshire, England, July 19, 1820. At the age of 21 he married Miss Isabella Collins of Skepton Mallet, and 54 years ago immigrated to this country. For 13 years he lived in Cleveland, and 41 years ago moved to Charlevoix county, where he took up a homestead. He lived there 11 years, coming to Petoskey in 1871 and has lived there every since, visiting among some of his daughter, Mrs. Willis very often, having been in this city since the rath of August. Since Monday at 6 o'clock he had been in a coma and at 5:45 this morning the end came.

He leaves five children: James, of Petoskey, Mrs. Mary David, of Center of Alpine, Edward, of Traverse City, Henry, of Petoskey, Mrs. Mary Willis, of this city. He has many grandchildren surviving him, there being about 50 in Petoskey.

The funeral will be held at the First Memorial Baptist church, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. Chadwick officiating. The body will be sent to Petoskey this evening and there will be a short prayer service at Hughes undertaking parlors at 6 o'clock.

Mr. Bartlett was an ardent abolitionist, and lodged negroes to get to Canada by the Underground Railway more than once. At one time, together with three successful ministers and prominent business men of Oberlin, Ohio, he assisted in the Wellington rescue. The negro was being held in an attic of a hotel and guarded by southerners, when Mr. Bartlett assisted in getting a ladder up, by which he escaped to a carriage, which took him off to safety. It was troublous times in Oberlin at that time, and only the presence of several ministers in the crowd prevented bloodshed. At that, several attacks were made on innocent citizens who were sympathizers with Mr. Bartlett and no other persons were arrested and put in prison. The "prisoners" were treated like anything but culprits in jail. Quantities of provisions were sent them and their wives were allowed to visit them. They remained in jail three months and on their release a band escorted them through the streets, the first stop being at a church."

MOTOR TRANSIT.

Resort Men Buy Motor Busses For Little Traverse Region.

Petoskey News: Sunday's Grand Rapids Herald contained an account of the purchase by a number of men interested in Harbor Springs, Wequetonsing and Charlevoix resort houses, which, of course, incidentally means Petoskey, of motor cabs which will be used for the purpose of further enhancing the beauty and value of this region as a resort center.

"George W. Lemon, president and manager of the Continental Automobile company, has just returned from Chicago where after a conference with M. C. Armour, Charles A. Allegan and Holmes Hoge of Chicago, director of the Harbor Springs association, A. L. Deuel of Harbor Springs and F. H. Leslie of Grand Rapids, succeeded in landing the contract for a motor bus line at Harbor Springs.

"To that time, however, there have been no facilities for transportation around the resort. The roads over which the busses will travel are ideal, and during dry weather the service will be quite speedy. Motor cars will run from Harbor Springs to Forest Beach Inn, making stops at the golf links and Harbor Springs depot. A regular three quarter hour schedule will be maintained, giving patrons of the resort better service than they have ever enjoyed before. The busses will be fitted for cabins and the cars driven by competent chauffeurs.

Mr Lemon plans the establishment of cars for trips to other points as Petoskey, Boyne, Charlevoix and almost little Traverse Bay, after the bus line is started in operation.

SOUNDS WARNING.

Federal Fish Warden Asks Fish Protection.

"The most serious condition now confronting the American fishery industry is the failure of the states to afford adequate protection to migratory fishes in state and interstate waters."

This is the serious note of warning sounded by George M. Bowers, United States fish commissioner, in his annual report made public lately. Mr. Bowers graphically depicts the great destruction wrought to certain species of fish, and makes an earnest appeal for their preservation.

Referring to the history of the New England salmon fishery as a warning, the commissioner declares that some of the states seem yet absolutely indifferent to the strong needs or felt urge for species of similar habits, whose obliteration, he says, in certain under certain conditions seems inevitable. Mr. Bowers states that fishes most in need of establishment are the shad, the striped bass on the Atlantic coast and the salmon on the Pacific states.

The disappearance of the sturgeon from nearly every east coast river, Mr. Bowers states, "shows how greed and influence may in a single generation destroy a valuable fishery." North Carolina stands out as the only state among all the states in which the herring engaging in the catching of shad whose true general decline of this fishery has been arrested.

Boyne Herald: The boys at the Beulah Land Farm seem to be favored above most boys in the best of homes. They are privileged to come into contact and receive the advice and counsel of some of our best and greatest men of the land. Boyne City seldom knows about the arrival or departure of these men as they slip in unannounced and get over to the Beulah House and there spend their time with the Beulah boys. Few people realized last week that the man getting up from the depot with Mr. Swift was none other than the world famous Judge Brown, father of the Juvenile Court Law of the United States. Judge Brown said he could not come to Michigan without making a visit to the Beulah Land Farm and find out what was being done for the boys. His verdict is one that should bring credit to all Boyne City. He says that it is to ask the best he has found such an excellent work for boys and that wherever he goes he will point to the Beulah Land Farm for boys as a model institution

"Promise your promise not to say a word about my plans until I so-mend-mending when you may tell everybody if you wish."

"I shall remember," said the girl, "it is a safe promise. I could not possibly crack a nut-meg-planning before mother-log. It's a terrible road. I don't suppose there's a horse in the settlement that'll be safe from you."

"I know that, of course," said the young officer.

"Now promise me something in return."

"Anything you think, my darling."

"Please be careful of yourself. Don't go—I mean don't let it affect you—all these years for you."

"You mean how long I would wait for you, Ellen?"

"I meant her to his heart and kissed her to forward. But the parting had to be a brief one. If the ship should take ground on the shore, that would be my end of the endeavor. If she got safely aboard the boat, which presently loaded her with Ellise in attendance, it would be a little village, consisting of half a dozen hovels on the strand.

Leaving Ellise to seek a shelter for them for the night, she stood on the beach, her eyes filled with tears, watching the boat return to the ship, watching the ship itself gather way, round the long, the ship itself gather way, round the head, and enter the inlet. What would she see him again? How should they be reunited were between them be carried away? He had told her—indeed, she knew that a plan—months more than before the Confederates could be subdued, the ports in use of women and men in the pendulous. It was hardly possible that they could marry until the war was over. Ellise was his ingenious, daring nature. She felt sure that he would be the life of the fighting. He might be killed. He might be killed in the next few hours!

CHAPTER XI.

Miss Ellen was so thoroughly miserable as entirely oblivious to her surroundings, that she did not hear a hoarse voice approaching and in the horse was almost upon her. The rider stared at her curiously as he drew near, concluded her was insane, himself instantly from his horse, and was by her side and bowed low before her.

"Why, Miss Ellen Jones!" he exclaimed, "what are you doing here? Why are you not on the Greyhound? Why are you standing yonder point a few moments standing yonder point?"

"Captain Haywood!" faltered poor Ellen, "I—I—"

She did not know what to say to him. She knew that he was in love with her. The use of his proposal was so long, he had paid court to her before she went to the Dominion. Although he had received encouragement from the young woman herself, he was not willing to make an secret of his approval of the young man's suit. So he had spoken to her father, intimating that he would ultimately win her. Haywood was a fine fellow, a good fellow, had inherited his commission and gone South at the outbreak of the war. Ever after he had joined with Major Jones's regiment and served with the first of it. Throughout the war he was a conscientious and a gallant soldier, and he had a high value and away in her throat. A chase broke on the night. It was followed by a yell. There was a shot, two shots, a shrieking yelp, the ring of steel on steel, curses, cries, shrieks, groans, words of command.

She ran at the gang-plank now. It seemed as if she could not take another step, yet she ran up it and boarded the ship. Nobody marked her in the dark and confusion. The deck, which had been filled with writhing struggling figures, suddenly grew quiet. The shots died away. The curses and yells stopped. The clang of steel blades was heard no more. His the groans were louder than sighs but heard against the gasping panting for breath, striving to recover herself, gasping, fearful, broken.

"It's all over," she heard a voice say. "We've got him. The leader is here."

"I, was Captain Haywood who spoke.

"There is light here, somebody," cried another voice, her father's. "Bring him below to the cabin," continued Major Jones.

"Ay, ay, sir," answered Haywood. "Mr. Matthews, look out for the prisoners and send men to secure the other ship. You have done splendidly," continued the Captain to his crew.

Amid the cheers of the victorious Confederates her father and Captain Haywood passed by two men, half drag-ging, half carrying, a limp, insensible figure between them, carried the cabin beneath the poop. The Ellise being provided with a berth for the night, carried by the third man fell fair on the face of the prisoner as they passed him on the deck of the ship. She had strained her eyes after the group, unable to see in all the moment when in that flash of light she recognized her lover. His face was white as death. There was a red patch across his forehead.

She had been incapable of motion before. No one had yet noticed her in the shadow of the mainmast. She remained where she got the strength she never knew, but she was so overcome by the sudden change of astonished men, and terrified by the odds after the others.

Her father and at the head of the table, Captain Haywood stood on one side, the Captain Haywood was kneeling by the side of the wounded officer. He had evidently been carrying the fact of Captain Smith, who had just at that moment recovered consciousness. He struggled to a sitting position by the aid of the blacks. The girl stopped in the doorway motionless. Not a vestige of color in her cheeks or lips. Her skirts were muddy and bedgled. Her hat could not stand on her head, her face was pale in wild disheveled. Only the rapid rise of her bosom betokened life. Her mouth and her father stared at her, speechless.

"Ellise," whispered Captain Smith, struggling to his feet. The woman was standing limp, exhausted.

"Yes?" he said commandingly.

"Ellise," she said, and at his eye as he fixed and threw out a trembling hand towards her. Some drops of blood were flicked upon her dress by the gesture.

"Do you know your mother?" he said.

"Yes," she said, and she looked at the blood of my men is upon you."

"Ellise, I was made for the girl. She put out her hand as if to ward off a blow, one hand pressed to her bosom. A little moan came from her parched lips. She collapsed slowly in a dead faint, a limp heap in Captain Haywood's arms. They had all been too absorbed in her entrance to say a word in the brief time in which the scene had taken place.

THE MARRIED MANNER

Solid Contentment and Loyalty Are Not All that a Woman Asks.

"It's nice to be married," said the middle-aged matron to her intimate friend. "It's such a privilege to be the constant company to whom your husband doesn't bother to be polite. When John stepped on my skirt yesterday and tore a hole in the back breadth, all he said was, 'Why the dickens do you want your skirts so long?' If I had been any other woman he'd have rated himself for his awkwardness and apologized most humbly."

"Well, if John spilled your skirt he'd get you a better one to make up for it," observed the friend. "I've known you and John pretty familiarly ever since you were bridesmaid, and he certainly is nice in that way."

"John's a good husband," said the other, emphatically. "I'm not complaining of John. But don't suppose I don't long hard to be criticised my own man behind his back, but, as you say, he is nice as pretty familiarly—don't you think that even solid goodness and loyalty is not all a woman asks perfectly happy woman when the deference of the courtship days begins to fade away?"

"I know," agreed the intimate friend, "I shall never forget what a blow it was to me, the first time Jim came home without the bunch of flowers he'd never failed to bring me since we were married. Why, he wouldn't have thought of interrupting a newspaper he was reading and his dinning a meal in our engaged days, but all I see of him now at breakfast is a printed sheet. And that difference in the way of speaking—why, does it begin to creep into a man's conversation with his wife?"

"I can recall the very time John first spoke to me differently," said John's wife. "It was about some trifle we had discussed once—as it happened, before we married. I didn't look at it as John did. He set me right. He had set me right the first time we discussed it—oh, mercy! so gently! I didn't know what was happening. I knew the second time. And yet he wasn't rude, you understand. It was just the married manner. John and Jim aren't the only men."

"The married manner," said Jim's wife, thoughtfully. "Well, I suppose a man wants to have a wife with whom he can take the shoes off his cannery, to go to sleep, and sit down in slippers at his own fireside."

"But slippers weren't be ugly," said the wife. "Some slippers are more looking."

FAITH AND FORMULA.

By Henry F. Cope.

"He that doeth good is of God." III, John, 11.

One reason that religion means so little to many is that we have for a long time been a continuous thinking of it from the strong end, we have worked ourselves into the habit of thinking of faith as wholly a matter of creed and opinion.

In those days when the reason forced to trust itself, when there were but few many slaves of the few who sought to keep a monopoly of knowledge, men were willing to accept the authoritative statements of the religious specialists that they must not presume to question, accept to those philosophical statements proposed by the leading minds upon which those teachers lived.

Once upon grave the same blind allegiance to the doctrines of religion that we also give to formal overlords; they accept not at all what the quarrel was about, but, being told they must defend the faith or be eternally damned they defended the faith, they pain their lives and counted that they had performed their duties for religion.

But opinion is no more religion than a guide book is a journey. If you had a written account of even so grateful a code as the ten commandments there would be less religion in the world than there is now. Men would slavishly obey by one for another. We seem to think that this year we have made a great leap by getting him to recite phrases of plain opinion.

There are no meals in a cook book. Health is not the same thing as a doctor's bill. The grid engaged in the doctrine of a single stroke. Nourishment, health, wisdom, are all the result of a long series of meals. They come through life. You may define all these in words, you may describe them in books, but they must themselves you can neither put into such forms nor get out of them.

Religion is not the Bible, nor the creed, nor the church. These are tools of religion, its pre-structures and guide books. It takes a good deal more than these to make a man a man, or a nation a nation. It takes something more than believing the Bible to make a man religious.

You can never make a child know that two and two are four by repeating that formula to him; he must somehow, in his experience put this two and that two together. Then addition becomes simple, delightful (because logical), practical. The process difficulty in helping people to the religious life is that we are insisting on putting the formula before the experience.

Let the definitions, the descriptions, the analysis of religion come to ourselves. Let every man express his views in his own way. His need is not more form of expression identical with all others; his need is to find by the actual use of his own faculties, by experience, that the religious way of life is the best, the most satisfactory, the most serviceable.

He will never grow the forms and symbols that others use—not the fact, the great fact, that life has in it high-er values than those of the beast and the burdens bearer, that man is more than dust, that living for the good of all is the secret of finding all the good in life. Stealthy reach out for the best in life and you will find Omnipotent itself through experience.

When men see that they do not need pathological definitions—they need the right life. When this world is wrong, when we feel that we need to unite with the order of righteous, we need the formula, the definition, the creed to give the things that are high and worthy.

We can all grasp religion in the concrete. We all believe in good trees. We have no difficulty in the matter of sacrifice, we all agree on the creed of character. We can all take hold of religion at the world of duty, of high living, of clean chivalrous, of social service, of everyday such thinking and love.

Doing the things that are right, following the light of high ideals, why free and quarrel or even give ourselves special concern over theological definitions, creeds? Take the roots of the right life, enjoy its experience and let the logic of such a life give its own account of our faith.

NATURE IS MAN'S AID.

By Rev. J. Lewis Hartrook.

The plants in their courses fought against Sisera.—Judge v. 20.

Nature is not at odds with man. It is that nature operate which have the power to defeat or to destroy. Law is invariable, nature is constant and man is certain.

Our first conclusion, therefore, and which we may learn by the simple experience of even so grateful a code as the ten commandments there would be less religion in the world than there is now. Men would slavishly obey by one for another. We seem to think that this year we have made a great leap by getting him to recite phrases of plain opinion.

THE HAMMER OF GOD.

The limelight does not make the hero

Wheat is often the best cure for weeds.

No man receives more than he is Heaven.

No man can preach far beyond his real self

It's never who to trust the man who trains no one

The lilies that follow our lusts are usually charged up to our luck.

The most ridiculous coward in the world is the man who fears ridicule.

No religion has much power over us that does not make some great appeal to us.

Some people do not know the difference between worrying God and being anxious in the dark.

When we say we hate flattery we usually mean we believe in it but in the third person.

It's a good deal easier to believe that the angels love many sinners than that they love all the saints.

The trouble often is that we listen to the voice of conscience while yielding to the push of desire.

If you really want to know the world you will do more than investigate its shadows and sample its garbage cans.

When you are able to see your religion in a compartment of your life, life itself comes along and knocks on the door.

90,000 WORKERS KILLED IN YEAR

Government Report Shows Protection of Employes Neglected.

Between 30,000 and 35,000 deaths among workingmen and 2,000,000 injuries in the accident record in the United States for last year, according to a bulletin issued by the bureau of labor of the department of commerce and workshops, it is declared that probably the most exposed ones are the workers in iron and steel. Fatal accidents among electricians and electrical workers and a number of others are declared to be excessive, while railway trainmen are placed in the proportion of 1,846 deaths for 1,000 employes.

The bulletin declares that much could be done for the protection of the workingmen that is neglected, though many are surrounding improvements have been introduced in factory practice in the last decade. It is pointed out that the statistics for compensation and prevention have been clearly demonstrated in the experience of many states.

"Disturbing," the bulletin states, "that in underlying conditions in European countries are often quite different and more favorable than those which prevail may be the result of ignorance, reckless indifference or carelessness, the fact remains that an immense amount of human life is wasted and a vast amount of injury is done to men, in the United States, which, with reasonably physical implacement, which is a very small proportion of the value to the nation as a whole.

"It is insisted that it should not be impossible to save at least one-third and perhaps two-thirds of the human life now sacrificed or factory inspection, legislation and control.

50,000,000 FOREST WASTE.

Senator Smoot Tells of Great Yearly Loss in Nation's Woods.

BEED SMOOT.

The annual waste of forest resources of the country, as told by Senator Reed Smoot to the conservation congress, is $50,000,000.

This includes loss of timber, lives also are lost each year by forest fires, he said.

"We take from the forests each year," he said, "timber sufficient to build ten cubic feet, or two and one-half million feet of lumber, enough to build a city of 25,000 inhabitants.

"Our population is now half in a city, and in 1920 it will be three-fourths. The demand for timber will be much greater than it is now. Our population will double in 50 years, and we will need three times as much lumber as we now use.

"We must plant up the lands, now treeless, which will be more useful to us than our present customs and profit, by State and nation, the preservation of our forests, which are now being cut and not enough is being planted to replace them.

"Our forests are being cut faster than they are being replaced. The demand for timber is greater than the supply. The Chief of Forestry of the United States Bureau of Forestry reported the people study to work. A man in the crowd answered: "It is impossible!" Thereupon the great statesman turned to the woman called out: "Impossible! Impossible! Nothing is impossible in Hooker Hill!" And so let us keep near the cross. The battle of the ages was fought there, and there we must go if we are to be victorious.

"Nothing is impossible on the Hill of the Cross—on Calvary.

THE WEEKLY HISTORIAN

WORK OF CONGRESS

In the Senate considerable time was devoted Wednesday to a discussion of the President's course in placing strictures on Congress in the matter of the Japanese incident, and a secretarial resolution, proposed by Mr. Aldrich and amended upon the suggestion of Mr. Culberson, providing for a thorough investigation by the committee on appropriations of the President's charges, both in respect to the acts and the course which should be taken by Congress to resent the imputation believed to have been cast upon that body, was adopted. Mr. Aldrich, in introducing his resolution, made no comment upon it. Let Senators Bailey, Bacon, Williams, Culberson and others declared that President's words should be resented by the Senate as highly insulting. Senator Fletcher's resolution calling for the transmittal of all the information concerning the work of deportation by the Bonaparte officer also was adopted.

The postal savings bank bill was before the Senate Thursday for over an hour, Senator Burkett of Nebraska making a comprehensive argument in favor of its passage. The Senate listened also to the reading of a message from the President recommending a change in the form of government of the District of Columbia, by which a single executive head would take the place of the three commissioners, as was now jointly act as a governing board. The House met in session and adjourned until Saturday. By unanimous vote the House adopted a resolution requesting the President to transmit to the House the information in his possession relative to the alleged mistreatment of an investigation by the secret service agents. The remainder of the day was consumed in consideration of bills on the private calendar, a large number of which were passed.

The Senate was not in session Friday. Senator Bailey, accompanied by a number of members for their homes for the Christmas holidays, the attendance in the House was far short of a quorum. Nevertheless a good deal of business was transacted. This comprised mostly of the passage of war claim bills, some time being given to considerable discussion.

A brief Senate session was devoted to routine business in accordance with a unanimous agreement before the adjournment Thursday. Several messages on minor legislation were received from the President and bills and other measures were introduced. At 12:50 o'clock the Senate adjourned until Jan. 4, 1909. After passing a bill granting the Southern Pacific Railroad Company a right of way through the Tucson military reservation in California, the Senate on motion of Mr. Perkins of New York, adjourned at 12:14 p. m. till Monday, Jan. 4, 1909.

Lockjaw Sensations Described.

Dr. P. W. Brandson of St. Louis, Mo., in a paper read before the medical disease, lockjaw, which he contracted as the result of a cut on the knee, caused by a fall from a street car, gives an interesting account of the disease, the symptoms from the first indication of lockjaw, the pain in the jaws, when the knee was all healed, he noticed that he had a slight fever and felt the muscles of his neck pained and were constricted. Nonsensical feelings of the disease followed, and he felt that the jaws began slowly to contract. He was able to open his mouth with the physician arrived with the antitoxin serum. In one day about a field same he was able to open his mouth but a little more, and though the jaws continued to lock, a virulent form of lockjaw was avoided. He ends the story

A Poor Card Panic.

The poor card business is seriously depressed. The cotton market is in a great foreign markets are bordering on panic, and commercial men in other lines in the commercial are the same. The public is now in a state of mind consciousness of the serious past earn and the earlier years are not enough to allay the overwhelming prospects of the industry. In order to supply the business with a circulating medium, the country over, an immense industry has been created, and is being the distinct limits. Incidentally the United States imported from Germany in a single year more than $5,000,000 worth of the kind of money, and the demand is most acute at present in Germany, where the commercial men heavily, as large orders were canceled.

VENEZUELANS DEFY THE RULE OF CASTRO

Infuriated Mob in Caracas Destroys Pictures and Statues of the Dictator.

CAPITAL CITY IN A TURMOIL.

Property of President's Henchmen Wrecked and Deposition of Executive Looked For.

PRESIDENT CASTRO.

The Venezuelan capital Tuesday exposed a spectacle—spectacle—the situation against the absent President Castro. It took the form of an anti-Castro demonstration, the following the night. It was the activities of the lurid warnings of the night before. The nightfall. It was necessary to do these partial laws to put an end to the rioting and pillaging. The people rounded up all the statues and pictures of President Castro and tore them to pieces. Some of the public buildings and houses there with relegated to the public dumps. Quoted rifle gardens, and it comes right in. That's a thing I don't like. Before the Czar of Hot's—a Russian colony in Venezuela, there were no domestic animals, there were no domestic animals. There, there have been no demonstrations against the Netherlands. All have been directed against President Castro and Acting President Gomez.

President Castro is the dictator of Venezuela since 1899 and is regarded as the Plague of Europe. He seized the reins of the Venezuelan government in 1899 and deposed President Andrade, who was the president of Trinidad on a gunboat, the only effective fighting ship of the republic. He has ever since has proved one of the most successful dictators in the Western Hemisphere. He has been menaced by revolutions and plots, but has always triumphed. His foreign powers have been on his trail.

Castro's career is unknown. Simple and Indian blood flows in his veins. He was a cattle herder in the '90s before he became Venezuela's dictator and the dollar is the person of Heaven.

Do you ever shop when the price drops, does the price go down? No, it only shuts in our store and quality, stuff at prices lower than we sold them before. Why? Because we do not wish to carry our goods until they go out of style. The goods we are selling at reduced prices are new strictly in style, and you get the exactly all worth it were then. Do not then reductions attract you, when you know they are sure enough reductions?

HOLD TWO JOBS! NO.

Pay Roll Patriot Gets Blow When Chyrtous Decides Gulpin Case.

A smashing blow to the pay roll patriot was administered by Judge Axel Chyrtous of the Appellate Court in Chicago when he handed down a deep-sounding decision holding that no person can draw two salaries from the public treasury simultaneously.

The decision came in the case of Herman B. Meyer against County Clerk Joseph F. Haas, an affair of two years' standing in the court records of Cook County and involving the right of Hunter K. Gardenhire, chief clerk of the Chicago Municipal Court, to sit in the State Senate, representing the Second District. Gulpin's term as Senator is officially running, and for all practical purposes has expired. Judge Clifford refused to issue a writ of mandamus to County Clerk Haas on the petition of Herman B. Meyer, who had sought Gulpin's seat in the Senate. County Clerk Haas in turn had refused to notify Governor Deneen officially that a vacancy existed in the Senate from the Gulpin district following Gulpin's election as chief clerk of the Municipal Court. Judge Chyrtous and the Appellate bench now hold that Judge Clifford was in error and that Gulpin had no right to a seat in the Senate during the last two years.

The point of interest to politicians generally, but most specifically anybodies, is more than, thirty newspaperdom of the incoming Illinois General Assembly, is that the common law is applied "no salaries grab in the law" where one man at the same time from the public treasury, for example, holds a State legislator under the constitution is forbidden to hold any other "lucrative office" under the United States or State government.

It is known within legislative circles and among politicians that a large percentage of the personnel of the Cook County delegation in the Legislature has an influence upon congress with something paid out. There are examples of the same situation with regard to some of the down State members. Attorney General Bonaparte, Illinois Senate, clerk and Sanitary District employes, who are drawing pay now will be called on the official roll-call of the Legislature.

KNOX WILL HEAD THE CABINET.

Senator Accepts Position of Secretary of State Offered by Taft.

Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania has been offered and has accepted the position of Secretary of State in the Taft cabinet. Mr. Knox, who is now in Washington, shall appear to be an inevitable Mr. Knox, it is said, he consented to serve in the Senate, at a sacrifice of his personal inclinations, to remain in the Senate. It is said that his position from the Senate is ready in so far as Senator Knox was appointed Attorney General by President McKinley and remained in that position under Roosevelt until 1903, when upon the death of Matt Quay he became Senator for Pennsylvania.

HELD UP BY FOUR ROBBERS.

Express Car Dynamited, but Messenger Says Highwaymen Got Little.

Chicago Railroad and Navigation train No. 1, known as the Chicago-Cedar Rapids special, held up and the express car dynamited by four unmasked robbers shortly after 9 o'clock on a recent night while after leaving the station at Fort Madison, Ia. Hoff said the robbers secured little of value. The robbers did not molest the passengers, but compelled the express car and ordered the engineer to take it down the track to Fort Madison. About a mile beyond the point where the train was held up the safe in the express car was shattered by nitroglycerine. The train did not stop at Fort Madison, a small local and not a strong box being, the only property in the car available. The robbers compelled Express Messenger Hoff to open the small safe. It contained but three or four small packages, believed to have been of small value. The strong box was not touched. The robber gang

BONAPARTE ASKS FOR MORE LEGAL POWER

Attorney-General Says It Is Needed in Prosecution of Rich Offenders.

CITES THE STANDARD FINE.

That Case, He Thinks, Shows the Necessity of a Change in the Present Statutes.

That the United States should have the right of appeal in the Supreme Court of the United States as a matter of right whenever a conviction is reversed on appeal by the defendant in the Circuit Court of Appeals, is the opinion expressed by Attorney General Bonaparte in his annual report to the Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907. The report, which is dated

C. J. BONAPARTE.

1908, submitted to Congress. In this connection he cites the case of the reversal of the Standard Oil fine of more than $29,000,000, in which an application for a writ of certiorari has been made to the Supreme Court.

He holds that an amendment of the present laws would be appropriate in the case of all criminal proceedings, but suggests that it would be especially in connection with prosecutions where the wealth of the defendant usually renders an appeal on his or his part from any adverse judgment a matter of course.

The Attorney General's opinion is that in such cases there is no question of double jeopardy, as the appeal of the defendant from the original conviction is recognized by the undoubted origin of well-considered judicial authority as a waiver of his rights in this respect and so in the absence of some such provision of law as the Attorney General recommends guilty persons may escape from just punishment under the law as finally determined by the court of last resort.

He declares that the consistent policy of the Department of Justice during the year in enforcing the statutes intended to protect the interests and foreign commerce of the country from evils arising through combinations in restraint of trade and attempts to create monopoly, as well as discriminations and other illegal practices on the part of common carriers engaged in such commerce, has been to investigate carefully all complaints submitted to it, whether by public authorities or by responsible private citizens, and to institute proceedings, whether civil or criminal suits when such investigation has shown the complaints to be serious and well founded and that success might be reasonably expected.

Mr. Bonaparte reports that this policy was attended during the year by a fair measure of success in the proceedings authorized and that as a consequence of violations already obtained or expected upon the statutes dealing with such cases will soon be interpreted so authoritatively that those seeking to comply with the law will be relieved from all uncertainty as to what the law really is. He says that serious obstacles have been encountered in enforcing the statutes and that these may be with advantage finally removed by further legislation.

"The United States has had occasion of late years, and will probably have occasion in future," he declared, "to prosecute criminally many corporations or other artificial persons. As such offenders cannot be physically arrested, it is obviously desirable that a simple and convenient form of process shall be prescribed by law to have the legal effect of an actual arrest and removal to the trial district as in the case of a natural person."

COUPLE MURDERED ... SLEEP.

Assassin Hacks Women of Man and Wife with Hatchet.

Wilcomie Florrell and his wife were murdered by an assassin at their residence, 132 Bird street, Wilkinsburg, Del. Their bodies were found by Alexander Thorrick, brother of the murdered man, and a lodger at the house, who is detained at police headquarters. Alexander told the police that when he went home about 11 o'clock at night he was unable to gain admittance, and again the night with an axe. He went to the house about 9 o'clock in the morning and found the bodies. He said the two children, a girl 2 years old and a 2-months-old baby, were not molested. The baby lay in a crib between the beds occupied by the parents. Both of the victims had been hacked in the face with a hatchet which was found on the man's bed. The assassin is thought to have been committed for revenge. Florrell was 28, and his wife 26 years old. The prisoner is 18.

HOUSE SLAPS AT ROOSEVELT.

Calls on Him to Tell on What He Bases Secret Service Charges.

The House of Representatives Thursday, by unanimous vote, adopted a resolution requesting the President to supply it with any evidence that may be in his possession that will justify the statement in his last annual message to Congress that "the attitude of members of Congress toward appropriations for the secret service of the government.

Mr. Perkins, chairman of the special committee charged to investigate the allegations made in the President's message, and John Sharp Williams of Mississippi both stated on the floor that it was the desire of the special committee to be just toward the President in allowing him to submit any evidence he may have, and both declared that the committee would give it full and impartial consideration. Mr. Perkins said the committee would continue in session during the Christmas holidays so that it might receive such evidence from the President promptly and proceed to action.

Both the resolution and all of the speeches indicated a wide difference in interpreting the meaning of the President's message in relation to the secret service, and Williams suggested that by a vice vote, Mr. Bennett of New York, demanded a division on the pre-amble providing stating the counsel's interpretation of the President's statement upon Congress, but before the division was entered upon endorsed to withdraw the motion. Mr. Williams insisted that this could not be done, and the vote being taken, 270 members voted "aye" and 14 on the part of the president.

TWO DIE IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Machine Goes Into the River at Milwaukee Through Open Draw.

An automobile containing three men dashed into the open draw of the Bremen street bridge in Milwaukee at 5 o'clock the other morning and went to the bottom of the river, carrying two of the occupants to their death. A third was rescued with difficulty and is at the emergency hospital. The dead: Oscar E. Herbien, member board of trade; Albert Kaun, chauffeur. A. F. Sullday of the Sullday Motor Company was rescued. The car approached the bridge from the west at a high rate of speed. The driver apparently did not notice that the bridge was open until the car was within twenty feet of the gap. He made a frantic effort to avoid the river, but only succeeded in turning the car as far as the curb, where it bounded into the air, turning a complete somersault between the dock and the center pier of the bridge, hurling Mr. Herbien and Mr. Sullday thirty feet in the south of where the car hit the water. The crew of the assassin Iron, which was passing through the draw, saw the tragedy and immediately lowered boats. Kaun was found under the automobile at the bottom of the river.

CLAIMS TO BE HAY'S WIDOW.

Woman Says She Married Son of Late Secretary of State.

That Adelbert Hay, son of the late secretary of State, John Hay, was a husband and father at the time of his death from a fall from a second story bedroom window was declared by the mother of Mrs. Mary Hyland Hay—who claims to be young Hay's widow—her daughter had applied for a marriage license to marry Dr. Arthur Kraus, a wealthy manufacturing chemist of Philadelphia.

Adelbert Hay, she said, died from Washington in August, 1906, to Atlanta City, with her daughter, and they were married by the Rev. William Taylor Snyder of Washington. For seven years she said, both she and her daughter have tried unsuccessfully to compel the Hay family to admit the marriage or at least recognize young Adelbert Hay Jr. the grandson of the late secretary of state.

Gladstone were thrown in their way and their marriage was kept a secret. Mrs. Hay, Sr. Snyder of withholding the facts. Her daughter has a record of the marriage, she says, but no certificate.

Holiday trade shows further evidence and now it is generally believed that this character equal to or slightly in excess of last year's. In some sections, authorities in the trade report, trade is not as good as in 1907. The larger centers are doing well and armies of shoppers are in evidence, but many small cities report a relatively light trade. Collections are reported to be slower than.

In regular retail lines unseasonably warm weather has been a drawback, particularly Southwest and South. Wholesale trade is quiet, except for some heavy orders to cover the usual demand.

Inventories and stock takings naturally produce a loss activity from now till after the first. Reports from leading industries are of gradual gain and slow progress but in better tone.

There are some orders for steel rails from railroads and the tin plate mills are kept busy. Iron is better supply of the market. Lumber and paper mills are running more fully. Electric power manufacturers report three months' orders ahead, and there is more demand for lighting apparatus. Orders are for railroad buying, with firmer prices for yellow pine.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending Dec. 12 number 194, as against 189 last week, 184 in the week of 1907, 227 in 1906, 225 in 1905 and 204 in 1904. Business failures in Canada for the week number 31, against 30 last week and 40 in the week of 1907.—Bradstreet's Commercial Report.

CHICAGO.

The general state of trade tendies to overcrowd conditions. Holiday demands in the retail trade are reported to be not equal to last year's. Half delay does not detract from the outlook, as the requirements are known to be present at the opening. Trading defaults again are large, but the volume of payments through the banks shows a gratifying exhibit. Retail activity in Christmas and general merchandise would be of simpler proportions if it were not for the more seasonable. Early buying, however, has been unusually strong and the prospects brighten for a satisfactory aggregate. Interest is now centered in the wholesale dry goods department, and this has induced frequent travelers. Wholesale lines have a rather light home trade, as expected at this time, and attention is now given to inventories. Mail orders for spring and summer wares show increase.

Failures reported in the Chicago district number 41, against 40 last week, 28 in 1907, and 28 in 1906. These with liabilities of more than $5,000 number 30, against 29 last week, 19 in 1907, and 3 in 1906.—Dun's Review of Trade.

The Chicago Association of Commissioners of Agriculture has added its voice to the protest against the bills to secure uniform laws governing stock foods.

Twenty-five of the principal theaters here down Chicago and San Francisco have signed a pledge not to buy or sell any goods controlled by trade & Kleinzer.

The city council of Marshalltown, Iowa, has taken up the fuel famine and authorized the mayor to issue a proclamation requiring the city to pay $1 per ton for coal, and the council adopted an ordinance reducing the price of gas to $1 per thousand feet.

The Lowrides, a new union men Brooklyn, N. Y., have decided to open cafes having been sold out. The amount of money proposed in this state, are reported to be in owners in the State tax commission, is 2,924,902 tons.

Memories of the War

General Grant's Log Cabin.

It was at White Haven, a farm of a thousand acres of fully fed and tended land owned by Frederick Dent, that General, then Lieutenant, Grant married Miss Julia Dent, the oldest daughter of the house and was her lover. As the Dent family grew up Mr. Dent allotted to each member in turn a tract of land from the original homestead and from two to three slaves, as if they desired, each one had his or her own home to go to upon marriage, and house warming to do the work. It is of one of these houses that Mrs. Elma Dent Casey—the last of the Dents of White Haven—writes in the Associated Sunday Magazine. In the house that she may be able to dispel the awesome idea that the farthest log cabin of the Grant family was the mean, poor, unlikeliest affair that the public mind of today believes it to have been.

Of course many saw this cabin at the World's Fair, writes Mrs Casey, and to my assertion many will say "Bosh; real Hoosier log cabin." I can only say I will assert that it was unscoped for many years to be a home, nor is it homelike; it is an empty shell, a body without a soul, a dead thing and unlovely.

When Ulysses Grant resigned from the army, old Mr. Grant, his father, gave him a farm adjoining that of his brother and furnished a log house of five rooms on eighty acres of land which my father gave Mrs. Grant as a bridal present.

This house was built after a plan received by Mrs. Grant, and was fashioned and furnished with an eye to her comfort, and to the end that it was both homelike and refined.

Through the center of the house ran a hall, on either side of which were the sitting-room, and dining-room. Above these were three bedrooms, two of good size, and a small front room over a parlor. The kitchen, with the "boys" and servants' quarters were in cabins to the rear.

Long before Sister Julia's marriage to Captain Grant father gave her three slaves, who remained, of course, at White Haven while she was there. Later, when Julia and Mrs. Grant were stationed at different army posts the slaves were sent to her home in the free States, these slaves were left behind, Julia's pet, Dinah, with three three servants, two white horses, a wagon, a cow, and the farm. During the eighty acres of land mentioned, the Grants began civilizing life in Missouri. I do not doubt that there are several elderly men yet living in St. Louis, or on the Grants in the neighborhood where we lived was called, that remember the willing boy Julia Dent, "the belle of the rebelling party." for it was my sister's wish that inasmuch as her beau was to be "of the army" of a peculiar kind, it must and should be built in the old-fashioned way, and so it was by friendly hands. So after several busy days for colored Kitty and Mary in the kitchen, and of the men folks in the barn, and fetching and carrying, the house had been felled, the logs duly hewed, the chinks made ready and plastered to the proper size, the neighbors from the Grovers were invited to an "old fashioned" house warming, and the "house warming" was given.

Mrs. Fish has decided that under the law the entire electoral vote of Missouri should be cast for William H. Taft. The decision was made in Jefferson City.

At St. Louis prominent Populists, who had been led into the Democratic ranks by Bryan, have issued a call for a conference to plan united action against the Democrats. Reports from leading industries are of gradual gain and slow progress but in better tone.

There are some orders for steel rails from railroads and the tin plate mills are kept busy. Iron is better supply of the market. Lumber and paper mills are running more fully. Electric power manufacturers report three months' orders ahead, and there is more demand for lighting apparatus. Orders are for railroad buying, with firmer prices for yellow pine.

Political Comment.

Where is the Democrat's Money?

The Democratic party is "broke" if we, how may it be real-lized? Those opposition coalitions to be discussed.

There is an optimistic article on this subject in the issue of Frank Leslie's Weekly. Mr. Bryan, editor of the title "The Future of Democracy," gives his idea of what the party has in reserve. Wind, but it seems to us, is the reality that the organization has always displayed. Since the war it has met defeat after defeat. It has nominated a president only twice. And yet after every reverse it has come more numbered, hopeful, optimistic. At every national election it comes forward and claims land. Not only in its vitality remarkable, but its real principles are eminently recognized. It is a low tariff party; a strict constitutional party, a states rights party, a party opposed to the assumption of the executive power. The earth issues of the last few years have destroyed these fundamental principles. What, then, does the Democratic party need to win? To us it seems that the answer is reasonably clear. Some day circumstances will push one of these principles forward, and there is all probability without the party's aid, and then Democracy's great chance will come.

Stating the issues of the moment has been the bane of the party. Some of them has united it. But it is not unlikely that one of the great issues will come would accomplish this, as in the days of Cleveland and Tilden. Inspiring issues of the past have come and come to stay. Some of them have been so well defined, so dramatic, so, in the case of the Civil war, so vital that the vitality which has enabled it to survive frequent defeats ever since. Issues of the future, the Democrat's allies will spring eternal in the human breast, and the party will be the offensive force. We may well ask ourselves what a party which displayed such amazing vitality in the face of sure defeat last November would be capable of if confronted by a great issue and with the inspiration of great issues.

This, we hold, is not exactly Mr. West's view of what Democracy should do. He holds that it must begin in the confidence of the people—that it must "nominate someone whose name and record will be a guarantee of success to the business interests of the nation." And he adds that "it is the business of wisdom to predict that no one who lacks this assurance will be elected."

We do not, we hold, set the entire truth. Few will deny that Democracy today has an unequal share of good material—that of late it has usually found public opinion a living force and has made public opinion a living force and has made public opinion a living force and has made

MINERS LIVE LONG

OCCUPATION SEEMS TO MAKE FOR LONGEVITY.

Consumption Declared to Be Practically Unknown Among Men Who Delve in the Earth—Tales Told by Veterans.

H. S. Thomas, coal mine inspector for Vermont, has a lively belief that miners live long and, taking them together, are more hale and hearty than men of any other occupation," said Mr. Thomas, in connection with the disease he went into the city and even with the peculiar properties of coal dust as a preventive of lung troubles. Miners are well and strong men of the work under the ground.

"I find a number of hardy miners here who were taken from the mines in this country (Vermont) at an age and enter years to act as inspectors. Those examples I find in the work until they were prepared to be miners' assistants and then miners, and thirteen years under conditions which in my opinion would shorten their lives by a good round dozen. Including work at quarries.

"Some of Providence had given us the miner as a recompense for the hardships of his calling. Nearly men who manage to dodge falls of rock, explosions and fire and escape death in the early five to twenty-five years. They not only live long, but they live well.

"I am not surprised, Dr. Osler if he should tell you that men who have spent 40 years underground in the mines at Bethlehem, Northampton county, Pa., died at the age of 81, worked up to more than the age of seventy and yet from the age of 35, worked up to more than the age of seventy and yet from the age of 35, worked up to more than the age of seventy and yet from the age of 35

CHAPTER XII.

Captain Smith's friends, Major Jones, who had been visiting upon Lundell and Hayward, who had been starting upon Lundell and agitation from her left hand, pointed to his feet, ran to Captain Haywood, and tackle the prisoner. The man was dazed by one of the crimson he carried her into the nearest room of the ship, leaving with Haywood the prisoner, who has now down on a transom, for he was not yet entirely able to command himself.

Captain Smith's life had been spared in a miraculous manner. Hanging over the rail of the Elton at the head of his men, it should have been impossible for him to have escaped. Haywood's good and sent a bullet across his right temple, making a nasty looking cut and knocking him senseless, but doing no permanent harm. As he fell, one of the soldiers on the Elton fired on the man who had inflicted the blow. The blow had been a glancing one whereas his shot would have been instantaneous. Its effect, however, was to increase his stupor. He was first taken down into one of Lloyd and from shock, first the physical pain he felt was as nothing to the anguish in his soul at the thought that the woman he loved and had trusted and betrayed was gone.

The sense of failure, the consciousness of defeat, the pain of wounds, the loss of his son—everything—was swept away in the bitterness of betrayed trust. With the shattering of his faith in Ellen went his confidence in humanity, for in his she had stood for all that was noble and true. If she were false, there was no hope for anything or virtue extant. That was the agonizing thought of the moment. Presently the pain would come, other thoughts. The brave man who had been shot down upon his leadership, the total failure of his enterprise, the rule of his present prospects. He had tried to do something and had failed. He had loved and had lost. He had trusted and had been betrayed. The situation was unbearable.

Hence he had to could never explain it to the satisfaction of his associates. He realized that his professional future was ruined. Problems he would be confronted. He could not think how she had reached there with the news, but it was evident that she had. His thoughts were broken in upon by Haywood.

"There was something between the prisoner and the woman Haywood said, "if that the Confederate Major was not convinced. During his mad gallop from the month of the Elton to the wharf he had raked his brains to solve the problem of Ellen's silence. He was sure the Greyhound had been captured. If so there must be a Federal officer on board. He had reasoned having heard that the Federal officer had come to Cuba with her some years since. As he had made no progress in his own mind, he had simply jumped to the conclusion that the reason for his non-appearance was for some reason, perhaps, a lover and anxiety of her face, her cry when she saw Captain Smith was a prisoner, and wounded, had, in the excitement of her, and her recognition of the dashing man, it all so clear to me.

Having attended to some necessary duties and given some required orders, Captain Haywood returned to the cabin to the prisoner. Smith still remained on the transom. The shot had been minimized, but he had been long, first of all, in the house cabin with Ellen. Therefore he superficially examined the prisoner and had pronounced his wounds not serious. Burning at his headache, Smith would soon be all right.

"Are you able, sir," asked Captain Haywood courteously, in spite of his jealous rage, "to answer my questions now, or would you prefer to be interrogated to-morrow?"

"Now," answered Captain Smith, whose head had been bound up and who had been strengthened by a liberal glass of whisky and water.

"What is your name, sir?"

"Smith."

"Is that your real name, or do you slavish desire to conceal your identity?"

"That is my name, sir. All that I have."

"Do you mean to say, sir, that you are a Federal navy?"

"I am an Lieutenant Smith, of the St. Lawrence, Commodore Paulding."

"Are you Lieutenant Smith?"

"I am."

"A bend of you at the Academy, I was let the class of '95. I'm glad to meet you, Captain Smith."

"But you haven't told me your name."

"Haywood."

"I am glad to meet you, Captain Haywood, although the circumstances are not what I would wish."

"I fear, sir, that they are much more serious than you imagine."

"If so, you know the reasons they were you would not stay."

"What do you mean?"

"Nothing. Proceed with your examination, I beg."

"Captain Smith," began Captain Haywood impressively, "I take it you are prepared the disposal of Cerancho in Cuba."

"Your judgment does you credit, sir."

"And that you came to here for the purpose of cutting out the Elton."

"That also is obvious. I should say," said Smith, striving to appear cool and indifferent in spite of his splitting head.

"I should like to know what there is between you and Miss Jones?" asked Haywood suddenly, thinking, perhaps, to take the other off his guard.

"There is nothing between us now," answered Smith frankly.

"But what was there between you?"

"That is a matter, sir, which cannot possibly explain my presence here I shall be glad to give, consistent with honor, the reasons for my presence. They volunteered their services. We fitted the decks of the Elton with them and when the "Yankees" came we were ready for them. If it hadn't been for that, this ship would have been lost. You know our perils, yet you recommend."

"The Major spoke coldly, but he was furiously angry. He only was not angry, he was bitterly grieved as well at the apparent defection of his daughter.

"I promised him, father," she began.

"Hush! What's a promise to an enemy? Hello, he must have had the chart of which you had a piece."

"I had to give it up, sir."

"Make no explanations; I do not care to listen to them after that confession. I never was so wounded in all my life. And by your own daughter! The loss of the Greyhound's cargo is a fearful thing for me to contain. The loss of the Elton would have brought me to beggary, forced me into the navy again, by gad, at my time of life. Fortunately, this plan miscarried. I hold that no loss was all due to you. I shall provide for you in some way, but I never wish to see you again. I have no longer any use for you."

"But I love him, father; I have been honorable."

"That will do. I shall have none of the men over you to the bottom. Mr. Haywood is so disgusted with your treachery that I am too happy to arrange a marriage between you, but that's all over now. You have chosen to interfere in my affairs I shall see that you have no opportunity to do so hereafter. My power? I shall dispose of chevaliers. I shall give you barely enough for your support."

"And I say that, father! Do not treat me in this way. Let me explain."

"There has been enough explanation," cried the old man hastily and bitterly; "I do not care to hear more, or you could have gone to his were he not to hang as my son-in-law."

"Very well, sir," said the girl, composedly, but very pale and trying to keep back the tears called forth by her indignant and unjustly bitter father, "I have condemned me without a hearing. I have been a transgressor from my unfortunate position which are not warranted by the facts. You have turned me away from me. You have put me out of your affections. I will go. I can make my own way. I do not wish your money."

She was as proud, as high spirited, as her father himself. She turned haughtily and left him. Although she felt very grieved, she was convinced that she would carry out what was before her without assistance. She went out the deck of the ship, crossed it, descended the gangplank to the wharf, and carried up the hill, at the top of which stood her father's house. As she reached it, her uncle, Captain Haywood, stepped out street to speak to her. She replied that she was shaken.

Where Timber Is Scarce There Is a Steady Demand for Blocks.

There is a large area of territory in the West and Southwest where timber is scarce and the remuneration from timber manufactures makes the cost of this building material too expensive, says the San Antonio Express. In many of these localities where the march of development has made itself manifest during the last few years, other building material, such as brick and stone, are not easily obtainable. The use of concrete for building purposes in these places has found ready favor. It has been an easier thing to demonstrate the adaptability of concrete in building construction in the region where other building materials are scarce and high in cost than in the parts of the country where concrete of a more or less active nature prevails with brick or stone the materials that have long been in use.

The greater part of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona there is unfuttered. In the region extending over from San Antonio to El Paso, a distance of 500 miles, all building materials must be shipped in from long distances. It is a fact that is showing a wonderful awakening. Now settlers are pouring into it by the hundreds. Vast tracts of ranch lands have been divided into small farming tracts, and new towns are springing up almost as if by magic. The older towns along the lines of railroad that span the vast region are feeling the touch of the hand of progress, and on all sides we can see the beginnings of a period of substantial character.

Concrete is an important factor in the new era of opulence of the great Southwest. The people of this region are just beginning to learn and appreciate the full worth and advantages of this building material. The climatic conditions over all the Southwest are favorable for concrete block manufacture and construction. The dry atmosphere acts well upon the material. The blocks are kept over for about two weeks and then allowed to dry.

Some difficulties are experienced in getting good cement. Mexican labor is largely used and the men have to be trained in the work. It is found that this class of labor cannot always be depended upon. It is hard to keep them at work. When they get a few dollars ahead they persist in taking a lay-off until they have spent their accumulated earnings.

The industry is having a rapid growth, however, notwithstanding the disadvantages under which it is carried on. The possibilities of concrete construction in the Southwest are almost unlimited. The material is rapidly coming into demand upon the results for use in building residences, barns and outhouses generally. The development of the agricultural resources of the semi-arid region by means of irrigation also opens the way for the extensive use of concrete in the building of ditches, canals and dams.

Baby Was.

"Yes, Bobby," remarked Mr. Harker, as the supper table, "to be good butter must be yellow."

"Not all butter, pa," spoke up Bobby. "Will if water a dime you can't make a butter that is good unless it is yellow."

"Yes, I was, pa."

"Name it."

"Why, apple butter."

Something Soulful.

"You are going to sing something soulful," declared the fiancee. "I see it in your lovely eyes."

"Yes, I was going to say in this," responded the fiancee. "Won't you wear a rubber band around your head right now? I want to try it on the stand at the feeding village."

LEVI SHEA. Charlevoix.

After Wanner, Osborn.

There is nothing more certain in the realm of politics than that Chase S. Osborn, of Sault Ste. Marie, will be the next republican nominee for governor of Michigan.

It is the only logical conclusion that can be drawn from existing conditions and the promptings of ordinary political wisdom with reference to the future.

Mr. Osborn has never yet been even a receptive candidate for the governorship, but for six years or more a host of friends in the lower peninsula have joined those above the straits in urging him to permit his name to be used. Mr. Osborn has persistently refused.

He will be a candidate for the nomination in 1910.

There are several conditions, both political and geographical, that make Mr. Osborn the most available candidate in the field. There is much republican unrest in the upper peninsula growing out of the evident party assumption that the lower peninsula must forever furnish the governor. They feel that they are entitled to a more substantial recognition than has been accorded them in the past.

We are firm in the belief that Chase S. Osborne possesses more of the requisite qualities for the office than has been exhibited by any governor of Michigan for the past twenty five years. Strong, dignified, yet always courteous, honest, fearless and able, he would be an ideal executive.

The writer of this is proud to be numbered with the original Osborn men. Since the days of Elias the SENTINEL has been a strenuous advocate of Osborn, subject to the limitations of his own desires. We predict his nomination and election in 1910.

Wm. B. Vaughan of Rapid River township, bagged 19 mink the past fall, and as the furs worth $750 each his traps kept him well.

The W. H. White Company at their annual meeting recently elected officers and voted to rebuild their mill recently destroyed by fire, construction and equipment to represent a cost of $500,000.

The local option situation is becoming alarmous to Wexford county and the violators are being punished severely. A Manton man refused to tell where he got the booze he became drunk on and was sent to jail for five days.

Boyne Journal: A most dastardly outrage was committed upon the township of Day on Christmas night. The barn of a man named Stoody was entered and a horse owned by him terribly mutilated. A coat, 14 inches long, was made in the animal's hip by some weapon which tore the flesh out in strips. Some state were also made in the shoulder. Under Sheriff Heaton was soon on the spot and made endeavors to get a clue but so far nothing definite has been learned of the crime.

The Boyne City Lumber Co. declared a 15 percent dividend payable January 1. They have cut seventeen million feet of timber the past year.

The dry goods, millinery and shoe stock of J. F. Hower & Co. on Main street adjoining the post-office at Central Lake was practically destroyed by fire one night last week.

Some boys at Walloon Lake in Charlevoix county saw a deer on the ice. The temptation was too much for them and one of them succeeded in killing it, for which he was fined $25.

George S. Crakes, who recently purchased the Wm. Gaskell farm, near Mancelona, died Monday, Dec. 28th, aged 62 years, 3 months and 25 days. Interment was at Elmira Wednesday. Mr. Crakes was for several years supervisor from an eastern township of Charlevoix county.

Scared by the prospects of local option being introduced into the county Cheboygan saloonists have asked the council to pass an ordinance compelling them to close at 10 o'clock on every night except Saturday, when they wish to remain open until 11. They also want the ordinance to provide for Sunday closing. They declare that if such an ordinance is passed they will see that it is obeyed to the letter.

The West Mich. Power Co. was organized recently at Cadillac. Purpose to furnish electric power and light to villages of the counties of Wexford, Grand Traverse, Manistee, Mason, Oceana, Mecosta, Montcalm, Kent, Ionia, Berry, Allegan, Kalamazoo, Van Buren and Calhoun. Capitalization $10,000, to be increased later. Dam to develop 10,000 horse power to be located at Highbridge, Manistee county on Manistee river.

Cadillac News: The state of the potato market is the worst riddle that the commission men have had to solve this year or in several years. The market has been steady in Cadillac for more than a month at 50 to 55c a bushel. It has been just as steady in Grand Rapids at 70 cents. At Greenville, a Michigan potato center the quotations are 55 to 57 cents. The concensus of opinion seems to be that the growers are holding for higher prices, and that they will get caught in the spring with too large a stock on their hands.

Traverse City Record: Falling on his pelts to keep it from going overboard and struggling on the slippery deck of a 26 foot tunnel, W. J. Scherum was almost thrown overboard by a monster Mackinaw trout near Leeland late yesterday afternoon and only the timely blow of a sledge hammer, in the hands of a companion, prevented a catastrophe, as Mr. Scherum was determined not to lose the fish. It was gaffed and killed with a hammer after it had been a little 14 feet long in the net. It was four feet long and weighed 29 pounds when dressed.

Concerning potatoes the Traverse City Eagle says: The buyers are having a very busy time of it—talking. It's their only means of keeping from being lonesome. Work is not fatiguing any of them but "cheap big talk" is liable to. They are ready at all times to talk on any subject, but potato prices are of more interest to them than any thing else. Are potatoes going up or are they going down? is the question they are most asked answered. They would be willing to pay a good price for this information if it was reliable. We like way they say: "The equity met Tuesday and said the price has got to go up. Wednesday the buyers and shippers met and they said that it has got to go down. There you have the opinion of two different bunches of men, both intelligent and yet they do not agree." Some wise and reliable oracle please step forth.

FIRE IN NEW YORK THEATER.

Herald Square Playhouse Burns Shortly After Audience Leaves.

Just after the curtain went down on the last act of "The Three Twins," at the Herald Square Theater in New York Tuesday night smoke began pouring from the wall back of the first balcony. There was a cry of fire and a confused rush for the exit doors by about 200 men and women left in the house, who were standing in front of their seats arranging wraps and coats. They all got out safely, yet not a single one was, for about three minutes after the alarm Smoke burst through the wall back of the balcony and swept across the balcony seats. In ten minutes more the whole rear part of the theater, from orchestra to gallery, was ablaze.

At about the time the fire was about under control, but the theater was practically gutted. At the outbreak of the fire not a single one of the audience had left the house. Some of them fled to Broadway and to 26th street in their costumes and ran into adjoining buildings. Bessie Melvy, the star, fainted on the stage when she saw the flames break through the balcony wall. Some of the other dancers carried her off.

Had the fire burst through into the balcony ten minutes sooner or even five minutes, there might have been terrible loss of life. But most of the audience of 1,000 or so of men and women were out of the theater or in the lobby leading to Broadway when the cry of "fire" arose.

Lee Shubert, one of the lessees of the Herald Square Theater, said that the damage was about $30,000 to the building and $10,000 to the interior. The properties and scenery of "The Three Twins" were not injured.

MISSOURI OUSTS OIL TRUST.

Standard of Indiana, Republic and Waters-Pierce Fined $50,000 Each.

Declaring that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Republic Oil Company of Ohio and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri had conspired and combined to monopolize the oil business in the State, the supreme Court of Missouri has issued a decree ousting all three from the commonwealth and fining them $50,000 each.

The decree against the Waters-Pierce company is suspended by the proviso that it may continue in business if by Jan. 15, 1909, it can show to the court that it has taken steps to operate as an independent concern and has satisfied the court that the other two companies are gone until March 1, 1909, to wind up their affairs in the State.

The decision, which was unanimous, was read in Judge Woodson's absence and was written by Judge Woodson, in sweeping that Attorney General Hadley had proved the charge that the defendants had conspired and combined in Missouri and the former courts had, in conjunction with the decision of the Supreme Court of the United states in the tobacco trust case, it will affect similar suits in other States.

FREES CONVICTED PARRICIDE.

Kansas Governor Pardons John Collins, Witness Having Recanted.

Gov. Hoch of Kansas pardoned John Collins, now serving a life sentence for killing his father, J. S. Collins, a well-to-do coal miner and farmer near Scott, in Mrs. 1908. Young Collins was a student at Kansas university at the time of his father's death. He was convicted upon the testimony of three witnesses, all of it being circumstantial. The State set up the plea that Collins was in love with Miss Frances Dilcock, a wealthy young woman of Lawrence, and that the killing of the father had in night gain the big life insurance which the murder of his father. The girl witnesses has since written a letter recanting the testimony at the trial and saying she was the guilty one. In ten minutes more the whole rear part of the theater, from orchestra to gallery, was ablaze.

At about the time the fire was about under control, but the theater was practically gutted. At the outbreak of the fire not a single one of the audience had left the house. GROSS EARNINGS TAX IS LEGAL.

Minnesota Wins Cases Against Great Northern and the Maple Leaf.

The State of Minnesota won a double victory in the Supreme Court in St. Paul when that court, by Justice L. Brown, upheld the validity of the Minnesota gross earnings tax of 1907 and the Great Northern railroad tax cases. The court upholds the validity of the law increasing the railroad gross earnings tax from 2 to 4 per cent, which the roads attacked as confiscatory and discriminatory. The lower courts generally found the roads' contention that they could not be made to pay a gross earnings tax lower than the 2 per cent fixed in their charters, or their territorial charters. The Great Northern case involved taxes from $48,737.38 for 1905 taxes. The Great Western case involved taxes from $1,000 in amount at stake, however, it really was $43,000 a year to the State from the day of the decision is sustained by the United States Supreme Court, to which it will undoubtedly be appealed.

CHICAGO

"The dominant features in business circles testify to sustained recovery in both activity and confidence. Statistics to some extent include figures for one day less than a year ago, but the comparison of average is gratifying. Documents through the banks show that receipts high, and credit demands are decreased. The returns exhibit unprecedented local sales of holiday goods, increased dealings in foodstuffs and further gain in manufacturing. Collections generally afford much encouragement. Important factors are the starting of the steel plant at Gary and enlargement at various points, all assuring employment for large forces of men and machinery. New demands for pig iron, rails, sightings and structural materials come forward with less hesitancy. Heavy machinery and hardware lines report business which promise much well. Structural materials reflect heavy business in the near future. Lumber yard stocks are less extensive for the shelter than formerly, and the prices for superior values for grades in lead demand. Wholesale merchandise distributions show a decided increase in the close of the year. Mail orders, however, for spring and summer were more in demand. Country settlements remain generally still upon high prices for the staples of cotton and wool, and are by healthy. The total movement of grain at Chicago, 12 days, 1908, represents with 8,760,000 bushels last week and 5,848,266 bushels a year ago. Receipts of flour show a decrease in receipts of 103 per cent and increase in shipments of 17 per cent. Flour receipts were 190,082 barrels, against 174,801 barrels last year and 200,852 barrels a year ago. Live stock receipts, 343,324 head, compared with 303,798 head last week and 296,380 head in 1907. Receipts of hides were 20,000 pounds, against 2,981,000 pounds last week and 2,042,100 pounds in 1907. Lumber receipts were 34,993,000 feet, against 33,213,000 feet last week and 27,714,000 a year ago. Wool receipts, 490,122 pounds, compared with 288,527 last week and only 32,000 pounds in 1907. Compared with Monday a week ago, cash prices advanced in flour and logs, but lower in chicken cattle, 25 cents per hundredweight, and higher in corn and oats, each 1/8 cent a bushel, wheat 1/8 cents, 12½ cents a barrel, sheep 15 cents per hundredweight, pork, 20 cents a barrel, and lard, 42½ cents a tierce. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 22, against 18 last week, 22 in 1907 and 17 in 1906. Thus with liabilities over $5,000 number 6, against 12 last week, 7 in 1907 and 1 in 1906.—Dun's Review.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

Northwestern timber magnates have failed to complete the combine began in Minneapolis a year ago. The combine meeting was held at Duluth, but none of the big lumbermen were there to consummate the consolidation.

The C. L. Smith Timber Company, with headquarters in Minneapolis, will apply for a receiver. The company has a capital of half a million dollars of timber land. This action results from a suit for $10,000 said to be taken up by lumber men throughout the country.

The property of the Northwestern Co-operative Coal and Tool Company was sold at auction in Minneapolis to John Aldrich, Wm. Ho the Northern Hardge Coal Company, for $1,000 cash. The total of the dwelling plants. The company was started in the fall of 1906 with an authorized capital of $100,000 and has now lost year, the Canadian supply was 2,500,000 bushels more than a year ago.

This statement indicates the great importance of keeping the American market for the American farmer and of building up the home market, so that any loss of foreign demand on account of Canada's prosperity would may be more than offset by the American consumer.

One of the great principles of the Republican party, as every farmer knows, is to build up the home market and protect the American farmer and wage earner. The memorable agency from good above proves what a beneficiary tariff revision would mean for the American farmer in getting back at the mercy of Canada and Argentina. Republican revision in 1909 will be safeguard the American wage earner from injurious foreign competition.—Leuterite Herald.

Capital Speculation.

Another authority for giving the President a rebuke is due to be heard from. It is the Chicago Tribune, partly discussed at Washington. Times.

Somebody is almost sure to complain that the country is in a degree still more terrible by daring the secret service people to tell all they know.—Washington Star.

Getting into a controversy with the President is still another hazardous occupation.—Detroit Free Press.

Congress is very likely to happen when Congress attempts to carry out its relentless yoke of simplicity. President Roosevelt on the wrist.—Kansas City Star.

An Annual Gift.

Although the Mr. Carter know that the earlier decorum of his new church was a trifle prim and formal, he was not entirely prepared for some of the evidences of liberality and generosity that followed. "I don't know as I ever your sermon—sing with the Harlesville quartet," he said to the pastor the year, said the deacon, shaking his head at Mr. Carter's suggestion of a second sermon.

"I thought you all enjoyed it immensely," said the pastor, with surprise. "I had understood so."

"Why, we do, pshaw," said the deacon with look on the look on familiar in his frosty and friendly. "The point is that we pay five dollars and twenty-five rents more a Sunday for our pulpit than they do over at Harlesville, so when you go over there it's just the same as making the Harlesville church a present of that sum, and what I'm saying is that once a season is enough for us to continue to distinguish."

Talking in Large Figures.

In recent years the figures have been in billion-dollar country. While a few days ago figures have been held at Washington that necessarily discussed questions on this score for the conservation of natural resources, and the development of Southern resources and industry. These are matters topic. The production of the American people and the possibilities of their great hands, which, for the most part, by in the opening stage of its million. The spirit of the people in taking hold of vast improvements could have no better example than that of Panama, where this country is putting a quarter of a billion into a short cut for the ships of the world, with a saving of thousands of miles of travel to all nations concerned in ocean traffic, and this embraces practically the entire commerce of the earth. Americans are "getting their hands in" at Panama. With such a start, and equipped by experience, internal improvements on a suitable general plan are sure to follow.

A notable beginning has been made in the Mississippi valley, where in the one east, has completed a strip of silly canal. At the recent election the voters of Illinois approved the issue of $20,000,000 State bonds to extend the canal system in the head of navigation on the Illinois River. Thus the first 100 miles of the lakes-to-gulf channel for ships will be constructed by the State of Illinois and its chief city, with the money of the people of Illinois. Lumber yard stocks are less extensive for the shelter than formerly, and the prices for superior values for grades in lead demand. Wholesale merchandise distributions show a decided increase in the close of the year. Mail orders, however, for spring and summer were more in demand. Country settlements remain generally still upon high prices for the staples of cotton and wool, and are by healthy. The total movement of grain at Chicago, 12 days, 1908, represents with 8,760,000 bushels last week and 5,848,266 bushels a year ago. Receipts of flour show a decrease in receipts of 103 per cent and increase in shipments of 17 per cent. Flour receipts were 190,082 barrels, against 174,801 barrels last year and 200,852 barrels a year ago. Live stock receipts, 343,324 head, compared with 303,798 head last week and 296,380 head in 1907. Receipts of hides were 20,000 pounds, against 2,981,000 pounds last week and 2,042,100 pounds in 1907. Lumber receipts were 34,993,000 feet, against 33,213,000 feet last week and 27,714,000 a year ago. Wool receipts, 490,122 pounds, compared with 288,527 last week and only 32,000 pounds in 1907. Compared with Monday a week ago, cash prices advanced in flour and logs, but lower in chicken cattle, 25 cents per hundredweight, and higher in corn and oats, each 1/8 cent a bushel, wheat 1/8 cents, 12½ cents a barrel, sheep 15 cents per hundredweight, pork, 20 cents a barrel, and lard, 42½ cents a tierce. Failures reported in the Chicago district number 22, against 18 last week, 22 in 1907 and 17 in 1906. Thus with liabilities over $5,000 number 6, against 12 last week, 7 in 1907 and 1 in 1906.—Dun's Review.

HOLDS TEACHER MAY USE ROD.

Kentucky Attorney General Finds Legal Right for Punishment.

The controversy relating to the legal right of the school teacher of the common schools of Kentucky to whip a disorderly pupil was ended when Attorney General Hurt, Attorney General Hurt, in a opinion to State Superintendent of Public Instruction Grace, holding that the teacher is given the authority to whip the pupil in the interest of discipline. If it is necessary. The opinion of Judge William Cantrill of Newcastle, that the teacher had no right to whip the pupil, is thus overruled by the opinion which made it necessary to elect some other.

DURING THE HUNTING SEASON.

REVISING THE VULGATE

The Vulgate, the Latin version of the Bible, published by the Council of Trent in April, 1546, to be the authentic version for the Roman Catholic Church, is now, three hundred years after the death of Jerome, whose life work it was, to be revised. The revision is being carried out by a committee of twelve, which has been given to the order of the benedictines, who find that they need funds for carry on the work. The pope has, accordingly, given the order of the Benedictines, Gasquet, abbot president of the English Benedictines, permission to accept a donation for this purpose. The donor will be rewarded by having his name placed on the front page of the new version, on honor that will carry his name down into the coming centuries as one of the benefactors of the world. The Vulgate is itself 1,500 years old, Jerome's translation having been completed early in the fifth century, and some of the writings of the Old Testament go back fourteen centuries B. C., so it is safe to assume that the new version will be a most most enduring than one of labors.—Chicago Record-Herald.

WOOD STILL LEADS IN BUILDING.

What the Government Reports on Construction Show.

Reports collected by the government from certificates of building permits in the country show that in the last year 61 per cent of the building permits were of wood and 28 per cent of fire resisting material. The figures do not include the building data in the smaller cities and rural communities of the country, hence the percentage was considered that wood is yet and is likely to remain the principal material used in construction in the United States, if the figures on the smaller cities be included it would be safe to say that the percentage of wood would be found to be increased in proportion to other materials, as indicated by the reports noted.

"The use of cement, terra cotta, brick and stone with a proportionately small bulk makes it possible soon to do away with the use of wood entirely. It is a fact that the prices of these fire-proof materials are now being used to such an extent, and have fallen in recent years, it is nevertheless true that wood is being manufactured for building purposes each year than ever before.

U. S. HAS 61,158 POSTOFFICES.

Annual Report Favors Extension of the City Delivery Service.

At the end of the last fiscal year there were 61,158 postoffices in the United States, according to the annual report of the First Assistant Postmaster General. The number of postmasters appointed at presidential offices was 2,174, while 11,801 were given commissions in the fourth-class offices.

Of special interest to the general public are the recommendations relative to the extension and improvement of the city delivery service. It is stated, are without any form of free delivery. The recommendations, it is stated, are intended to amending the law so as to permit of the establishment of city delivery service at postoffices where the receipts are no more than $5,000 annually.

Mrs. Clara left Monday for Fenton to attend the funeral, but Mrs. Alcalie was not well enough to go.

—Oh for the love of heaven, and the ordinary proprieties of journalism, you fellows around here, from Traverse City north, quit telling about "pretty" weddings. It is stale, worn out and disgusting. It is the most unsatisfactory and altogether foolish adjective ever applied to matrimony. Quit it! Invent some other word. Say "charming," for a while, or "interesting."

—The latest from Emmet county regarding the local option question seems to indicate that the saloon men have given their opponents a stiff body blow. Nineteen hundred names being required, twenty-two hundred names were sent in to the board. The saloon men secured over 300 withdrawals, and the local option cause in Emmet county seems to be "up in the air."

—The cement factory project is just as much alive as it ever was—in fact it is very much alive. The details necessary for safe and prudent procedure are being looked after, and the factory will be built. The final result may somewhat change the map of this end of the county, but there need be no fear of the result. The Board of Commerce has the matter well in hand, and is in close touch with the cement company.

—At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Charlevoix State Savings Bank, held Monday evening, Jan. 4th, 1909, the Board thoroughly discussed the rate of interest paid on Savings Deposits which was fixed by Act No. 21 of the Com. Ven. ordering the last that many banks throughout the state are paying four per cent interest to Savings Depositors of the state. Such a policy, and in some instances not changing which, the Charlevoix State Savings Bank has now adopted. It was decided to no longer split a penny, but beginning with the year 1909 the bank will pay the depositors four per cent interest on Savings Deposits, compounded semi-annually. The people of Charlevoix are already certainly have as good and reliable banking facilities as any community in the state.

No Need of Noise or Bluster in This Phase of the Moon.

A period of practically three full months must elapse before the spring election at which county prohibition will be voted upon in Charlevoix county. The issue is no more clearly defined than that the result is already surely settled. Both are emblazoned on the walls of Belshazzar's palace in letters of fire!

"Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting!"

Local option will be submitted, and the proposition will carry by a large majority. On the first day of May next there will not be an open saloon in Charlevoix county.

But there are several things to think of in connection with the issue. Intemperance is not necessarily confined to the use of intoxicating liquors. There are certain saloon keepers who denounce their opponents as crooks and fanatics. That there are such people in all walks of life is undeniable, but in this movement there are very few, as compared with the whole. On the other hand, too early agitation and a too free display of denunciation on the part of temperance people for the next two months will be a waste of strength and ammunition.

"Beware the Ides of March" was the utter witches told Macbeth, and the warning applies here. March is the month for forceful, strenuous educational and missionary work, and it should be as dignified as it is forceful. It was a distinguished revolutionary general who said to his troops on going into the battle of Brandywine, "Hold your fire until you see the white of their eyes!" We think it was the battle of Brandywine, but it may have been some other engagement. The name is so appropriate, however, that will apply it here.

It will be futile to "cry havoc, and let loose the dogs of war" during January and February. It is useless to saw the air and shout like the mate of a Mississippi river steamboat and blow off steam like the boiler foreman, until you have your cargo and fuel on board.

Of the outcome there is no doubt whatever. The saloons must go in Charlevoix county. Public sentiment is fully aroused to the fact that they are, as a whole, a menace to society. There may be, and there are, what some people are pleased to call "good saloons," but there are very many bad ones, and they subtle to leaven the whole loaf.

The argument is raised that prohibition will kill Charlevoix as a resort town. We are not prepared to argue this point. It may be. But we think if prohibition can kill the town any deader than old Boyne has kept it for forty years.

Then the point is raised that the county will lose seventeen thousand dollars in a vicious license money. Well, according to all indications there is a very large proportion of tax payers who are willing to "dig down" and make up the deficiency. Some say "Let us try the experiment." It is not an experiment; it is a case of the people exercising the God given right to sought the fruit of the moral vineyard, and they have an equal right to put their homes and firesides into the scales in computing the cost.

A GROWING ENTERPRISE.

Development of the Argo Milling Company's Business Conclusive Evidence of Agricultural Progress.

There is no better way of gauging the agricultural progress of a section than by the development of the flouring mill in the midst thereof.

The Argo Milling Co. of Charlevoix and East Jordan, is one of the leading enterprises of its kind in Northern Michigan. The Charlevoix plant is the "mother" establishment of the concern, the East Jordan mill having been added several years ago and placed under the management of H. I. McMillan, formerly superintendent of the Charlevoix mill.

Mr. Rose, secretary of the corporation, tells the SENTINEL that, considering the flurry of 1908, the business of the year was quite satisfactory. The two mills, during the year, manufactured and sold goods to the amount of $150,000. A significant feature of the business was the largely increased supply of home grown grain, and the marked improvement in quality. The Company has an exchange at Rapid City. They also buy grain at other Northern Michigan points, Williamsburg being a leader. Another satisfactory fact is that more home grown corn has come to the mills during the year than in any previous year. The buckwheat crop of the year is put down as a failure.

Another "straw" indicating a revival of industrial activity, is the statement that they have sold more feed since Dec. 1st, 1908, than they did during the entire winter of 1907-8.

The Argo Milling Co. is a corporation, and is capitalized at $60,000. The officers are as follows: President, Geo. H. Swinton, of Calumet; Vice-President, A. A. Sheldon, Secretary and Treasurer, H. M. Rose, Milling Superintendent, H. I. McMillan.

The concern is in a very prosperous condition, and is indissolubly linked with the material growth and prosperity of this section.

Positively "The Best Seller" Probably the name of the late Noah Webster stands at the head of the list of those whose books have been "the best seller." Seventy-five million spelling books and from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 dictionaries look like record figures.

Don't Know How to Live.

There are people who go about the world basking for alms, and they are necessarily miserable for God lent them at every turn, especially in military men. They are helpless, illiterate for they have never learned how to live.—Henry Drummond.

Grown-Up Children.

It is not only the frivolous whom the spirit of childishness is just now called among. Children is the fashion even among the wise. Women especially are fond of adopting childishness in talking of serious subjects. Also children who have the habit of remembrance, they lose the sense of reality, and because they never talk exactly as they think they begin to think exactly as they talk.—London Spectator.

Native Education at the Cape.

Generally speaking the natives are keen about education, though, like many Europeans, they do not, much the paying for it. In Pondoland the desire for knowledge is so widespread that the percentage of children attending school compares very favorably with that of the most civilized European countries.—Kimberley Diamond Fields Advertiser.

About Right.

A boy was asked to explain the difference between animal instinct and human intelligence. "If a hen hatches," he said, "we should know everything we need about it from our instinct but we never can reason, and so we have to study ourselves 'about third, or be a fool."—Universal Leader.

A Little Woman.

"I was married to a million, please," said the little girl. "My mother married the man of three million." "Oh, you mean a pair of" all-ners, don't you, my child?" replied the shopkeeper. "No, just only one; one thousand million for a husband, folks to propose an' be rejected."

Faith and Hope.

Mayme—If you don't love him why are you going to marry him?

Maybelle—Oh, I expect to love him after we are married. It has been told that on the morning of our wedding day I met a man who sold his dinky little French hound.

Wretched Pay for Labor.

At a hearing, last session in London, of the Sweating Commission, evidence was brought forward showing that 56 women who sewed hooks and eyes on corsets received at the rate of a little over 16 cents a week. Another woman was instructed who worked from nine in the morning until the next morning at 2 o'clock and was in that time, it would seem better to die.

Care Not Necessary.

Scientific knowledge is sometimes laughable. "My boy," said the kindly English rector to the bobbedhair of a youth who was picking mushrooms in the rectory fields, "beware of picking a toadstool instead of a mushroom; they are easy to confuse." "That be all right, sir, that be," said the urchin, "an didn't a ought to eat 'em themselves; they're goin' to market to be sold."

About Right.

It would be much about fifty out of my cattle one year, not allowing for rent and labor, but as a rule I was out of pocket.—Jabez Flood.

Definition of a Giraffe.

The children had written compositions on the giraffe. They were reading them aloud to the class. At last the time came for little Willie Deem to read his. It was as follows: The giraffe is a dumb animal and cannot express itself by any sound, because its neck is so long its voice gets tired on its way to its mouth.

Affectation.

Affectation is the spirit which prompts you to say to your guest: "Do you care for cream?" instead of "Cream?" when you know right well that it's milk you are passing, and ralchy thin milk at that.

Annual Tax Sales.

In this issue is published the list of lands offered for sale by the auditor general for delinquent taxes.

—W. F. Gill, of Harbor Springs, was in town Tuesday.

—The senate on Tuesday, confirmed Frank A. Kenyon as postmaster at East Jordan.

—For the first time this year, the lower river, from the bridge down, was entirely frozen over Sunday night.

—John Lynskiff has accepted a position as book-keeper in H. M. A. Johnston's plumbing establishment.

—Theodore Erickson, who has been at his old home in Wisconsin the past two months, returned home Tuesday night.

—The tug Violet has about averaged her tri-weekly mail trips, since the Beaver laid up, and will continue as long as Beaver harbor stays open.

—The Congregational ladies will serve supper at the church parlors on Friday, January 15th, at 5:30, p. m., to which everyone is cordially invited. Price 25 cents.

—The Knights of the Modern Maccabees will install officers Friday evening, Jan. 15th, followed by refreshments and entertainment. Let every member be present.

—General Manager Martling reports some tourist contracts coming in, but the acreage for acreage is not yet fairly open. The prospects for a large increase over last year are excellent.

—A lively season of building and improvements is expected to open up here early in the spring. Several fine cottages are to be built on the river, and considerable building is blocked out for the city.

—On Saturday Judge Mayne, sitting in chambers, sentenced Guy Green, who came up from Boyne Falls on a charge of larceny, and who was convicted at the last term of court, to ninety days in the Detroit House of Correction.

—News was received here Tuesday that the tug Choate, which left here last week for Manistique to lay up, sunk at the dock at Manistique on that date. No further particulars are given. The Choate is owned by the Hines lumber interests, of this city. The Choate has 19 nine feet of water, and has six gauge of nets in her hold which will be seriously damaged. The boat will be raised at once.

—The state republican convention will be held at Grand Rapids Feb. 12.

—Mrs. John Lamphear is spending the winter with relatives and friends in Flint.

—Lou Holmes re-opens the saloon on Bridge street, opposite the intersection of Park Avenue, to day.

—The Woman's Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. H. S. Harsha Wednesday Jan. 20th, at 2:30 p. m.

—Mrs. O. A. Stain left Tuesday for Florida to spend the remainder of the winter. She will stop at Saginaw and Cleveland on her way south.

—In the case of The People vs. Sam Beaubien, charged with arson, on trial in the Emmet circuit court last week, defendant was adjudged by the jury.

—Round Lake is frozen over, and the perch-fishing colony is erecting its houses on the surface thereof. Thank heaven, no one can get perch, if we cannot get chicken.

—There is but one way to solve a great social problem, and that is to refer it to the people and the ballot box. As Abraham Lincoln said, "the people are generally right."

—How quickly the petals of the rose within and the leaves fall when the frost comes. What on earth has become of the electric shore railroad project? It is about time for another spasm.

—Miss Arbutus Nordrum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Nordrum, of this city, is a student at the Peirce Institute, Big Rapids. Being a graduate of the Petoskey high school, her name did not appear in the list published last week.

—The new Majestic Theater is showing to good houses every night. The moving pictures are all of the latest, and the vaudeville acts among the very best attractions. The Hardinge, in their famous contortion act, are making a decided hit.

—The fishermen are all in for the winter,—including Jack Genett,—hibernating, like Tom Adams' bears, but work on the nets begins this week, and will keep from thirty to forty men busy until the opening of navigation. And this, mind you, is equal to a good big sawmill.

—Three hundred and twenty six miles of good roads have been built in this state in the last three years and a half, which is a record not equaled by any state, and these roads have been inspected and their construction supervised by the state highway department at a less cost than in any other state.

—Elegant winter weather, with excellent sleighing. Now and then a blister and a freeze, and as we arise in the morning and down by a glorious coal fire, we would not exchange it for a bushel of California oranges or a siesta under a Florida cocoanut. There is nothing so invigorating as a snow shovel and a wood pile. They may sometimes give you a frozen ear, but they give you a relish for your breakfast oatmeal.

VAN PELT WILL BUILD.

Real Estate Change That Involves the Erection of a Good Brick Block on Bridge Street—Another Building Contemplated.

On Thursday last, Geo. H. Van Pelt, of Chicago, bought of Dr. G. W. Crouter, the lot on Bridge street, on the alley opposite the postoffice, and will next spring erect thereon a 25x80 solid brick two story building.

In addition to the Crouter purchase, Mr. Van Pelt bought of Forest Blanchard 24 feet in the rear. This takes up the alley that extends from Park avenue to the postoffice alley, lot, so Mr. Blanchard owns the adjoining lot that extends through to Park avenue, it has been mutually agreed to open a 14 foot alley through the half-block in the rear of the new building. The fact that Van Pelt is to build is a sufficient guaranty that the building will be fully up-to-date. It is not given out who is to occupy the building but we presume Van Pelt knows.

It is pretty well understood that George has other building schemes in his head.

Climatic Changes of Northern Michigan.

It is worthy of note that the climate of Northern Michigan has undergone a wonderful change in the past forty years.

We remember well when the thermometer registered thirty-five degrees below zero many mornings during the winter. Now it rarely ever reaches 15.

Then the snow fall was so great that, when it was shoveled from the sidewalks, you could not, from a door on one side of Bridge street, see into the windows of the stores on the opposite side.

Then, the steamers were lucky if they could reach the "wood dock," by May 15th. Now we complain grievously if navigation does not open by April 1st.

Then, body maple blockwood cost 8c cents per cord.

Now it costs—!—!—!!!!

Hart Line Boys Boat.

The Hart Transportation Co. of Green Bay, within the week closed a deal whereby they became the owners of the passenger steamer Bon Ami, the craft being purchased from the receiver of the A. Booth Co. The price paid for the craft is private.

The Bon Ami is a fine craft for the Green Bay trade, being fast and staunch. It is 108 feet long and 22 feet beam and was built in 1894. The Hart company proposes to give the best service possible and are making every effort to bring this about. Their enterprise should be appreciated by the people of this shore, and the company given all encouragement possible.

The schedule for the Bon Ami has not yet been decided upon, but will be ready for publication at the opening of navigation next spring.

—We are at a loss to know why bill more is not at Lansing looking after legislation and a chance somewhere for bill. Our friend bill has been silent and unobserved for a long time.

—Owing to the absence of Capt. P. D. Campbell for the winter, the meetings of the S. S. S. are suspended. A meeting of that society without the presence of Capt. Campbell would be like the play of "Hamlet" with Hamlet left out.

—The Bakers have begun a thorough overhauling of Baker's Inn, (formerly Hotel Harriet.) All the rooms, including the office and parlors, will be re papered and the woodwork re-painted. Charles Graves has been engaged to do the work, and expects to be kept busy until the opening of navigation.

—The north riders in the township of Charlevoix will petition the board of supervisors, at its February session, to set off all of the township on that side into Hayes, and, of course, "Harkle is willin," is Hayes. It all comes of the binding question, which was voted down by the north-siders at the recent special election. Our friends are making a mistake. It is a case of saving a penny and losing a dollar.

A PIONEER.

Amos T. Burnett, of Charlevoix, a War-Time Settler of Northern Michigan. A Trader in the Early Days and Always "Square."

Among the present residents of Charlevoix there are few, comparatively, who know that Amos T. Burnett, the quiet little man who conducts an insurance office in the Van Pelt block, is one of the earliest pioneers of the territory originally constituting Emmet county, and that included the territory now constituting Charlevoix county.

Mr. Burnett first came to these parts from Ashtabula, Ohio, in 1861, locating at Little Traverse, (now Harbor Springs), accompanied by a man named Fargo. In the firm of Burnett & Fargo, he was engaged in the mercantile and fishing business there for five years.

In 1862 the firm dissolved, and Mr. Burnett moved to Cross Village, where he entered the employ of Capt. John Wagley, then the foremost general trader and fisherman of this section, with the possible exception of Ira Rose. In 1871 he married a daughter of Capt. Wagley, and that estimable lady still continues to share his joys and sorrows.

Mr. Burnett was the first postmaster of Cross Village, when the mail was kept in a cigar box. The late Richard Cooper was postmaster at "Little Traverse" at the same time.

In 1884 Mr. Burnett moved back here for himself, along the same lines, and for more than ten years he was prominent in the trading and fishing interests of the sterile region. The writer of this remembers well the reputation that Mr. Burnett enjoyed among both whites and Indians in those days. What "Amos" said to either was always made good. The name of Amos Burnett always stood for a "square deal" with both. No man ever retired from that field of endeavor in Northern Michigan with a better reputation for business integrity.

He was elected clerk and register of Emmet county in 1872, defeating the notorious Dennis T. Dowling, who, up to that time had been the dictator of Emmet county. He was again elected to the same office in 1880, defeating James Bell.

In 1885 he sold out his business interests in Cross Village and removed to Charlevoix, where he and Mrs. Burnett live in the happy consciousness of a well-spent life, up to date, and "the names of those are legion," who wish for them yet many more years of prosperity and contentment.

From An Old Veteran.

TO THE EDITOR:

In your issue of the 7th I notice a suggestion that I wish to second. Like "F." I believe we have at the musical and literary talent necessary to put up a first-class celebration on any occasion, and why not make the 100th anniversary of the birth of one of Nature's noblest men—Abraham Lincoln,—a memorable event for Charlevoix?

But I have heard it suggested that the people will wait until the old soldiers take action. Why should they be expected to take the lead? Have they any more interest in the fruits of Lincoln's life and work than any other class of citizens?

They each held a share in the terrible conflict that finally resulted in the triumph of the National cause and perpetuated the Union, which is now the leading world power, and whose flag is hailed and respected by all nations.

For their patriotic services the old soldiers deserve all honor and respect; but now, in their declining days, they should not be required to take the lead and responsibility in the undertaking that "F" suggests.

I think I can say for the old soldiers that any reasonable part the citizens may assign them on the occasion will be carried out to the best of their ability. The people have their representative in every able bodied soldier, and it has at its head the son of a veteran as major.

Why should they not go on, as the councils of other cities are doing, and call a meeting to arrange for the proper observance of the day?

Very Hespectfully,
Charlevoix, Jan. 12. CITIZEN.

A COLD CRUISE.

Olaf Nordrum Ordered On An Extended Trip Among Manitoba, Ontario and New Brunswick Branches.

On Saturday General Manager Olaf Nordrum, of the Bank of Co's Northern Michigan territory, received orders to report there Monday prepared to make an extended trip to the branch houses of that concern in the frigid Canadian north.

Mr. Nordrum will visit Winnipeg, Selkirk, Winnipeg, Kat Portage, Toronto, Montreal, and points in New Brunswick. The trip is for the purpose of auditing the books of these various houses and opening new books required under the receivership regime. He will be absent a month, and possibly longer.

Mr. Nordrum has made two trips over the same territory before—one the winter of 1905-6, and one the winter of 1906-7. On the first trip he was gone four months, and on the second he was absent three months.

The Booth Company operate under a separate charter in that territory, the name and style being The Dominion Fish Company.

SIXTY YEARS OF MARRIED LIFE.

A Patriarch and His Faithful Wife are Buldozed into a Celebration of the Sixtieth Anniversary of Their Marriage.

The home of Henry Sherman, on the north side, was the scene, last Friday night, of an event that is unprecedented in the annals of Charlevoix history.

Miengah Sherman was born in 1831. He came to Michigan in 1836, and at Lyons, early in the year 1849, he was married to Sarah M. Hunt, and five children have been the fruit of the union.

Well, on Friday evening a large circle of friends surprised them at the home of their son, Henry Sherman, and a mighty jolly time was put in with the old people.

Very many friends of the old couple unite in wishing them yet many more years of life and comfort.

SELF-CONTROL AND PROGRESS.

Vital Truths as Set Forward by Ancient Philosopher.

"Where there is progress?" If any of you, withdrawing himself from entertainment, turns to his own soul, to exercise it and to improve it by labor, so as to make it comfortable in nature, elegant, free, unestimated, unloaded, faithful, modest; and if he has learned that he who desires or avoids the things which are not in his power can neither be faithful nor free, but of necessity he must change with them and be tossed about with them as in a tempest, and of necessity must subject himself to others who have the power to procure or prevent what he desires or would avoid; finally, when he rises in the morning, if he observes and keeps these rules, he has a modest morning, and when he goes to market more he works out his chief period, he an the corner does still reference to running, and the trainer of the video with reference to the videos; this is the man who truly makes progress.—Epictetus.

HE DIDN'T CATCH THE RABBIT.

Brother Dickey Had Good Reasons for Not Doing So.

"I tole de news dat I was mighty short on real wu wood," said Brother Dickey, "wu big lot' me, did I know how to git wood, an' I tol' you no, sumtimes when I was tryin' ter know, an' de mass say:

"'You go down yander, ter what de gravyard at, an' fetch me de front poo' o a graveyard rabbit, an' I'll give you half a hoss an' wud.' I perticlerly wants dat rabbit foot fer take off a spell somebody pull on him."

"Well, did you get the rabbit foot?" someone asked.

Whence Pie?

The origin of pie, especially mince pie, like the origin of sausage, is shrouded in mystery, but certain it is that it was known as far back as the time of Pliny the Pleasant, and it may be that in his dinner pail could have been found the precedent which blighted of Pliny, some of the hospital, sought to follow. Those who are surprised, after being led to believe that New England is the habitat of the article, to learn that pie is an old English institution can easily account the further statement that "plaid on Scotchmen sell in outlawth fan ramparts and burst forth into an unlimited variety of grasses and spices." Like the Irish potato, which is said to have originated in the new world, it has been so ingrafted into the life of its adopted country that it seems more like a native than an alien.

More Psychology.

"Pinky," said Plodding Pete, as he entered the business which had been provided, "I said I'd do my best to help out with the wonderful crystal."

"That's what you said."

"Aw! I'm a man of one word.

"This who didn't you reach for the ax and go to work?"

"Lady, I merely took de contract. I didn't guarantee to do de work myself. I'm a responsible wood chopper, an' if you don't disturb me while I'm concentratin' on chopsticks I'll surprise you. Jes' remember, if anybody walks on this he's half awake an' goes to work on dat wood, dat I'm de grateful party who mesmerized him."

Wasted Efforts.

One evening when Tommy aged five, was having his daily bath, his mama was trying with small success, to scrub his grimy little hands.

After watching her for some time he said, patronizingly:

JONES PUT UP A SUBSTITUTE.

And Incidentally Got Reputation as After-Dinner Speaker.

"If there is one thing I hate," remarked Mr. Jones, "it is after-dinner speeches. Well, once I found myself at a big banquet, which I knew very few of those present. To my amazement and horror, toward the end of the festivities, the toastmaster called my name out.

"'We have with us tonight—' I heard the old, hated formula roll out unctuously from the lips—and then my own name—Mr. Jones, the well known, etc.

"The toastmaster concluded, but I made no move to get on my feet. I felt paralyzed, as I gazed over the table to think through the roof of my mouth.

"And then the chance, from all sides began yelling, 'Yes, Jones! Jones!—which is Jones?—where is Jones?'

"A brilliant idea came to me. Stunned—long jumble me was a little man who deeply based apoplectic. Like lightning I jumped to my feet, Jones! Why, he's Jones!' I yelled, and clapped the little Apoplectic on the back. Jones, I yanked him to his feet, accompanying in an embassy echo voice: 'Don't give the away; speak now!'

"He spoke. And, in the guise of myself, he made a most successful after-dinner speech. There was loud applause and much chuckling of What's the matter with Jones? Here all right!

"As for me, I slipped away and gradually recovered from the nervous shock occasioned by my narrow escape from being eloquent."

YOUTHFUL MIND IN DISTRESS.

Six-year-old Jackie's mother has been and absolute truthfulness was the only rock on which to build that positive preschool's character, and the constant worktime out of this principle she was called upon to exhibit in such trifles as fables, Santa Claus, and other illusions dear to childish hearts, and they became instant "make-believe" games. Santa Claus in particular being a pet "joke" between his mother and himself.

Jackie came to from play one afternoon much excited and concerned. Mother, Jimmie Norton, believes there is a reality and truly Santa Claus. He says he is sure that Santa Claus came down the chimney. He wouldn't believe me at all when I told him it was just a "joke" with grinning smiley.

Jackie's mother was somewhat nonplussed. "Well, sonny, she temporized, "perhaps Jimmie's mother will tell him the joke some time soon, and then—"

"Oh, I hope she will," broke in Jackie, forgetting his manners in his concentration, "because, you know, if it isn't true, when Jimmie has little boys of his own they won't ever get any Christmas presents."

Enemies of Arizona Chickens.

About four days ago L. T. Clifford, who owns a fine lot of poultry, was out in the yard engaged in doing the chores when he heard an unusual commotion in his henhouse. On opening the door and rushing up the hill he was astonished to see a large bobtailed bobcat in the middle of the floor with its body raised around two chickens which were yet alive.

Mr. Clifford aimed at the gentle jumping a blow on his head, when it immediately tightened its coils and squeezed the chickens. The snake measured between 3½ and 4 feet in length.

On Saturday evening the owner was again disturbed by a noise among his fowls, and this time the cause for alarm to the henmaster was made up a large frog who had just finished making an evening meal of one of the chickens. Mr. Clifford killed the frog.—Arizona Republican.

ANNUAL TAX SALE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, } ss.
County of Charlevoix, }

In the matter of the petition of James B. Bradley, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for sale in chancery of tax lands for the year 1904.

In reading and filing the petition of the Auditor General of the State of Michigan, praying for a decree in favor of the State of Michigan against certain parcels of land therein described, for the taxes, assessed and charged against such parcel of land, and that such lands be sold for the amount of taxes, fees and costs of this suit, and

It appearing to the satisfaction of the Court, that the petition of the Auditor General of the State of Michigan, on the 1st day of February, 1905, was filed in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, and that notice of the filing of said petition, and the time and place of hearing thereof, describing in notice the lots claimed thereon by the State of Michigan, for such taxes, interest and charges, or any part thereof, shall appear in said Court, and that said notice was published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, their selection thereon, on or before the first day of the term of this Court above mentioned, and that in default thereof the same will be taken as confessed and decree and judgment will be rendered in said petition, and that said Court will proceed to the sale of said decree the lands described in said petition for which a decree of sale shall be made, and be sold for the taxes, fees and costs of this suit, at the Court House in the village of Charlevoix, in said County, on the first Monday in June, at ten o'clock a. m., on said day, or on the day or days adjourned thereto as may be necessary to complete the sale of said lands and of such and every part thereof, and that the Sheriff of said County of Charlevoix, be and he is hereby ordered and directed to sell in the county seat of the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, for the taxes, fees and costs, and there made to a public sale, the each parcel described in the decree of sale, and to make and execute to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, deeds in the name of the State of Michigan, to the person paying the full amount charged against such parcel of land, together with the fees and costs of this suit, and divide the whole interest thereof; or if no person will pay the full amount for the whole interest in any parcel of the entire thereof, then the whole parcel shall be offered and sold. If any parcel of land cannot be sold for the full amount of the taxes, fees and costs, the person who will pay the full amount of the taxes, fees and costs, shall be the purchaser, and if no such person offers to pay the full amount of the taxes, fees and costs, the person who will take the least quantity of land, shall be the purchaser, and if no such person offers to take the land for the amount aforesaid, the County Treasurer shall bid off the same in the name of the State.

Witness the Hon. Frederick W. Mayne, Circuit Judge, and the seal of said Circuit Court of Charlevoix County this 2nd day of December, 1904.

FREDERICK W. MAYNE, Circuit Judge.

Countersigned:
RICHARD LEWIS, Register.

To the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery:

The petition of James B. Bradley, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for sale in chancery of tax lands for the year 1904, respectfully shows that the list of lands hereinafter set forth and set forth in schedule "A" annexed hereto, and all the lands in said County of Charlevoix upon which taxes have been levied for the year 1904, and which were returned as delinquent for said year for said taxes, and which taxes have not been paid, together with the fees and costs of this suit, and the interest thereon to the time fixed for sale, and expenses of sale, are liens upon the respective parcels of land and lots of said lands.

Your petitioner further shows to the Court that said lands described in said schedule "A" for taxes of 1904 or any part thereof, have remained unpaid for more than one year after the same became delinquent, and that lands included in said "Schedule A" for taxes of said year, have been returned to the County Treasurer as delinquent for said taxes under the provisions of the general tax laws in force prior to the passage of Act 20 of the Public Acts of 1901, which Act repeals said laws.

Your petitioner further shows that in all cases where any lands have been returned to the County Treasurer for taxes of 1904 or of any prior year, said lands have not been sold for said taxes, and that the County Treasurer has held delinquent for said taxes, and that no proceedings have been taken by the County Treasurer, or by any other officer, to collect said taxes.

Your petitioner further shows that the taxes, fees and charges against said lands, and the time when the same became delinquent, are as shown in the several columns and lines described in said schedule.

Your petitioner further shows that said taxes or said described lands have remained unpaid for more than one year after the same became delinquent, and that the said taxes are twenty years and the same being now due and remaining unpaid as above set forth, your petitioner prays that a decree be made in favor of the State against such parcels of said lands, for the payment of said taxes, fees and costs of this suit, and that the said decree, as provided by law, be entered in the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, and that said lands be sold for the payment of said taxes, fees and costs, and that such other proceedings be had as may be necessary to carry into effect the said decree, and for such other and further relief as the nature of the case requires, as provided by law, as may the Court advisable.

Dated November 8th, 1904.

JAMES B. BRADLEY,
Auditor General of the State of Michigan.
for and in behalf of said petitioner.

If the quality things when the price drops, does the price go down? No shoddy stuff in our store but quality, stuff at prices lower than we sold them for before. Why? Because we do not wish to carry our goods until they go out of style. The goods we are selling at reduced prices are now strictly in style, and you yet have nearly all winter to wear them. Do not these reductions attract you, when you know they are sure enough reductions?

SELF-CONTROL AND PROGRESS.

Vital Truths as Set Forward by Ancient Philosopher.

Whose then is progress? If any of you, withdrawing himself from work or pain, turns in his own selfish excitement and is indolent in his labor, so as to make it comfortable to remain abroad, free, unexamined, unimpeded, faithless, prudent; and if he has learned that he who desires or avoids the things which are not in his power can neither be faithful nor free, but of necessity he must change with them and be tossed about with them as in a tempest, and of necessity must subject himself to others who have the power to procure or prevent what he desires or would avoid; finally, when he sets out in the morning, if he observes and learns these rules, turns as a man of fidelity, cuts as a modest man; in like manner, if in every matter that occurs he works out his right period as an honest man; does with reference to running, and the trainer of the voice with reference to the voice; this is the man who truly makes progress.—Epictetus.

HE DIDN'T CATCH THE RABBIT.

Brother Dickey Had Good Reasons for Not Doing So.

"I tole de man dat I was mighty short er coal an' wood," said Brother Dickey, "an' he tol' me, dat I knew how ter git some, an' I tol' 'im no, dat's what I was tryin' ter know, an' he sent me."

"You go down yander, ter what de graveyard at, an' fetch me de front foot er a graveyard rabbit, an' I'll give you half a ton er coal. I particular wants dat rabbit foot fer take off a spell pusnonsly put on me."

"Well, did you get the rabbit foot?" someone asked.

"No, suh. He place wher de grass yard at is too dry for me ter travel. Ef I git de chuncklier 'pinion wot de dead is at peace, it will do thus er me wide 'nuff an' 'a' ter do, tribulations or dis re'ferts' of war!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Whose Pie?

"The origin of the popularity enjoyed by the crinkle of sausage, is shrouded in mystery, but certain it is that it was known as far back as the time of Pericles, the Phenian, and it may be that in his dinner pail would have been found the precedent which Michael of Hamburg, one of the hostlers, sought to follow. Those who are versed in affairs being led to believe that New England is the habitat of the aesthetic, to learn that pie is an old English institution can easily accept the further statement that "planted on American soil it forthwith ran rampant and burst forth into an hitherto variety of genera and species." Like the Irish potato, which is said to have originated in the new world, it has been so ingrafted into the life of its adopted country that it seems more like a native than an alien.

More Psychology.

"Ladies' aid! Phaddley Pete, as he finished the functions which had been provided, "I said I'd do me best to help out with an woodchopper."

"What's what you said?"

"Am! I'm a man of me word.

"Then who didn't you reach for the ax and go to work?"

"Lady, I merely took de contract. I didn't guarantee to do de work myself. I'm a telepathic woodchopper, an' if you don't disturb me while I concentrate my thoughts I'm surprise you. Jes' remember, if anybody wakes up like he's half awake an goes to work on dat wood, dat I'm de grateful party who mesmerized him."

Wasted Efforts.

One evening when Tommy, aged five, was having his daily bath his nurse was trying with small success, to scrub his grimy little hands.

After searching her for some time he said, patronizingly:

"Never mind, Bertha. Don't you know that's the dark meat, anyway?"—Harper's Bazaar.

Rewards Certainly Paid.

The rewards of good living are not external things, willfully cast the recording hour of success aloft; they come as the way—in the consciousness of growing power and worth, of duties nobly done, and such thoroughly done. Joy and peace are by the way.—Mabie.

Must Go Together.

JONES PUT UP A SUBSTITUTE.

And Incidentally Got Reputation as After-Dinner Speaker.

"If there is one thing I hate," remarked Mr. Jones, "it is after-dinner speeches. Well, once I found myself in a box himself, where I knew very few of those present. To my amazement and horror, toward the end of dinner, the toastmaster first called his eyes upon me.

"'We have with us tonight—' I heard the old, hackneyed formula roll out mechanically from his lips—and I knew my own name—'Mr. Jones, the well-known,' etc.

"The toastmaster concluded, but I made no move to get on my feet. I felt paralyzed, my tongue was sticking to the roof of my mouth, my knees were knocking together like castanets. Then the guests from all sides began yelling: 'Yes, Jones, Jones!—which is Jones?—who is Jones?'

"A brilliant idea came to me. Sitting close beside me was a little man who dearly loved specializing. Like a flash I jumped to my feet, Jones? Why, here's Jones! I cried, and clapped the little Jonesthesian on the shoulder. Then I sanked him to his feet, unspeaking in an unknown voice: 'Don't give me away; speak now!'

"He spoke. And, in the gates of myself, he made a most successful after-dinner speech. There was loud applause and much shouting of 'What's the matter with Jones? He's all right!'

"As for me, I slipped away and gradually recovered from the nervous shock occasioned by my narrow escape from being of—myself."

YOUTHFUL MIND IN DISTRESS.

Stepmother Jackie's mother believed that absolute truthfulness was the only rock on which to build that youthful gentleman's character, and the consistent working out of this principle did actually of course, when first it fell in all such things as fairies, Santa Claus, and other illusions that childish hearts, and let grown-ups stand "made-believe" games. Santa Claus in particular, holds a yet "juicy" between his mother and himself.

Jackie came in from play one afternoon much excited and concerned. "Mother, Jimmie Norton believes there is a really and truly Santa Claus. He says he is sure that Santa Claus can come down the chimney. He wouldn't believe me at all when I told him it was just a fairy." with relation anxiety.

Jackie's mother was somewhat nonplussed. "Well, sort," she temporized, "perhaps Jimmie's mother will tell him he's too old for such things, and then—"

"Oh, I hope she will," broke in Jackie, forgetting his manners in his excitement, "because, you know, if she didn't, when Jimmie hits little boys of his size they wouldn't ever get any Christmas presents."

Enemies of Arizona Chickens.

"Don't you dare pass me a cinder," said a Phoenix, Ariz., man to a friend who owns a fine bird dog, as he was preparatory to sliding the chunk of coal down the back of his neck. The friend was a man of an inventive turn of mind, and he had invented a device for the purpose of preventing the dog from jumping on the chickens. The snake managed between 2½ and 4 feet in length.

On Saturday evening the owner was seen officiating at a pump among his fowls, and this time the cause for alarm in the barnyard was made to stand free of the "hot" finished machine as standing aloof of one of the Mr. Clifford filled the fowl—Arizona Republican.

"I know," said Ellen, "what you and my father are trying to do without a shadow of justification. You are going to hang Captain Smith as a spy. If you think to do us no favor by such an action, you are sadly mistaken."

"Who is to do you?" asked Hayward jealously.

"Is my husband husband, or was she married?"

"I beg to be excused from answering questions," said Smith coldly.

"I heard him myself renounce all pretensions to your hand.

"That is because he thinks I betrayed him. The word then you would have told him the truth. You kept silent. Was that the act of a gentleman?"

"I watch my fate against yours any time."

"Noble retort!" she replied scornfully, "having been!"

"Noble or not," said Hayward, "I don't mean to have your wish with a—traitress."

"If I were a man," said the girl hotly, "you would prove how dared to say that!"

"If you were a man," said Hayward in his usual hard tone, "you would have been dead by this time."

Miss Ellen turned from him without another word and walked up to the door. She could not trust herself to speak further with him or anyone.

CHAPTER XIII.

The girl had many things to do, but in spite of all her resolution she was utterly unable to accomplish more than a few. Her old black mammy was in time to prepare the mistress in her room, and even as Miss Ellen staggered across the threshold, and in those words she had repeated aloud, some vague, which she had repeated as a child, that she finally sank to sleep after the terrible events of the night.

Her father remained on the night she was there, but refused to see her. He sent word that, failing the guns which he was to receive from the Confederacy he had bought two old field pieces from the Confederate government which would be delivered in a few days, and that so sure as he could get the Ellen around she would set sail on a cruise. That would probably be during the next week. He said that the Greyhound would go to Charleston with the Ellen in company, and that his daughter should be left in Charleston with a distant relative of her mother. This relative would be instructed to look after her, a certain sum would be set apart for her maintenance, and that being done he washed his hands of her forever.

A hard man and a stern was Major Jones. He was an old man at the time of the Greyhound's escape and the peril in which the Ellen had been subjected, she, as he persisted in believing, to his daughter's loss. The young Federal officer, whom he detested more than ever, had by his cleverness, if it was not the act of the attempt to cut out the privateer, had deprived him of the fruits of the original adventure and his field pillaging.

Ellen learned in time that a court had been convened to try Captain Smith that afternoon, and that the commander of her father, Hayward, one of his lieutenants, and two other officers from the privateer Ellen, one no doubt that they would find him guilty, and in that case he was to be hanged. There was no way for her to see the prisoner. He was in the strong room with the chief plantation house in that section where slaves were kept, and the room was barred and the room itself was guarded by a sentinel. The negro guards were changed every two hours, lest they should be tempted to use opportunity to get to the prisoner. She could learn little of all this.

Later in the afternoon she noticed that the sentry who appeared to relieve the one who was on duty when she had seen him one of her father's henchmen, a man who had always professed deep attachment to her, offers during her childhood to take her on his knee and to make conversation with her smile. This man and she were perfectly friendly. Perhaps he might accomplish her end through him. Fortunately, or unfortunately, she had not set foot as she had considered a great deal, since the arrest of Smith, and the sound of soldiers entered, and Smith was confined in the strong room, which was in fact a station on the Ellen.

The sentry was duly relieved, the sergeant left where he had been standing, and the new sentry took his place at the door of the room. She turned to get some water to bathe her head from the gallery outside. She had seen the little groom depart with her lover, passed into her room, after some rapid preparation, ran out into the hall, descended the stairs, and ran down the long corridor, at the end of which was the door of the strong room.

"Jim," she said to the man.

"Lordy, Miss Ellen!" exclaimed the man, who had heard nothing of her arrival, "yo' look like a ghost! What's yo' doin' wuh yo'?"

"Jim," she began, "that officer in charge—"

"Yes, Miss Ellen."

"Well, he—he—he—"

CAPTAIN PORT PARTRIDGE.

Gives a Big Lecture to Sentinel-Address Dressed to "Dear Old Friends and Neighbors."

Red Cloud Camp, Idaho, Dec. 25, 1909

First, I wish you and yours a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

We are all well, and can hardly move on the top button on account of our dinner today. We had stewed venison with dumplings, coffee with cream, apple pie, high biscuits, baked potatoes and syrup. On Dec. 9th I killed a nice big buck, and we had to eat him up and pack him home three miles; but we got him home all right. So, we are living. The deer have moved down from the hills.

We have about two feet of snow, but it is soft. We are not having any freezing weather—we would like some now, to dry the snow. It hangs on the bush and trees all winter.

We have my sled to speak of. We are located on a hill 1500 feet higher than Pierce City, which has about 150 inhabitants, two stores and two saloons. Whiskey, beer and all soft drinks 15 cents; $2.00 per quart for real whiskey. We all split.

The gold dredge has laid up until spring. When at work it cleaned up $3,000 every twenty four hours. They have three right in our sluiceways, and a man to load the wood, with two men ahead of the dredge to cut brush. They burn the brush, at the same time clear, dig the sand for the dredge. The work now is in a creek bottom. They dig down about 12 feet to the bed rock. That is where the gold lies. The company will put in another dredge in the spring.

I saw M. H. Hair in Spokane, he looks the same as when he lived in Charlevoix.

Santa—Dec. 25th: It is snowing today, with prospects of a heavy fall. There is a placer mine on Rocky's creek that is taking water during midday, thrown around the sides of the hills. The ditch is 6 to 7 feet wide and three feet deep. They expect to get water enough from an electric plant to operate the pump in washing the gold from the sand and gravel. The ditch runs by our camp and up the hill three miles. They expect to have the ditch completed next fall.

Superintendent Paul Hair, brother of M. H. Hair, came in getting shot the other day. An old man squatted on some of the company's land, and fenced in a lot of the Hair werk-ranch. Force was dispatched and the old man came out and drove Hair away, threatening death. The squatter was arrested and bound over to circuit court for his bonds. Shooting match here occasionally. Almost everyone carries a big six shooter and cartridge belt.

Well, how is everybody in Charlevoix? What are you all doing? Why don't you come west where you can shoot and get shot, and not care crazy?

There is lots of gold here. All you have to do is to dig it out and wash what little sand there is in it, and you have the "spondulics."

Capt. Guard spent Christmas with Eds folks at Pierce. Sid and I had a big dinner at home. I will take up a mining claim in the spring. I have it spotted now.

With kind regards to all,

J. P. PARTRIDGE.

WANTED—Loan of $1500, two years at six per cent. Address L. Box 251 Charlevoix, Mich.

Antrim county supervisors have decided that that county shall remain "wet" for at least another year. Charlevoix goes "dry," then we may expect to see a saloon located just across the border.

SUBMITTED THE QUESTION.

The Emmet County Board of Supervisors Pass The Local Option Question For Action at the April Election.

THE SENTINEL made a mistake last week in stating that the local option question in Emmet county was "up in the air." The Board of Supervisors submitted the question at its session last week. The temperance people there got an earlier start than they did here, and the necessary notices were posted the full ten days previous to the meeting of the Board as required by law.

With the question submitted in both counties, the situation with the saloon people will be somewhat peculiar. In Emmet, if it goes "wet," they hope for Charlevoix to go "dry." In Charlevoix, if it goes "dry" the local opponents are hoping Emmet will go "wet." The reason for these hopes is obvious.

The local option advocates in Emmet are confident that they will carry the measure. The pot has not yet reached the boiling point in either county.

The Petoskey saloon men have two distinguished attorneys retained, and threaten to enjoin the election. The press specials say that red hot developments are looked for.

SCHOOL NOTES.

John Lingldip, a past graduate student, has entered the book-keeping class of the commercial department.

Dicken's "Tale of Two Cities" is the new classic commenced by the English III class.

Little Cobb-in has returned to school after several days absence on account of illness.

A group picture of the C. H. S. foot ball team was taken last Thursday. We will be glad to have it adorn our assembly room.

The C. H. S. Athletic Association is putting in a skating rink on the school grounds. The work will be completed in about two weeks.

The results of the two spelling contests between Boyne City and Charlevoix high schools are as follows:

CHAPTER XIV.

There was no quiet, of course, that South could do towards getting away on the dreadful news and half the people in the great houses and the outbuildings went to sleep. He had plenty of food for reflection, divided between the brilliant, if not effective, which Ellen's visit had afforded and his plans of action when he escaped from his prison. He stood by while an hour dragged in disquiet, staring listlessly across the yard at the door behind which lay her and of the future, rising to his preoccupation, therefore, it was not for some time that he noticed an unusual commotion about the wharf at which the Ellen lay and on which lill lounged in the camp of the soldiers, who had been relieved at the plantation after his attack to insure order until matters quieted down and his execution took place. He thought listlessly. Well, if he could help it, or Miss Ellen could, that would be never.

It was the first time he was aware of a third steamer off the plantation. He recognized his friend of the day before, the Panola, which was anchored between the Ellen at the wharf and the Governor Moore in the stream. It was evident that important tidings and orders of some sort had been brought by the visitor to the force at the plantation. He learned afterwards that the Confederate, fearing an immediate descent upon Hatteras Inlet by the Federals, were assembling every available means for resistance, and the Panola had come to Roanoke Island to fetch and the spikenanned gunboats in charge of the whole fleet, if possible, ends of the Ellen's crew.

He was too far gone to what was going on, for these departures usually avoid all future pleasantness, which he noticed the movement of his enemies escape him. He saw the battalion of the Ellen marched off the wharf and on board the steamer, using the boats of the Ellen and the Governor Moore for the purpose. More than this, he observed that a large number of the crew of the Ellen did not return to the privateer, and he dictated that as the Confederate forces had been withdrawn from Roanoke Island, the Ellen could not be made ready for a cruise, and that the men they had volunteered temporarily for the Confederate cause, form gathering for the defense of the island.

He reasoned internally and clearly that the Ellen would be left with a very short crew. He knew that the officers of the Ellen, if they were scattered, would be, but a few sailors, fairly well-armed, resolute men, would look after them, especially as they were probably kept locked under hatches in the forehold. All this fired him internally with a plan which he intended to follow as soon as he made his escape. He sat down after his supper, of which he ate very sparingly, thinking that he would need all his strength, and carefully thought over the various possibilities of the situation. That he could get out of the room was certain. What his course would be after that was also certain. He had come to capture or destroy that privateer, and he intended to do one or the other. He was under sentence of death anyway, and he had little to risk and everything to gain by the endeavor. It was hardly possible for him to escape from the Union, and although life was precious—more precious than ever since his renunciation by the Ellen's family, the knowledge of her love was like new wine to him—he determined to risk it in a desperate attempt to capture or destroy the vessel. Immediately, then, he was in no danger himself. He felt he could do great things, and he resolved to do them.

Now was the attempt to destroy the privateer—and the Ellen had—so long as he was at night as first he imagined. If by any means he could get across to the plantation on the hillside he felt sure that he could escape the deputed crew, and if he could not take her out, he could at least set fire to her and destroy her and then attend to the Greyhound. If either of the boats had a fire in the night more or less, and perhaps he could anyway. He had been lucky in his escape so far, and would be lucky in spite of the poverty, that he might be fortunate in one attempt, with assistance of Ellen, that he felt his heart his mind was in a hopeless and receptive frame.

At 10 o'clock the guard was changed. When the relieving guard entered the room to use that South was still there, he found him prisoner in his chair, quiet and apparently sound asleep. South noted with pleasure and satisfaction that this guard was one of the sailors of the Ellen, and he was not a soldier. He greatly they had all gone. Feeling safe from interruption for at least two hours, the young Captain crept out of bed and began to work immediately the man entered. He had not half an hour he had pried out two great bars from their worn place in the floor, which would get through the opening by a little squeezing. There was a tender drop to the ground, which was covered with grass. He escaped through the aperture and dropped to the soil without a sound. Drawing and cocking his revolver, in addition to his left hand sash, carrying his iron bar in his right, he walked cautiously towards the corner of the house. Suddenly a figure started up from the corner of bushes beneath the side of the long gallery. Smith raised his bar, when a frightened voice he recognized whispered.

"Miss'Gab, don lift me! I'e Chloe, sah."

"What do you want?" asked Smith softly, lowering the bar.

"Miss' Ellen done sent me to tole yo' dah, a man fo' yo' to git ter de ribber, sah. Hit's her own boss. She done saddle his horse! Ketch yo's ole tak him an' git fo freedom."

"Where is Miss Ellen?"

"I tash her in her room 'bout two hours ago. She's frisk an' dey'll sqeeze her sa'ciffs' of de grass out, sah."

Smith hesitated. It was a desperate chance he was about to take. It might be managed, but his duty was paramount. He must not give himself into Ellen's hands now.

"Thank her. Tell her from me," he said quickly. "Tell her I shall try her all my life. Goodbye."

"I'll tell her."

Smith had no idea of using the horse to escape. He was not bent on escape so much as on destruction. He intend him his plan however. He instantly determined what to do with him. He stuck through the yard surrounding the house, meeting no one, fortunately, and not being seen in the thick darkness by any chance watcher who might be stirring, until he reached the grove which led to the road by the river's edge above the wharf. With a little difficulty he found the horse tied to a tree. As he did so there was a commotion in the house behind him. For some reason the sentry had then re-entered the room, discovered his prisoner gone immediately. The alarm was given. He realized that they would rouse him in a few moments unless he acted promptly.

He did not hesitate. He untied the horse, knotted the bridle rein around the saddle horn, headed the animal down the road, struck it a smart blow, and started it galloping. Then he did what would seem to be a very foolish thing. He yelled like a madman and fired his pistol. The cry, the shot, the thundering of the horse's hoofs upon the hard shell road were sufficiently audible at the house and on the ship. The few men on the Ellen awakened to action. Orders were issued out. Lights appeared here and there. Sleepy men began to assemble in front of the house. He ran a few feet to the edge of the river bank. He intended to take to the water and swim for it, but by good fortune he stumbled upon a small point thrown up on the sandy shore. The oars were lying on the bank. He shoved it off noiselessly, clambered into it, adjusted the oars, and disappeared in the darkness.

CHAPTER XV.

Captain Haywood, seeing no prospect of getting away soon, had gone with the bulk of his command on the Panolia in the Governor Moore, leaving a sufficient force in a little fighting with the Yankees. In the absence of Captain Jones he taken up his quarters on the Ellen. The Yankee prisoners were locked up forward, and with half a dozen resolute, heavily armed sailors for guard, he had little task of caring for them. He had not gone in the hold which had been given to him in the captain's room when the confusion at the river spoiled his rest and something was reported to him. He learned that the prisoner had escaped. The sailor who brought the news who had been the one on guard, knew nothing as to how it had been effected except that the bars across the window in the room in which the Yankee Captain had been imprisoned had been pried open and the prisoner had gone out that way.

Major Jones knew that Smith must have had assistance. He was confused at once that his daughter had offended the prisoner in the nature of escape. He was not pleased at her than before, if that were possible. He had found the Ellen in a little difficulty, galloping down the road and also the Ellen's crew had planted about. It was natural for him to believe that Smith had gone that way.

He acted with energy and decision. He ordered half a dozen horses saddled, mounted on them of the Ellen's crew, combining men and three heavily armed men above, and dispatched the party in pursuit down the road with orders to bring back the prisoner dead or alive. "I will hear no more," said the girl piously, formerly resentful of the brutal word; "to me he is a sober man, a true gentleman, that"—she stopped in her turn, drew herself up, and looked straight at the Major—"than many of those who have a better right to the name they bear."

"Away with you, you impudent baggage! How dare you insult me so?" thundered the irate Major, beating the table with his clenched fist.

Miss Ellen turned instantly; she had never seen so angry in her life.

"Which cabin," she said swiftly, "do you designate as my prison?"

"Take your choice."

"Thank you, sir."

She turned the handle of the nearest door at random, flung it open, threw herself into the statement, and closed the door behind her. The mouse-colored man entered the cabin a moment after. He found the Major, beating the table with his clenched fist.

"The prisoners?" he queried startly.

"They're all safe, I think, sir, at least they're making no noise," answered the man promptly in the face of his superior's twist.

"Has the guard watch is kept."

"Ay, ay, sir."

"Then go after the man left was as quiet as possible. The Major's anger was contagious. Within the statement of Miss Ellen onda to sound. She was choking with rage, but she would not deal rather than have her father hear them. Major Jones set fuming bear them. Major Jones set upon certain papers upon which he was engaged to concentrate his mind after the recent disturbance and excitement. He had been disturbed in the middle of the Major heard nothing and did not look up at first. When he happened to raise his eyes he found himself staring into the level of a revolver and heard a quiet voice explain:—almost in a whisper:

"If you move or make a sound, you're a dead man."

FLIES WITHOUT A MOTOR.

New Principle in Aeroplane Invented by Mates Wing.

A new aeroplane has come to town, bringing with him the story that he has designed and built a machine that can fly without the aid of a motor, says the New York Times. He is Alexander F. Willson of Bangor, Maine, so confident is he of success that he is prepared to put a bid to the government for a metal aeroplane on the official specifications are issued.

Mr. Wilson has built several machines within the last dozen years. He has also flown with them, most of his experiments having been on the ice in winter over Eagle Lake, near Bar Harbor, and in summer along the shore.

On Sept. 1 he received his patent rights for his aeroplane from the United States government.

Mr. Wilson's latest aeroplane was built a few months ago, and in one of his recent flights he covered seven miles, and on another occasion rose to a height of 100 feet without the aid of a motor.

One of the chief features of the Wilson aeroplane is a movable fulcrum, which is under the control of the operator and enables him to tilt the aeroplane and thus to change its direction. This movable wings are the real novelty in the construction of the machine, enabling the operator to get from the gravity force the proper surface friction at all times. There are four of these wings, two at each end, the total length of the machine being 30 feet.

Too Significant.

"These Spanish dancers in California puzzle me, but some of them have very interesting mannings," commented a guest of one of the hotels.

"Yes?" said the manager.

"They do, for a fact; they really do. I am keeping track of a list in my notebook. But the funny thing was in Santa Barbara. Thinks to this: 'Indio Muerto street, morning dead Indian.' Ah, here it is, the one I was after. A street named 'Salipuedes.' Well, this great publication which I hold in my hand, and—"

"If you were not my daughter," storm-ed Major Jones hotly, "I would report you to the commandant for insolence. Leave me!"

"I told me last night I was to long your daughter, but, alas!"

"Stop!" cried the Major, now furiously. "I will not answer to me that way. What I said was made I realized, sorry. I know that you have saved the hundreds of thousands of dollars, that I am almost indebted. That this privateer—"

"Surely you do not blame me for all this trouble?" protested the young man, as indignantly. "I couldn't help being captured."

"I don't want to hear another word." Major Jones was in a rage, and he was reasoning anger, choking with uncontrollable passion. "I blame you for everything."

"I was bitterly unjust, but under the circumstances it was understandable.

"But, father—" began the girl again.

"Do I have to tell you again that I do not wish to be addressed in that way by you? That I have no desire to hear more from you? That you have done enough already? By Heaven, I'll see that you do no more!"

He struck his fist on the table. A man acting as master-at-arms of the Ellen appeared over opened in the doorway.

"The keys!" demanded the Major.

"The man saluted and turned instantly to fetch them.

"What are you going to do with me," asked the girl.

"Lock you in one of these cabins, where I can keep my eye on you."

"Shame, sir!" cried Ellen, filling with anger in her turn. "You don't know what you are doing. You're beside yourself. I have done nothing dishonorable. I am a lady, and as a woman I have nothing that misbecomes a woman. I have been loyal to you to the last. But I shall be no longer. You have repudiated me, you have ordered me away. I shall go. I warn you that I shall carry Captain Smith wherever and whenever I can."

"You'll have to be quick about it then," sneered the Major; "he went down the hill road."

"Yes," said the lady, "and I shall be overtaken and brought back."

"Ay, ay, and no horse," the girl interrupted with flashing eyes and heaving bosom.

"Yes, I supposed. But I have sent a squad of men after him to bring him back alive or—he said been staring at her for a second and completed his statement with a grim and unfeeling facetiousness—"stiffened."

"I pray Heaven," said the girl, passionately, uplifting her hands, "that he may escape. Surely never was a girl more perfectly sacrificed to an idiot!"

"A foundling!" sneered her father, "a no-name!"

"I will hear no more," said the girl proudly, formerly resentful of the brutal word; "to me he is a sober man, a true gentleman, that"—she stopped in her turn, drew herself up, and looked straight at the Major—"than many of those who have a better right to the name they bear."

PULPIT

TOUR WORK AND YOUR WORLD.

By Henry P. Dixon.

"The Lord hath need of him."—Luke 19: 31.

We are never worth much until some one needs you. Happiness depends on being useful, or, at least, believing that we are so. The contemptible person is always in danger. He is out of place in a universe so ordered that its perfection depends on each one taking his place and doing his work. Peter never was a great man of which it could not be truly said that the world had need of him.

It is better to make the rain man's error or treating that the fate of the world hinges in suspension, dependent on your existence, than to by no means appreciate the value of life, believing that it makes no difference whatever whether you live or die, and whether you do your work or not. The value of any life depends much on the sense of being needed to do it. Even

This is a saying sense. It makes earnest men. It gives the one purpose and no gives it power. The man who go wrong are those who have no sense of responsibility. The young man without this belief that the world needs him drifts and easily becomes the prey of baser purposes and passions, gives him work, awakens a sense of his worth, and enlists him in the welfare of others, and you have taken a long step toward his salvation.

This high truth that the world and the whole order of things need him is needed by everything we all need. There has been a type of theological think-ing in common use which has made man wrong and unpleasant as insignificant and negligible. It has been said that God could do all things without our aid. No wonder we have learned to call ourselves worms of the dust and to act agreeably thereto.

You cannot overdo the high character without high purpose. If we are taught to believe that God, then we are the most important being in the dust. It is the sense of a divine work that gives dignity to life. It is the sense of the order of this national universe is such that the father of all cannot fulfill his high purposes without the service of the least of his family, so that even I am essential to its success.

The least life has its place in the plan of the great all. High heaven has need of you. Innumerable fellows have need of you, your times need you. It may seem that if you dropped out some would note your going; but if you do not live your full life all life would be the poorer and if you do not do your full work the worlds will halt in their ways.

For us to live without any intense importance in the world, many fell because they forget this. But all these feelings are temporary and more fall because they forget that the world needs them. The total which Christian teachings are to be found the only possible means of really greatly bettering the world, and the reasons why they are perceived more clearly entered into more thoroughly, understood and practiced more obediently the work progresses.

Some day dirt and disease will disappear. Some day poverty and inequality will be done away with. Some day lust and greed will be forgotten. Some day love and light will prevail. Some day the curse of these things will be of whatever drags man down shall be lifted. This is not inference; it is the sense of the inspirational statements of the Lord. It is a declaration from God himself through Jesus Christ. He Son, uttered in the last recorded words He addressed to the children of men when He spoke to St. John in the visions of Patmos.

And wondrous declarations, in the form of allegory, concerning the New Jerusalem, which is said have come down from heaven, in one plain, grim, simple time thrown until the poetry stamped upon it. Yet the ideas of God seed laid on the petal of a flower, abrupt, immense hard to its look of intensity with all that goes before, and yet the more tremendously impressive for that very fact, for it is all and the best word of Jesus in His children which ought to be the rule of all and struggle in perfection, its seven-covered know lighted by hope, with what patience it can and with what probable heart it can afford to proceed because it has the belief that it has been engaged upon work of the world, that some day, in its own good time, the curse under which it and its fellows have groaned will be lifted once and for all.

Let us, then, Christ, Lord, and in the meanwhile let us each one here in our several stations do what we can to help our fellows, to help our generation, our globe to lift the curse upon our brethren and ourselves now, to-day.

CONTROL OUR BELIEF.

By Russell H. Conwell, D. D.

Text.—"So we see that they could not enter in because of their unbelief."—Hebrews 111:19.

Our unbelief in our future has come to continually to refuse to act. Our belief is largely within our control. Men are very foolish to assert that they cannot know what they believe; that they do not believe in Christ, and that they cannot help it. They do not believe in morality because they cannot avoid it. My friends, it is foolish to say that we cannot control our belief in such things. Of course there are things we cannot believe; we cannot believe that a lie is truth, when the evidence is that it is clear to our minds; but where the evidence on both sides is equally clear we can control our belief. The bold which Christian teachings are to be found the only possible means of really greatly bettering the world, and the reasons why they are perceived more clearly entered into more thoroughly, understood and practiced more obediently the work progresses.

MINE EXPLOSION KILLS 94.

Mysterious Blast Not Felt on Surface Takes Toll in Human Life.

The series of mishaps in Joe Letter's famous million-dollar colliery at Stellarton, Pictou, during the last few years reached a climax shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday morning when a mysterious explosion killed twenty-four men. Nineteen bodies have been recovered. Five are missing and are undoubtedly dead and two are injured critically. This is the second serious disaster in the Ziegler Coal Company's property which has been the scene of several minor fatalities and where for more than two years a desperate labor war was waged and the shadow of a strike. An explosion in 1905 killed thirty-five men at work in the mine.

Joseph Leiter and his bride of half a year were there when the explosion happened, having come to town several weeks ago to direct the fight on a fire in the workings which, after a long battle, was got under control. Fifteen night men in one shaft in more than six weeks was brought up Saturday, and it was thought that the fire had gained so much ground in the next few days.

The explosion was remarkable in that, so far as the many dead it left sorely a trace of its work, and the number of the mine shown no sign of damage.

A sound was heard by the residents of Zeigler to warn of the disaster almost beneath their feet, and even those at the mouth of the shaft at first did not realize what had happened deep in the workings.

A small puff of black smoke was seen to issue from the mouth of the mine, but it was so slight and so quickly vanished, that it was not noticed by the men who were at work in the mine. The sounding of a whistle warned the men of the danger, and they needed salvation. They were all in the workings without warning. Joseph Leiter, who was with his bride, assured Jess as worthy of death and claimed to be a Christian, and he said to the thief, Jesus was dead. They could not undo two errors which had sinned, they to done, but we can be saved from the result of our sins.

"Repent." Repentance does not mean mere sorrow for sin or weeping. It means a change of mind. This every man has to do also gets saved. God wants us to repent. "Be baptized." Baptism with water. Baptism means that a man has cleaned up his outward life by forsaking the world and has been baptized for guilt and love of God. Hence the Bible says, "Be ye cleansed in the ceremonial and baptismal water is a very appropriate symbol of the work.

"Be ye cleansed in gale you." He was telling them how they might receive the Holy Ghost. This is what every preacher ought to tell all men that God wants to give the Holy Ghost to men when they fulfill the conditions.

"Ye shall receive the Holy Ghost." This shows that only the substance of Peter's sermon was the "Christ crucified from this crooked generation." This is the rendering of the R. V. We need to be saved from the influence and contagion of bad men as well as from the sins of bad men.

41. "Were baptized." They were baptized as an outward acknowledgment to the world that they were fully committed to this faith. "Added unto them." The Greek word means "added to the Holy Ghost." They were added by the translators.

"Three thousand souls." Perhaps more than more church "joiners." They were added to the church. "Continued stedfastly." It was not a mere formal connection, but one sincerely called a revival. They were indoctrinated at once into POISONED SWEETS.

It may be sweet
Just after dark
Upon a seat
On the 11th park
To stand special

"Tis so, no doubt,
To sit and coo
While Julia is out
As Lovers do
Behind the trees

But when a kiss
Its gentle relish
And in its bliss
Your boodler shakes,
It's touch on bats.

When on the breast
Its lacing twist
Your head has lost
Its wonted rest
Its rough on "twist"

CONCLUSING THE FISH.

Wind Fishing Was in the Good Old Days—Usually Questioned When Record is Related.

In these latter days, incredibility generally takes possession of the listener's mind when he hears an old timer tell what commercial fishing was forty years ago in these waters.

Those were the days when Beaver Island governed the fish market of the Great Lakes. J. H. Dormer & Co., operated at St. James, with a house at Buffalo that is still doing business under the same firm name.

Talk about fish! Fresh shipments were then unknown. Coopers were then in as great demand as fishermen. Hoops and staves were cut and shaved by hand, and they were transported from place to place in "small-boats," as the ordinary fish-boat was then called. The next time the writer of this ever visited Beaver Island it was on a fish-boat load of hoops with Tim Smith.

Pound nets were numerous, and the catches were fabulous. At a pound-net between Pine River and Fisherman's Island we have seen the big flat pound net boats scuttled ashore loaded to the water's edge with big, fat whitefish, and return two or three times before the net was empty. And we have seen great piles of splendid fish not upon the beach in the same locality, in cause of a shortage of salt.

In those days the Pine River fishermen usually bowed their heads up the stately running stream from the bank, with a line attached to the spar. What few there were of them were accustomed to bringing a big sturgeon alongside and run up on the bank by the man at the tiller. It was in trying to make the river in a gale in a fish-boat, that Seth E. Morse lost his life.

Morris Storkman, "Lance" Aldrich, Ammon Beers and a few others, constituted the fishing colony, and Aldrich had his fish house at the corner where the steamboats spring around from Wilson's dock. "Lance" once impaled a big otter with a fish spear through a crack in the floor. And speaking of otter we have seen them swim the river to and fro, from that same shanty. Aldrich used a snaked-built "black-snake" boat called the "Kicker," and when it came to a test of speed he generally cleaned up on all everything in the region.

Nothing ever made more plentiful than trout, and frequently a sturgeon as big as Capt. Jordan would be brought in and parcelled out to the villagers. In the spring the river was black with suckers, but the fishermen considered them in a nuisance, and for many years they had no rating in the market.

Turtles were made in fishing in these days, and not infrequently fortunes were lost; for many were the nights that sere wrecked in November gales.

How different it is these days!

Steam tugs and gasoline boats have taken the place of the historic "black-boat," and steam tug-lines are the nets and their lunches.

It is a great industry; fraught with danger to both life and property. The fishermen are as brave as they are hardy, but they welcome the day when they get beside the nut-house stove and begin the work of mending the "twine" for next season's work. And this element of the industry employs a large proportion of the total force during most of the winter.

The money invested in the business in Charlevoix will mount into several tens of thousands of dollars, and fully one hundred men are employed. Lincoln here, with branch agencies at St. James, are A. Booth & Co., of Chicago, and the Beaver Co., of Bay City, which concerns Gray, ship and freeze a large majority of the catch at both points. The Wisconsin Fish Co., of Green Bay, also has an agency at St. James, and considerable fish is now yearly shipped on the Hart Line boats. Both the Booth and Beaver people own and operate or control tug and gasoline boat outfits. Five steam-tugs operate out of Charlevoix harbor, and five at St. James; but the number of gasoline and railboats that operate at both points is legion.

The government is doing a magnificent work in re-stocking the lake, and experienced fishermen express the opinion that there isn't show but a perceptible improvement in the industry.

The only serious drawback now complained of by the fishermen is the unnecessarily framed and confusing law. The fishermen are half the time in trouble, the other half in doubt, and all the time cleared by the game wardens.

Story of Dying Trees.

Attention has recently been directed to the number of trees in Chicago which are in a dying state, they sickly condition being attributed to smoke. A correspondent furnishes a similar coincidence in regard to Rio, Ireland, which a John Pattison planted in the center of his garden in Kelvinmore on the birth of his first son. Two of the same kind were planted in the nineteenth century, but three need the other, which grew up one year after the first, and on the other or predecessor and John's fourth son grew up with one of the trees fell, certainly, as the writer remarks, a singular coincidence.—Chicago Herald.

Fortune.

If fortune never crushed that man whom good fortune deserved not, I therefore have considered my friend never to trust to her fairer side, though she seemed to make friend with them; but to place all things she gave them as she might ask them back again, and with interest, she might take them from them, not just them; to keep always a distance between her and themselves. He knows not his own strength that feels not that adversity. Heaven preserve good men with crosses; but no ill can happen to a good man. Contraries are not mixed. Yes that which seems to my sense may be every man that it is in his reason what he ought to find will make it.—Ben Jonson.

EMERSON'S MEMORY AT FAULT.

Had at Times Almost Entire Lack of Remembrance.

Emerson was a notable sufferer from the vagaries of memory. His biographer relates that he met him one day in Boston, apparently at a loss for something, and asked him where he was going. "To dine," said Emerson. "With a very old and dear friend. I know where she lives, but I hope she won't ask me her name," and then he proceeded to describe her as "the mother of the wife of the young man—the tall man—who speaks so well—and so on, until his interlocutor guessed to whom he was referring.

From the hamper of common objects either failed him completely. On one occasion, when he mounted a moderate, he said: "I can't tell its name, but I can tell its history. Strangers take it a day."

The falling of memory led to a pathetic scene when he attended Longfellow's funeral, and recurred as he gazed at the coffin: "He was a sweet and beautiful poet; but I have entirely forgotten his name."

GREAT MEN LAY SIDE BY SIDE.

Proof of Philosopher's Words That "Fame Is a Bubble."

Before examining our carriage for a drive in Richmond we naturally employed our leisure for a well-deserved rest. I, as were prompted to do this city. We soon discovered the utter inadequacy of the one sentinel on the climax comes at the entrance to Hollywood cemetery.

"Why, of course, I know where the graves of the presidents are and will take pleasure in showing them to you," I cheerily.

"Presidents!" he echoed. "What presidents? I didn't know any were buried here."

Twice convinced to learn at once, we jumped a man driving on a load of

"The presidents!" he willingly assented. "There. Monroe lies in this adjoining, Tyler to the left, Jefferson Davis in the right-hand corner, and there is the president of the Confederacy."

"Pshaw!" I hastily drove on.—Freeman Magazine.

"Yes" and "No."

It is a useful accomplishment to be able to say "no" and it certainly is the evidence of amiability to prefer to say "yes" whenever it is possible. There is something wrong in the man who does not love himself whenever he is compelled to say "no." And there was a great deal wanting in this long distance. He was almost everybody's friend of weaknesses, he had not enough of them to be truly polite with fastidiously; whether you called him a gentleman or a dandy, he was at home in his place. In one of his moods he was not touched with a feeling of our infirmities. The world's lesson have taught us all positive qualities, even those which are disreputable, in the companionship theirs of their disposition—yes, yes, yes, yes; noes, noes, noes, noes, noes, noes, and that only with perpetual foresight.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

For Good Speaking Voice.

Don't compare the throat when speaking. Try to keep it free, the chest flexible and easy to manage. Don't think that it is worth practicing in the privacy of one's room to learn universal rapture, the tones in which the voice works best. In these instances there is not the slightest manner of increasing declamatory. A disagreeable style of conversation is a habit, but much will be gained by taking the exercise of making a point with the best tones without raising the pitch of the voice. This means does, sometimes, close upon and hold best effect. Without there there it is impossible to have a good speaking voice—a fact worth remembering.

All He Asked.

The father of the girl looked at his visitor.

"You seem edgy than my daughter he said, but you are a middle aged man and also seem to want you—so I suppose it is all right."

"Thank you," murmured the caller. "I don't see that I want you to think anything of the kind."

"Why is that?"

"The old man's long gone home so."—Chicago Tribune.

I want you to promise me that if I ever run for office you will carefully refrain from advocating that you be used to vote for me."

The Dress of a Good Wife.

Her clothes are comely rather than costly, and she makes plain cloth to be valued for her handsome wearing of it. She is none of our flimsy dames, who have to appear in variety of suits every day new—as if a good gown, like a stratagem in war, were to be used but once; but one good silk gown is still according to the best of her ten bonds' capital, and if of high parentage, she does not so remember wise also was by birth, that she forgave what she is by match.—Thomas Fuller.

Home Help.

Small Daughter—It's most school time and I've mislaid my compulsory Latin. Mother—Well, tell me what the lesson is about and I'll write you the answer for you to learn.

Heart and Brain.

The heart that humbands a desire to "feel every" with imaginary emotions is the hound of indulgences, and the brain that strives to conceive a means of consolation for a funeral wrong is the abode of anarchy.—Sunday Magazine.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The annual Antrim County Pioneer institute will be held in the court house, Bellaire, the 27th and 28th of this month.

It is reported at Bayne City that a copper mine has been discovered on a farm owned by a man named Biden, Arenac county, south of that city. The owner says upper peninsula miners are trying to buy the property. Biden claims that pieces of crude ore can be found on the surface of the ground.

The President of the East Jordan Board of Trade, W. P. Squier, sent a letter of invitation to the Mich. State Union of the Farmers' Society of Equity, to a session at Grand Rapids Dec. 29, to hold their annual meeting in October at East Jordan. This matter was referred to the board of directors for decision with recommendations in favor of East Jordan.

Eli Hipple Progress: A letter from Cupid, Hawley and Sharp, who are dredging the channel through Torch river, says: "We are getting along finely with the work; we will probably have it finished in about two weeks; we are making a splendid channel, and if we worked every day place we started with the exception of Christmas."

Boyne Citizen: Our representative W. J. Pearsey, was bidding as all good, by last week and asking what he or he was wanted him to pass while up the west of government at Lansing. When he stopped into W. A. Davis's place to shake him, in counting those present there were six in the place and each person had the name of Williams.

The Bayne City Electric Light Company and the Board of Trade are offering six months free and a year free to any factory that will locate in the new power building and supply at least 10 men. The board of public works has begun work on a third artesian well, which will be sunk to a depth of 1100 feet, and a six inch pipe inserted. It is expected this will give a supply of about 125,000 gallons of water every 24 hours.

Petoskey News: Last Tuesday night a new Petoskey organization was perfected known as "The Masonic Association of Petoskey." On Wednesday, the 6th of January, articles of incorporation were filed with the county clerk, fully launching the Association. This association is composed of ten members elected from each of the six Masonic bodies in the city, the Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council, Commandery, Eastern Star and White Shrine. The association is formed for the sole purpose of building a Masonic Temple in the city, to be devoted entirely to Masonic purposes.

Hugh Vaughan, aged 36, a mechanic at 1261 Oakdale avenue, Grand Rapids, became violently insane at his home late at night and was taken to the detention hospital by the police. Before the arrival of Patrolman Chase, Vaughan succeeded in throwing himself of all clothing and made considerable resistance all the way to the hospital. December 21st, Vaughan was seized with dementia and was taken to the detention hospital, where he was kept for several days, finally recovering sufficiently to be allowed to return home. Grand Rapids Herald. Mr. Vaughan was a former resident of Charlevoix and East Jordan.

Petoskey News: The board of directors of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., held a meeting Thursday afternoon at the company's office in the Ramsey block on Mitchell street. An election of officers was one of the items of business. E. H. Ward of Charlevoix, remains in office as president of the company; J. K. Detwiler, of Boyne, was elected vice-president; and C. Dilcel of this city was elected secretary and treasurer to succeed himself. The auditing committee of the board went through Mr. Dilcel's books and found them in first class shape. The entire conditions of affairs of the company is most satisfactory, and a credit to the organization and its executive force.

Traverse City Record: George W. Miner, who has been in the clothing business here for the last eight years, has decided to retire from active business and dispose of his stock at once. Mr. Miller came to this city eight years ago from Charlevoix, where he was in the clothing business for some time, and he also spent eight years on the road so that he is thoroughly experienced. The longing to again go on the road has come upon him, however, and despite the fact that his business relations here have always been pleasant, he will dispose of his stock as fast as possible and close his store. After his sale, Mr. Miller has not determined whether or not he will make this city his headquarters, but it is very possible that he will, at least his friends and the friends of the family, hope so.

CONGRESS HURLS BACK PRESIDENT'S BIG STICK

Special Committee of House Presents Report Refusing to Accept Roosevelt's Attacks.

REPLY VITRIOLIC IN EXTREME.

Charges Are Termed Disrespectful —"Dangerous to Destroy Confidence in Lawmakers."

Congress has hurled the "big stick" back at President Roosevelt. In the House of Representatives Thursday afternoon a bitter attack was made on the chief executive. A special committee appointed to deal with the President's message on the secret service, submitted Monday, brought in its report, which is virtuoso in the extreme. The report and the resolution accompanying it were thought likely to make the President furious, for they say in effect:

"Portions of the message are beneath the dignity of Congress and should not be received.

"These portions constitute a breach of the privileges of the house.

"It is dangerous to the republic that the confidence of the people should be imparted in those who enact the laws, and it is for this reason that the body evolves on the lawmakers not to allow the integrity of their motives to be lightly questioned.

"He it resolved, That the House in the exercise of its constitutional privileges declines to consider any communication from any source which is not in its own judgment respectful."

The committee caused a sensation by its recommendation that the House "disclaim the President's unusual message to lay on the table" and that it refuse to receive in the future "any the message of last Monday because of its being "unprecedented to the dignity of the house" as to what the President meant when he said, referring to the limitation placed on the field of operations of the secret service, that the "strongest argument in favor of the proviso was that the Congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated."

When Chairman Perkins of the special committee arose to make his report, he faced an almost full membership, while the galleries were packed with interested spectators. Messrs. Tawney, Smith of Iowa, Sherley and Fitzgerald were on the floor, prepared to resent what they deemed to be the insinuations of the President on them as members of the committee on appropriations. They were not alone in their indignation. The feelings of other members had been growing more inflamed.

DEATH OF FLY SAVES MANY.

Sudden Fate of Insect in Milk Leads to Discovery of Poisoner.

A wholesale attempt to exterminate the roomers in a boarding house at 315 East First street, Los Angeles, failed because a fly was instantly killed when it fell into a teaspoon full of poisoned milk. Ten men are held in the city jail on suspicion of having carefully arranged to poison the twenty persons. The prisoners, who gave their names as W. H. Morris and Charles Johnson, are both negroes. Johnson is about 60, and Morris, about 35. It was there that a quantity of potash, salts or vitriol, similar to that found in the milk, was discovered. Mrs. Fanale Martin, the landlady, said the two prisoners had visited her place, had been ordered away, and that they declared they would have revenge. The milk was left on the back porch in an open fire-pallon can. As Mrs. Martin neared it she saw the fly into the house a fly flew into the milk and whose instantly died. She notified the police and a chemical analysis was made of the milk, proving that it was poisoned.

SPRINGFIELD, MO., HAS BIG FIRE

Baldwin Theater Burned Down and Hotel Immacculate Damaged.

Fire broke out at 12:15 o'clock Wednesday morning in the Baldwin theater and office building and destroyed that amusement place and the three business floors in the business district of Springfield, Mo., and lightly damaged the $150,000 Colonial hotel. The total loss is estimated at $250,000. Five City Fire Stations in all responded. Mrs. Hughes, who was the only person hurt. His injuries were not serious. The fire was caused by an explosion of gas in the basement of the theater, which was a factory, structure. From the Colonial hotel over 200 guests fled to the street. All escaped in safety. Among those sleeping in the hotel was Ozie Head, the novelist of Chicago, who had delivered a lecture there the previous night. Mr. Head was uninjured.

"CHEIRO" IS ACCUSED OF FRAUD.

Charged with Misappropriating $500,000 in Bonds in Paris.

"Cheiro" the palmist, a man of mystery who has had a sensational career in New York, Newport, London and Paris, is a fugitive from justice. He worked from Paris bitter charges were made against him by two American women, Mrs. Bessie Baldwin Newell and her sister, Miss Josephine Pomeroy, whose father was a leading merchant of Boston. The charges have been in Paris under the name of "Count Hamon," though his real name is said to be John Warne. It is alleged that he misappropriated stocks and bonds valued at $500,000, and that he pressed market quotations. It is believed he is in London, out of the jurisdiction of French courts.

STORE IS DYNAMITED AGAIN.

Second Attempt Made to Destroy the Building Occupied by Jews.

For the second time in two years an attempt has been made to destroy the building occupied by Uriteno Bros. in St. Louis by exploding a big bomb in the cellar of the store. The blast frame of three store buildings were blown out and the windows in a whole square in the street were shattered. The Uriteno brothers live with their families in rooms over the store. They assisted the police in the investigation. Two of white paper made necessary this alliance.

PRESIDENT ANGERS SENATE.

Shields Bonaparte from Criticism and Says He Sanctioned Steel Merger.

The President in effect Wednesday told the Senate to mind its own business. In a message to the upper chamber he informed the body that it has no authority to call on the heads of executive departments for their reasons in not performing specific acts. The message suggests that the Senate has no right to call on executive department heads for anything at all. Cabinet officers, he told the Senate, are subject to specific laws specified by Congress in pursuance of the constitution "and to the direction of the President, but to no other direction whatever."

This was his reply to the resolution introduced by Senator Colberson on Monday and adopted by the Senate demanding of Attorney General Bonaparte his reasons for not having prosecuted lightly against the steel corporation because of its acquirement of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company in 1907.

Instead of replying to the Senate direct, as other Cabinet officers have done since the formation of government, Mr. Bonaparte turned the resolution over to the President. The answer of the President was short and direct.

The President told the Senate that the merger was made with his consent, and that after an explanation had been made to him by Judge Gary and E. C. Frick. He told them he saw no reason why the Steel Corporation should not take over the Tennessee company. The President said the steel trust made the purchase at the earnest solicitation of the big bankers of New York; that if the sale and not been made one of the largest and most beneficial houses in New York would have been driven to the wall and thus crushed other concerns and created widespread financial distress.

MODEL HOME FOR U. S. MONEY.

Bills Will Soon be Turned Out of New Building to Cost $2,000,000.

Uncle Sam's money will be made soon in the finest and largest engraving plant in the world. Plans for the new home of the bureau of engraving and printing have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury. Probably in April ground will be broken for the new structure, which will cost $2,000,000 and be a model. The new home will be constructed on some of the ground now occupied by the bureau, but not exactly on the same site, as the present one extends into the street and has been permitted to enter a lease again without a pass.

Minnesota Tax Law is Upheld.

What is known in Minnesota as the "mission" tax amendment to the State legislature is upheld by the State Supreme Court. This makes possible a income tax on loan or real estate that shall be derived in the income of the State tax commission and a mortgage registry tax.

Cliffs Herald to give victory $500.

Miss Jennie Joyce, aged 17, committed suicide at the home of her sister, Mrs. Orlando Salz, in Trenton, N. J., by taking carbolic acid. The only reason assigned was a desire to enable her father to collect a $500 insurance policy on the girl's life.

Last Daughter of Revolution Died.

Mrs. Harriet Eaton, who is said to have been the only surviving daughter of the revolution, died in Hudson, N. Y., aged 87 years. Mrs. Eaton was born in Hillsdale, N. Y., the daughter of Robert Tenneson of the 27th Connecticut regiment.

PANAMA TO PAY FOR FREEDOM

United States Will Furnish Money Promised to Colombia.

It was learned in Washington the other night that negotiations have just been concluded between the governments of the United States, Colombia and Panama whereby all matters in controversy between these are settled. Colombia recognizes the independence of Panama, which agrees to pay to Colombia $2,500,000 in annual installments of $250,000 for six years as her share of the Colombian national debt. The United States agrees to furnish this money to Panama in accordance with terms of the existing treaty between the United States and Panama, the first payment to be made nine years after date of the treaty. The treaty also provides for the boundary line between Colombia and Panama.

CALLS EDDY FAITH A FRAUD.

Dr. Johnston Myers Fiercely Assails Christian Science.

In an address which bristled with the strongest denunciatory terms at his command, the Rev. Johnston Myers of the manual Baptist church, Chicago, arraigned Christian Science as one of the greatest accidents of modern times. He denounced the entire Christian Science movement as a fabric of lies and fraud "built upon a foundation of error." He declared that the teachings of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy were the product of a mind with whom she formerly was associated and whose mental power she stole for herself. And, that but not lower, he declared, the Christian Science church and its "little dolatrous" was responsible for scores of deaths. He himself had charge of the last one funeral a month, said he, which was directly chargeable to Christian Science. Three conventions were held at the floor of Mrs. Eddy's cult in connection with the address, one Christian Science in which Dr. Myers advocated the program of mental treatment, which also forbids drugs and physicians, as outlined by Hiding, Failure.

LIFE FOR WIFE MURDERER.

Ohman Placed Poison in Coffee, the Trial Showed.

In Gallipolis, Ohio, Judge Beasley sentenced Carl Van Horn, aged 27, to imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary for life for murder of his young wife. Van Meter's wife died after drinking coffee, which it is charged, had been poisoned. His mother-in-law narrowly escaped death by poisoned coffee. Her husband favored electrocution, but a compromise was reached.

SAVES FACTORY FROM FIREUGO.

Janitor Finds Lighted Candle and Puts Out Fire.

David Barry, janitor of a factory at Nos. 1 and 3 Broadway, New York, discovered in the night on the floor of the factory a lighted candle. He saved in a delicious surroundings by rags, soaked in oil, and a quantity of kerosene, alcohol and gasoline. He put out the candle and notified the police who declared the arrangement was the work of a fiendish.

VICITS GRAVE OF WIFE HE SLEW

Convicted Murderer Taken to Cemetery at His Request.

In Dayton, Ohio, Henry Crooks, convicted of murdering his wife and confessed to the murder of his mother-in-law, begged of visiting his wife's grave. The request was granted and he was taken from the reformatory with a strong guard. Crooks knelt at the grave and sobbed for a few minutes, declaring he was not insane and that the murder was hard. His wife had been divorced from him on the ground of cruelty.

INTERNAL TROUBLES, NOW.

KNOW CHURCH VICTIM.

Man Murdered in Michigan Identified as G. Brewsing.

By means of two false teeth it has been definitely established that Gideon Brewsing, of Adelphi, Ill., was the victim of a murder found Tuesday evening in the little Battle Hill Methodist Church in Columbia township, near Port Huron, Mich. With part of the mystery which has confounded the Indiana crime thus cleared, the superiors of St. Clair County immediately offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of Rev. John H. Carmichael, of Adelphi, pastor of the little church and he was also at first now supposed to have been killed, dismembered and then buried in the church where he was slain. The identified the dead man were found when the safes from the store were sifted.

The substitute is a man over six feet tall, weighing more than 200 pounds, and the description says: "Both legs have been broken and he walks with a decided limp. Both his feet turn out decidedly, one at an angle of 45 degrees. He has a scar on the upper lip and another on the side of his nose. His eyes are light blue or gray."

Strenuous efforts to discover some motive for the killing of the carpenter by the substitute were fruitless. Rumors that Carmichael had been seen crossing the St. Clair River into Canada could not be corroborated. An officer sent to St. Thomas, Ont., reported no trace of him there.

The Story of Panama.

Crowded as is the Aransas Club at this time, and with the prospect of a rebellious Congress on his hands Mr. Roosevelt is likely to sell a large amount of his story of how he got the Canal. It must still be said that room must be made in it somehow, for the men he has insulted in connection with the Panama story. At the time of Mr. Taft's visit to St. Louis during the campaign, the Hilde Democrat called attention to and dwelt upon the fact that, in the multitude of charges and counter charges being made, none seriously affecting either the value or the integrity of Mr. Taft's greatest work, that on the latter, had been made by any responsible quarter. At that time the story of the alleged Panama "operation" had been often told, and was being told again every day, but not a scintilla of evidence which the public sense would regard as important was being offered to support it. It is much to be doubted whether it was not by means of putting as much as even one little red herring in the course of the papers exploiting it which would and have got there without it.

First, 24 Mr. Cromwell has just printed out, everything being said during and since the campaign was sold before and during the investigation conducted by the late Senator Morgan of Alabama. Senator Morgan had a particular incentive for seeking to discredit the work of the Isthmian Canal. He had devoted years of earnest work to the promotion of the Nicaragua Heavy January disbursements caused manual activity at the banks.

Editors connected with the Chicago district number twenty-one, against forty-five in Illinois, and twenty-five and twenty-six in 1907. These with Illinois over 25,000 number five, against twenty in Michigan and Indiana, in contrast with two knives and a hatchet attacking him after having shot at him in the tunnel above. The jury which identified the dead man were found when the safes from the store were sifted.

Mrs. Carmichael and Miss Carmichael, wife and daughter of the murderer, were arraigned for the prosecuting attorney, and he stated afterward that he was convinced that they knew nothing of the murder not the man's disappearance. A statement by Mrs. Carmichael that her husband's sister is an inmate of an insane asylum in West Virginia, may explain some of the features of the crime.

WOMEN ACQUITTED OF MURDER.

Mrs. Eth and Mrs. Heisel, Sisters, Are Free in Michigan.

Mrs. M. Florence Eth and Mrs. Catarine Heisel, charged with the murder of Capt. J. Clayton Eth, husband of the former, were acquitted in Media, Ill., after the jury had been out nearly eighteen hours. At 9:45 o'clock the jury came in and asked for further instructions on the question of self-defense. One of the jurors said that Mrs. Heisel was justified in doing when Capt. Eth threatened Mrs. Eth. He himself had charge of the jury to say what was the condition of her mind. The jurors said that he instructed them to find for the defense. Mrs. Heisel had that opportunity.

SUICIDE FINAL SCENE OF CHURCH TRAGEDY

Hypnotic Spell He Seeks to End Given by Michigan Preacher as Motive for Deed.

Rev. John Haviland Carmichael, who murdered a simple-minded carpenter, Gideon Brewsing, in a church at Battle Hill, Mich., and crammed the body in a stove, ended his life in Carthage, Ill. Monday, leaving a remarkable confession. Carmichael cut his throat with a pocket knife, finger, leaving several letters. He was discovered lying in a pool of blood in a shed near the boarding-house rep by Miss Miranda Hughes.

The confession, written in a letter to Sheriff Wagner, sheriff of St. Clair County, Michigan, pleading hypnotism first and self-defense finally, is a thrilling narration of the terrible church tragedy which perplexed the inhabitants of lower Michigan and shocked the reading public.

In the story of a man under the hypnotic spell of another who placed upon his fears, haunted his dreams, overpowered his will and finally lured him under false pretense, the guise of a friend, to the place of the church where, afraid to flee, he was forced to stay to prepare for the end.

Carmichael detailed account of the death of his victim is so blood-curdling that it has astonished the world. It is a crime novelist's imagination. He told of a quarrel with Brewsing, in consul with two knives and a hatchet attacking him after having shot at him in the tunnel above. The jury which identified the dead man were found when the safes from the store were sifted.

WHIPPED AND SHOT TO DEATH.

Band of Masked Men in South Carolina Beat Negro with Thorns.

A long-distance telephone message gives the details of the murder of a young negro of good reputation, was taken from his home in Pinewood, S. C., by a band of masked men, who, after administering a brutal whipping, with thorny switches, shot their victim to death. The crime is believed to be the result of a disagreement between the negro and certain whites.

THE NEXT SENATE.

Terms of 32 Tons Weavers Will Expire March 4.

While the terms of all Senators, more than one-third of the entire body, expire on March 4 next, 16 of this number already have been reelected or assured of re-election, either through successes in primary contests or pledges of a majority of the legislatures. In several State Legislatures charged with the duty of electing Senators before the beginning of the next Congress. In addition to the vacancies occurring by reason of a provision of the constitution, there will be a vacancy in Pennsylvania on account of the resignation of Senator Knox to accept the portfolio of Secretary of State in the Taft cabinet. There will be a scramble between Pennsylvania Republicans for Mr. Knox's seat which will occasion public interest equal to the contest in Ohio for the seat of Senator Foraker, and in Connecticut for the seat of Senator Brandegee. That Secretary Root will resume the New York senatorship he held by Senator Platt is conceded, and a contest is not expected.

Illinois Democrats whose terms expire at the end of the present Congress, but who are sure of being reelected, are: Cummins of Iowa, now serving out the unexpired term of the late Senator Allison; Dillingham of Vermont, Gallinger of New Hampshire, Burnham of Idaho, Perkins of California, Smoot of Utah and Stephenson of Wisconsin.

Nebraska also will be returned are: Clarke of Arkansas, Clay of Georgia, Bankhead of Alabama, Johnston of Alabama, McEnery of Louisiana, Newlands of Nevada, Overman of North Carolina, Smith of Maryland and Stone of Missouri.

The return of defeat in primary contests Senator Ankeny of Washington will be succeeded by Senator Jones, Senator Dillingham's seat, Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota, by M. N. Johnson of Dakota, Senator Kittredge of South Dakota, by Gov. Coe I. Crawford, and Long of Kansas, by Senator Bristow, Republicans, and Senator Fourth Assistant Postmaster General All of these are Republicans.

ARBITRATION AS IT WORKED.

He was a man of peace, and he came from two youths in a back street building. Accordingly he pushed through the crowd and presented the combatants to claim.

"Had you bag of you, my good fellows," earnestly brought the peace maker. "Is not the great chamber by attraction much of you choose half a mouse friends to arbitrate?"

"Friends?" yelled the crowd. "Do as the gentleman says, boys."

Holding most the 12 ardentness offered to the satisfaction of both sides, the man of peace went on his way rejoicing in the thought of having once again prevailed upon brute force to yield to peaceful argument.

Half an hour later he returned that way and was horrified to find the same crowd outside, while in the distance police whistles could be heard blowing and police rushing to the spot from all quarters.

"Good gracious! What is the matter now?" asked the peacemaker of an onlooker.

"Sure, sur," was the reply, "the arbitrators are at work."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Charles I's Clock.

The nerves and reputation of Shrewsbury, England, have recently been presented to them the ancient clock which was worn by Charles I. on the scaffold at Whitehall. The clock was secured by William Wakeel, who was none of honor to the antiquary research and who was in attendance on the king at the time of his execution. The account has been in the possession of the Wakeel family for 200 years, and was exhibited at the Society of Antiquities in 1891. It is in a splendid state of preservation, and the Wakeel family has presented it to the Shrewsbury town council, it is now on view in the town museum.

East Jordan Enterprise: The local ice harvest for 1909 is to begin next Monday, the cold weather of the last two weeks having made ice very rapidly, the ice on South Arm being now a foot in thickness and of the best quality. Mr. Andrew Berg who for several seasons past has supplied our citizens has sold his business including his ice houses and entire outfit to Supervisor J. H. Gaskill, who will put up ten thousand cakes of the commodity upon to provide for our demand during the hot summer months.

East Jordan Enterprise: Mr. Peter Nasson, of Evelina township, and Miss Anna Murphy were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Murphy, on the West Side at high noon Wednesday, the wedding ceremony being performed by Rev. John Hackett in the presence of a company of friends and relatives. After the ceremony the company sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner. The groom is a prosperous Evelina township farmer, while the bride has grown to charming young womanhood in our community and has a host of friends who join with us in wishing them health happiness and prosperity.

Central Lake Torch: Last week petitions which had been circulated in the eastern portion of the county were presented to the board of supervisors a request that the board adjourn to a later date for the purpose of permitting the further circulation of petitions and compliance with the legal requirements for the submission of the local option question to the voters of this county next April. The board declined to grant the request, so there is now no chance for the matter to be brought to a vote for one year from next April. The petitions were not thoroughly circulated, throughout the county and the effort appeared to be either apathetic, or merely some of the surplus enthusiasm from Charlevoix county crowded over the line into Antrim. That prohibition is coming, no person seems to doubt, but that there was any particular enthusiasm in Antrim county just at this time for the substitution of a local option proposition may be doubted. The movement seemed to be forwarded with more haste than judgment, and the result appears to be accepted without general regret.

High Lineage of Slang.

"That expression, 'Painting the town red,' is not a mere newspaper phrase, the creation of some nameless clerk or genius, as O. K. Could seem to have. Its birth-time has been traced to 'The Divine Comedy.' Dante, led by Virgil, comes to the cavernous depths of the place swept by a mighty wind where those are confined who have given the gods of idolatry pagan. Terrifaces arise from the mist—the faces of Francesca and Paolo. Who are you? cries Dante in alarm; and Francesca replies sadly: We are those who have painted the world red with our sins."

Annual Tax Sales.

In this issue is published the list of lands offered for sale by the auditor general for delinquent taxes.

—Circuit Court next Monday, with a very calendar.

—Rev. H. A. Putnam returned from a visit to his daughter, at Bennonia, last Monday.

—The great concert by the Farland-Newhall Company will be given tonight at the Charlevoix Theater at 8 o'clock.

—John M. Ackert and Jud Markham went to Petoskey Monday to attend a Royal Arch Masonic meeting that evening.

—Mayor Germaine, of Traverse City, was in town Thursday and Friday of last week, and not only looked the town over, but inspected the public works.

—Hose Co. No. 1, Charlevoix Fire Department, will give a ball the night of Feb. 22. It will be a masquerade. A dollar spent for the fire department now and then, is well spent.

—Miss Minnie Payton, daughter of County Clerk and Mrs. D. S. Payton, went to Grand Rapids Monday for a two-weeks sojourn with relatives and friends.

—Mrs. Ella Tillotson, deputy great commander, L. O. T. M. M., installed officers at Bellaire Tuesday night, and will perform the same official duty at Elk Rapids Friday night of this week.

—Mr. E. S. Stacks informs us that he has taken a contract to supply the Sugar Co. with 700 tons of limestone for next year's use, and work has already been commenced in quarrying the product.

—It is a pleasure to recognize merit wherever we find it. Not all the talent at the Majestic Theater is behind the curtain. Miss Lottie Cohen, as pianiste, and her sister, Miss Tibbie, as the vocal song illustrator, elicit many compliments for their really artistic work.

—Because we were under the control of a man who carries a hypodermic syringe, we were unable to be present and report the Farmers' Institute, which occured at the court house last Saturday. All present agree in saying that it was one of the most enjoyable and profitable farmers' gatherings yet held. There instructors, broaden technical knowledge of agriculture and its dependencies but they exercise another function, namely as important in improving social conditions and welding community interests. In both attendance and interest the Institute was an unbounded success.

—I. Z. Merriam, an old and highly respected north side citizen of Charlevoix, is critically ill at his home.

—Prosecuting Attorney Nicholas and attorney Chas. of East Jordan, were in town Monday on legal business.

—Frank P. Gelken and wife, of Pellston, leave next week on a two-months trip in Colorado, California and Oregon.

—Elmer Johnson, wife and daughter, left Monday for a two months trip to visit relatives at Ashtabula, Ohio, and other points.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Baker left for Grand Rapids Sunday, via Petoskey, to purchase furniture for Baker's Inn. They returned yesterday.

—Miss Florence Smith returned last evening from a two months visit in Owosso. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. H. O. Smith, and son.

—Henry Wood last Saturday bought of Van VanLeuven, the Hotel Elston bus line. Mr. Wood now owns and operates both the Hotel Elston and the Baker's Inn bus line.

—Charlevoix is always proud of the achievements of its college boys and girls, wherever dispersed. The latest honor that has come to us is from the Columbia College of Expression, of Chicago, where Miss Nita Mayne, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Mayne, of this city, is a student. We have seen a preliminary program of a forthcoming production of Hoen's "A Doll's House," in which Miss Mayne is to appear as leading lady. You may always trust Charlevoix youngsters to acquit themselves creditably.

—We take the following from a St. Louis paper: "A balloon dance, in which the couples moved almost the floor with a score of variegated toy balloons floating above them, was the feature of the annual collation of the Y. M. H. A. given last night in their rooms at Euclid and McPherson Avenues. After the dance balloons were given as favors. The other favors of the collation were liberty bells, dinner pails, flapping roosters and fancy caps. Miss Sarah Levinson, of Charlevoix, Mich., led the cotillion with Sheppy Evans. The committee which had charge of the event was composed of the president of the society, S. C. Levenstein, Leon Friedberg and Henry Steiner.

—The home of Mrs. J. P. Pattridge has been the scene of a very pleasant house party, lasting from Friday night until Monday of this week. A crowd of young people chaperoned by Mrs. Pattridge and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Howard, and consisting of the Misses Mattie Bedford, Marion Harris, Merle Fells, Mary Kirschner, Bernice Shermann, Addie Holly, Lula Jackson and Elora Caldwell, Messrs Lewis, Hines, Emery, Levinson, Fetts, Vandermarck and Barney were the participants. On Sunday morning the young men took it upon themselves to get the breakfast, the table being very artistically set in timber-county style, a large turkey dinner was served by the young ladies at 6 p. m. Mrs. H. C. Cooper being the guest.

NARROW ESCAPE OF FOUR.

The Treachery of Round Lake Ice Nearly Causes the Death of Four Young Men—When Will the Boys Learn the Lesson.

The editor of this paper was a personal witness, Saturday morning, of an occurence that came very near causing the death of four young men. A large crowd of boys were skating on Round Lake, directly off the foot of Mason street.

Roy Allen went too close to the shore edge of the ice and broke through. Consternation reigned among the boys for a time, but they soon got busy, and two sleds, tied one behind the other, were shoved toward Allen, with Dave Howard lying flat on the outermost sled. He had almost reached his endangered companion, when he went through, and the two, about three feet feet apart, could be seen from the street, with only their heads above the water.

The situation was becoming critical, and a crowd soon gathered on the dock. Then Herl Ackert was pushed out on the sled, and joined his two companions in the ice-cold water. Walt Dennis followed in a brave attempt at rescue, and there were four young men with just their heads above water, at the edge of the thin ice, and a frenzied crowd on either side of them.

Meanwhile, a boat was discovered near by, and it was taken to the ice and dragged around to the opposite side. Before the boat reached the spot, two of the boys had been dragged out, with an ordinary front line and the boat crew gathered in the other two. It is needless to say that they were all very wet, and very much chilled by then fifteen minutes submersion in the cold lake.

It is a case that calls for both censure and commendation. Allen was careless, and it nearly cost him his life. Howard, Ackert and Dennis were heroes, and their conspicuous heroism almost cost them their lives, and calls for substantial recognition. Every one of the three deserves a medal of honor.

And now, the SENTINEL desires to emphasize what it has often said concerning Round Lake ice. There are conditions with which the boys are not always familiar. The shifting current, which comes with the shifting wind, cuts the ice from below, and makes it treacherous at all times. We are firmly of the opinion that the council should enact an ordinance prohibiting skating on Round Lake.

A Lincoln Birthday Celebration.

TO THE SENTINEL:

In a few days will occur the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of the most immune patriot and the wisest statesman of all ages.

It has been suggested in your paper by two of our citizens that we celebrate in an appropriate way on that day.

I was been advised that we hold a banquet, and charge one dollar a plate, a thing entirely out of the question so far as attendance is concerned, but few would take a part on account of the price, and I fail to see where simplicity and patriotism, as taught by Lincoln, would in any way enter into the occasion.

By all means let us celebrate in a way most befitting the memory of the great man. Let it be arranged so that all the schools of Charlevoix can take part by marching the streets with flags and singing patriotic songs, and then go to a place for other listings such as recitations, essays, declamations and music and songs by all, that would be free to all alike, and in my opinion would be enjoyed by every father, mother and child, at the same time would inspire upon the minds of our young people the duty we owe to the memory of our immortal Lincoln.

Then, in the evening arrange for those who can talk, to make speeches, give thoughts, reminiscences, and have

FOUR DAYS IMPRISONED.

Hazardous Trip and Trying Experience of the Mail Tug Violet—Ice Threatening and Food Scarce—Final Rescue.

In local marine annals there is not a case involving more hardship or greater peril than that of the last trip of the tug Violet, owned by the R. Beutel Co., and hailing from this port.

Her crew was Ed. Martin, master; Harney Martin, engineer. On board was one passenger, Charles Cross of St. James, on his way home from Chicago. She arrived here with the Island mail Thursday afternoon, making a good run. At one o'clock Friday afternoon she started out for the Island with fair prospects, but encountered a large field of ice about five miles this side of the harbor, which she could not force herself through.

Saturday morning found her still there, and from time to time all day the cable operator at St. James informed Charlevoix that she could be seen. But, on Sunday morning nothing could be seen of her from that point. At nine o'clock Sunday morning the information came by telephone from Cross Village that she was four miles out that place, inside a field of ice, and unable to extricate herself.

Meanwhile, the tug Margaret McCann started out from St. James, soon locating the Violet, but was unable to reach her. The same evening the McCann was joined by the Thunder, from this port, but both tugs were obliged to abandon their efforts. One very important task of the expedition, however, was accomplished—a liberal supply of food was sent to the Violet in a boat shoved over the ice floes by members of the McCann's crew. The question of food was one cause causing most anxiety on both sides of the channel. It was found that the crew was well toward the bottom of a box of canned tomatoes—the only edible article left on board. Both the relief tugs returned home Tuesday morning. The strong steel tug Berger, of Manistique, left that port yesterday morning, and, as we go to press, it is safe to say that the Violet is rescued. She is reported to be in good condition, with a ton and a half of coal on board.

An interesting phase of the affair is that W. D. C. Grunsaire, Mayor of Traverse City, came here intending to go to St. James on the Violet, on important business, and only at the last moment before the tug left did his friends here prevail on him not to take the chance.

Seventy-five pounds of lake trout were seized at the market of Mass Brothers, Grand Rapids, lately. The fish were far below the legal weight and were reported to the official by the dealers as so in as received. They were shipped from the Detroit Fish Company's station at Frankfort.

Grand Rapids special says: At a mass meeting held at Bemonia last night, which was attended by a number of the old trustees of the Bemonia academy, it was decided to rebuild the girls dormitory, which was recently burned. The estimated cost will be $10,000 and $2,200 was raised last night. Added to the insurance, this makes nearly half the required amount. The first contribution received was by mail from a former student who is now working his way through the U. of M., who sent 50 cents. The new building will be placed on the campus west of the academy. Addresses at last night's meeting were made by Hev. Putnam of Charlevoix, Mr. Ward, secretary of the Congregational Assembly association at Frankfort; Rev. Mills of Bemonia, and a number of business men from Bemonia and nearby towns.

President Hines Orphans.

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of the Industrial and Orphan's Home at Macon, Ga. who writes—"We have used Electric Bitters in the Home for nine years. It has proved a most excellent medicine for stomach, liver and kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth." It invigorates the vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite. "Invigorates and build up thin, pale, weak children or run-down people. It has an equal for all female complaints. Only 50c at F. G Hines & Co's drug store.

FOR A NEW POSTOFFICE.

The New Van Pelt Building For Government Occupation—Levinson & Co. to Occupy All of the Old Building.

It has just leaked out, and is well authenticated, that the new block that Van Pelt is to erect on the Bridge street lot recently purchased of Dr. Crouter, is for the postoffice.

The present quarters of the postoffice while well equipped in fixtures, is entirely inadequate outside the boxes. Much complaint has been made by business men of this delinquency, and the remedy seems to be close at hand.

The new building will afford quarters one-third wider and nearly one-third deeper, than the present quarters. This will meet a very pressing public demand—especially in the summer months. This removes the old Van Pelt building, and this means the enlargement of a Charlevoix mercantile concern that is always in demand.

M. A. Levinson & Co., who now occupy the south half of the building, will cut an arch-way through the wall and make a double store. This is another result of increasing trade and mercantile prosperity.

It is expected that by July 1st both the postoffice and the Levinson's will be in their new quarters.

POOR OLD "HAPPY."

Lost on the Soo City.—His Life a Romance.—Born in Luxury. But Died a Vag.

Maurice J. Cruise was his name, but he was given the appropriate sobriquet of "Happy." Well, Happy is dead. He shipped in Chicago on the ill-fated steamer Soo City, and went down with her off the Banks of New Foundland. He shipped as a deck hand steward, and was seen to go aboard by Frank Cullinan, of this city.

Happy was by trade a professor, and a good one. For eight months he had charge of a dancing school in Chicago; the other four months he has for several years worked in the SENTINEL office, excepting a few weeks with the deck-hands on the big boats.

The current story of his good lineage is borne out by the fact that he was well educated, and refined, exhibited marked evidences of good breeding. He was reputed to be the wayward son of a prominent Minneapolis physician. Soon after he was of age he was married to a well-connected young woman, but profligacy parted them, and Happy then went downward at a rapid rate. A daughter came to them, and Happy's most precious possession was a photograph of a beautiful young lady. He has shown this to the writer where she had detected a tear on his cheek. A former resident of Minneapolis, who related to us this history, also informed us that both Happy and his daughter were heirs to large properties.

MINE BLAST KILLS 100; TWO WEEKS' TOLL 150

Disaster Is in Same Shaft Where Fifty Met Death on December 20 Last.

CALLED SAFE BY EXPERTS.

Explosion Near Bluefield, W. Va., Hurls Cars from Workings and Traps Victims.

More than 100 men were killed Tuesday in an explosion in the Lick Branch mine near Bluefield, W. Va., the scene of a disaster only fifteen days ago, in which fifty-five were lost. How this accident was caused is not known, as experts had just finished an inspection of the workings and declared them safe. Nearly all the victims this time were Americans. The explosion happened at 8:30 o'clock in the morning, while the entire day shift was at work.

The force of the explosion was terrific and the shock was felt for from the scene. Above the mass of earth and slate between the workings and the mountain crown great trees stood in a solid form of the mountain, and from the mine mouth belched forth a hail of timber, coal, dust and debris, heavy timbers, broken mine cars and even a massive motor used to haul the heavy trains cars.

It is certain that the number of men entombed is more than 100. Just all of them are dead there can be no doubt. The fire in the mine and the deadly gases, to say nothing of the awful force of the explosion, gave no any chance of escaping any of the men alive. It is reasonably certain that some of the bodies never will be recovered. Some of them were blown to pieces and others buried beyond doubt. The fans which furnish the fresh air of the workings, as in the former explosion, were not disabled but are forcing fresh air into the mines.

Mine Foreman Bowers, who was near the entrance, was blown from his feet, but managed to crawl out safely, as did also Robert Smith, a miner. With the foreman was a mine mule named Mike, and he, too, was blown over. A rescue party, organized on the moment, rushed into the smoking mine and tried to rescue him. They were driven back by the deadly force of the after gases, and were compelled to leave him to his fate.

The explosion was one of the worst ever known in this region. In 1884, at the South West Virginia Improvement Company's mine, 300 were killed in an explosion. Tuesday's horror is the most disastrous since. The mine is owned by the Pocahontas Consolidated Collieries Company.

The explosion was in a different part of the mine from that of two weeks before. Share that retrospective the mine has been inspected by government officials and by the most experienced miners in the region, and all, it is said, expressed the opinion that it was safe.

It was on Dec. 28 last that the former explosion occurred in the mine, which up to that time had been regarded as a model mine. On that occasion the cause was not ascertained and the death list reached fifty. The last body to remain in the mine of the 70 dead was brought to the surface only last Friday, after which the State mine inspector declared that the mine again was safe and that work could be resumed.

CUBANS TO MAKE LAWS.

New Congress Takes First Step Toward Restoration of Independence.

Although the reins of self-government will not be officially turned over to the Cuban people until February 24, when the inauguration of President Jose Miguel Gomez and Vice President Alfredo Zayas will take place, the assembling Wednesday of the new Cuban Congress in Initial session marked the beginning of the end of the second period of American intervention in the island, which began with the breaking out of the revolution in August, 1906.

Little or no public interest was manifested in the gathering of the legislators, the purpose of this session being merely to pass upon the credentials of members. At the Senate building the twenty-four Senators not absently after noon and submitted their credentials. The eighty-two members of the House gathered in the new House of Representatives building, forming the Administrative Palace, which has been entirely reconstructed.

For the first time in the history of the republic the Senate enjoyed the dignity of occupying its own home, having met during the former period of Independence in an old tobacco warehouse.

The decree issued by President Estrada Palma convening the Congress makes a very strict requirement for the attendance of members. Neither senators nor Representatives will receive pay when absent from roll calls between twice and twelve noon, and be permitted to grant leaves of absence in more than six-tenths of their membership at one time.

Bills establishing a cockfighting and national lottery will be among the first to be introduced.

BLAST ENTOMBS 240 MINERS.

Forty-five Bodies Recovered from Shaft at Vesuvius, Hungary.

In an explosion of fire damp in the Anka coal mine at Vesuvius, Hungary, which was followed later by a dust explosion and fire, 240 men were entombed. Sixteen living miners and the bodies of forty-five dead persons thus far have been brought out of the pit. The fire has been held in one locality, and it is hoped that the remainder of the entombed miners will be rescued alive. The town of Vesuvius lies three miles southwest of Budapest and has a population of some 15,000.

DEATH TAKES RUSSIAN ADMIRAL.

Rojestvensky Succumbs to Heart Trouble in St. Petersburg.

The death is announced of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, who was in command of the Russian fleet in May, 1905, when it was practically annihilated by the Japanese in the battle of the Sea of Japan. The death of Admiral Rojestvensky, which occurred in St. Petersburg Thursday, was due to neuralgia of the heart.

Sinovi Petrovitch Rojestvensky was about 60 years old and for years bore the reputation of being the most coolheaded and scientific officer in the Russian navy. He distinguished himself in the Russo-Turkish war of 1877 and was promoted to commander in 1882. In 1902 he was made vice admiral and was in far eastern waters at the time of the Russo-Japanese war.

In the summer of 1904 he started with the second Russian Atlantic squadron from the Baltic for Vladivostok. On the way some British fishing boats were fired on and strained relations with that country resulted. Anything in the far east Admiral Rojestvensky was joined by other Russian vessels and then had fifty-eight ships under his command. May 27-28, 1905, occurred the battle of the Sea of Japan, in which the Russian fleet was practically annihilated and its commander taken prisoner.

A naval court of inquiry sitting in St. Petersburg in 1906, imposed admiral Rojestvensky for surrendering to the Japanese but he was acquitted on the plea that at the time the surrender was made he was unconscious from injuries received in the fight.

Fifteen Years in Prison.

J. H. F. Herbert, former cashier and president of the Farmers' and Drovers' National Bank at Waynesburg, Pa., which failed two years ago for $2,000,000, was found guilty of wrecking the bank. He was immediately sentenced by United States Judge James S. Young to serve fifteen years in the penitentiary.

Conductor Robbed and Slain.

William A. Anderson, a conductor on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad, fired from Cuthbertson to Pikeville, Ky., was robbed and murdered. ROBBER KILLS ONE; SHOOTS TWO Man Is Then Fiercely Wounded in Battle with Smoke Potter.

Petrolia, Pa. A Smith is dead, Detective Wm. G. Devereux is probably fatally injured, Albert Clarke is fatally hurt and Boice Smith is dangerously shot as the result of an attempt by Clarke to hold up Anna Wilson's place on Smith street, in Oakdale, at an early hour Thursday. Clarke entered the Wilson place and at the point of a revolver commanded the inmates to hand up their money. The last he escaped to Douglass street bridge across the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad, which occurred two blocks from the police station, brought a squad of officers and the patrol to the scene. Smith was dead when they arrived. All the available officers started out to search for the robber and an hour later he was found on the bridge by Detectives Devereux and Herbert. As soon as he officers came up to the robber, he began firing, one bullet hitting Devereux in the stomach. Herbert also received a bullet in the arm.

HOLLOW WINE VICTIM MURDERED.

Prosecutor Tells Poisoned Stage Drink Reveals Crime Plot.

That Charles Lesley Pipsle, a young chemist, who died after drinking a glass of poisoned wine at a play given by members of the Methodist church in Maryland, Md., was murdered; that it had been planned in advance and that the three clerks in the case one of the strangest mysteries ever known in the government made by State's Attorney Blanc Dyer, who has charged Mrs. Lillian Pipsle, alias Lillian Wilson, with the murder.

Arsenic found in great quantities in the house and in the restaurant was the speedy notion of the attorney. At the time of the death of Pipsle it was injected into the case when, by a clerk of a drug store, was ordered to be sent for the jury and the privilege of holding a post-mortem examination of the body was arbitrarily refused.

TOPEKA HOTEL BURNS.

The Copeland, Filled with Kansas Legislators, Destroyed by Fire.

The Copeland Hotel, a famous headquarters for legislators and politicians, situated at Ninth and Kansas streets, one block from the State Capitol, Topeka, Kan., was destroyed by fire that started shortly after 4 o'clock Thursday morning. Every room was occupied, the guests numbering about 125, among them legislators and politicians of prominence throughout the State. The flames burned with such rapidity that most of the occupants were forced to use the fire escapes. L. E. Lambert, of Emporia, one of the prominent attorneys and politicians in the State, is missing, and is believed to have been burned to death. Many of the guests were injured, but none is thought to have been fatally hurt.

The Copeland Hotel was of brick construction, four stories high, and was one of the oldest hostelries in the State. It had a frame annex and a railway, and was elaborately supplied with fire escapes. The main entrance was on the Kansas avenue side. The origin of the fire and the flames sweeping up the shaft and through the main entrance. The fire started in the lower part of the building from some cause as yet unknown. The flames spread so quickly and before an alarm could be turned in were fast eating their way up the wide corridors and filling the open spaces with smoke. When the fire appeared at the front door some of the guests are continually returning to view the flames enough to be caught in the smoke. An investigation, however, showed that the fire had gone so far as to collapse of an alarmed coal mine.

MINE OWNERS ARE EXONERATED

Death of Sixty-five Is Fault of Companies, Says Coroner's Jury.

Let us see how men killed each other in the pass when firearms were not modern or did not exist, and when the opportunity to kill in battle was much greater than it is at the present time. Edward III. and Philip VI. met each other at Crecy Aug. 26, 1346, and lost killed and wounded and prisoners amounted in all to 42,000 men. The Black Prince met Chandos at Poitiers, 1356. This was right royal fighting and would have given war correspondents unmarkable material for bulletins. At Hohenlinden Dec. 3, 1800, the French lost 10,000 killed and wounded and 9,000, while the Austrians lo killed and wounded lost 8,000 and 12,000 prisoners were taken. Ney lost 6,000 wounded of that one day engaged the total losses in Napoleon's final war at both sides in 120 days. One might infer that the instrumentality of death was more of poor quality. Time is not time. The lack is that studies meet less in time of Napoleon than in the Civil War. At Marengo June 14, 1800, the French lost 6,000 killed and the Austrian loss between 10,000 and 12,000, or 19,000 in all, while the loss in the Civil War at Shiloh was 23,000, or, as Napoleon said, a battle of giants. Gen. Lee's casualties at Gettysburg, in other expressions of New York, City for the 65,000 killed, wounded and missing, $210,000,000, an increase of expenditure of $17,000,000 over the disbursements of January last year.

The commissioner of immigration is of the opinion that the tide of immigration to this country has not yet turned in our favor. Last year 1,285,349 immigrants of immigrants, during these years about 1,000,000 were sent back to their homes. The immigration for the year ended June 30, 1907, the commissioner does not look for the big inrush until next April.

CHICAGO.

Heavy financial operations incident to the January settlement and the annual elections made busy times at the banks. A lower commercial mortality again appears and result conditions gave strength, though liquidation is not yet at an end. Severe weather interrupted outdoor construction and roof buildings, but stimulated the demand for winter apparel, food supplies and fuel. The leading industries progress steadily, as expected, new demands for raw materials and finished products are showing conservatism, but the prospects generally brighten with the recognition of conditions. Distribution of commodities shows a gratifying recovery, absorption being much strengthened by improved information, power. Most markets are comparatively clear of burdensome stocks, and in some instances they are lower than last year. In metals, the most complication between the United States government and Great Britain would take place, and when this hope was disappointed they looked confidently for trouble with France over the Moroccan affair. Nothing came of it, however, and still the poor fellows rising to their hope of help from some unexpected quarter until some of them actually came to believe that supernatural aid would be extended at the last moment.

"The chaplains in the Southern army were as a rule very earnest men, good men, and encouraging the hopes of the soldiers, for they had been in civil and industrial affairs and ample funds are available. Leading industries grad-ually increase the volume of their output, and while in most lines both current prices and profits are still established in the declining months of last year are fairly maintained.

Disappointment is manifest in the iron and steel markets, demand lacking snip and values lower, the latter is a hesitating way. Better laying was expected, owing to cheap money and the rise of other extraordinary scenes were witnessed in the camps. At night, after a long day's work, the men would gather in groups for the first and gave the boy a wonderful cheer.

IROQUOIS CLAIMS BEING PAID.

Relatives of Dead or Injured in Theater Fire Receiving Checks.

After five years of litigation in different courts, the first settlement was made in the case of the 602 people killed in the Iroquois theater fire, which occurred in Chicago. A settlement was made, though which approximately $20,000 will be paid to the Geiger A. Fuller Construction Company to helps of this to-tive amount, which is the first. A suit form settlement of $750 a case was made by the construction company, which was one of the defendants in the different suits brought. By the action of Attorney Charles C. Spencer in dismissing the cases in the Circuit and Superior Courts the final dispute in the theater tragedy has been begun.

CHURCH LOSER IN ROBBERY.

Called to Bear of Home and Forced to Deliver $275.

Called to the door of his home in Bucyrus, Ohio, at an early hour by two masked men, Rev. Joseph Weaver was bound and robbed of $275 in money. Later two men supposed to be the same, three in a buggy, held the crew of William Parker and bound the men, robbed them of $40 in money and a quantity of harness and blankets. Mr. Weaver, who is 70 years of age, has been engaged in Bucyrus since Sunday last $275, which he received from parishioners, at his home. The thieves, who called to his door asked for this money, evidently being aware of its presence in the house. Mr. Weaver showed fight by the battle of revolvers.

TURKEY TAKES $10,000.

Austria's Indemnity Offer Reported Accepted at Constantinople.

After replying the Austria proposal of an indemnity of $10,000,000 because it amounted to a recognition of the idea that it should become operative, the Turkish council of ministers reconsidered its action, and accepted the offer. The Austrian minister at Constantinople, it is said, would become due the moment the offer was accepted. The acceptance will end the dispute over Bosnia and Herzegovina.

FLAYING OF PRESIDENT SETS CONGRESS AGO6

House by Vote Stops a Bitter Attack Made by Willet of New York.

GARGOYLE, PYGMY AND TYRANT

These Some of Epithets Hurled by Speaker—Practically Closes Before He Is Snagged.

The House by a vote of 126 to 78 took Representative William Willet, of Chenango, New York, of the floor of the day on a point of order that he was calling the President of the United States "tyrant" and "pigmy." Mr. Willet refused to withdraw the words. The House refused to allow him to do so.

His theme was "The Passing of Roosevelt," though he at no time mentioned the President by name. He used his usual picturesque designations for the chief Magistrate were "Nero gargoyle," "tyrant," "pigmy," "dessemant of Dutch trades people," "hay-trebing," "foundation of Hillingsgate," "initiation of a king" and "begins here." The effort was Mr. Willet's second to pitch in the President.

Mr. Willet was ruled out of order and forced to take his seat upon a point of order made by Representative Gaines of Massachusetts when he declared that the President had defamed the character of Admiral Schley in connection with the battle of Santiago. A vote was taken by the House whether the statement should be stricken out. Willett lost by a vote of 120 to 78. Democrats voted in the affirmative in the House voted with Mr. Willett. The Republican strength favored the absolutely. Mr. Willet's speech, which practically concluded his remarks and he received the verdict of the House with a smile.

Civil War Revival.

"One of the most remarkable features of the Civil War," says an old ex-Confederate, "was the generous revival of religion in the Confederate armies during the last eighteen months of the struggle.

"While most of the Confederate soldiers were loth to admit it, after the fall of Vicksburg, which opened the Mississippi and cut the Confederacy in two, and the awful defeat at Gettysburg which proved the impossibility of a successful invasion of the North, it became clear to every thinking man in the South that the cause was lost. And yet, self-examined that they were in the right, the soldiers could not persuade themselves but that in some miraculous way they would win. They battle of the Wilderness, when it is estimated that by five minutes 5,000 Union soldiers were wounded and killed. Gettysburg, Aug. 18, 1864, a carnage to be remembered. The Germans left upon the field 20,000 killed and wounded men. The French lost between 12,000 and 25,000. Prussia, situated in the seat of dangerous vicinities, was a battlefield in July, 1866, where the casualties side not stream of blood and Verk and Mauseville died with their teeth fixed in each other's throat. The Austrians lost in ten days fighting were 32,000. The Turkish losses have never been accurately known. They have been estimated at 20,000.

Just but not least of the fierce battles of the world where life was treated as a trifle comes Waterloo, June 18, 1815. The loss of the English and allies was 22,000 and of the French 33,000. Wellington's army could not have survived the ravages of the French and he knew but for the aspect of the allies, and England as an empire in the world's history depended on the field of battle as it did at Waterloo.—H. I. Cleveland, in Chicago Record-Herald.

War Incident Recalled.

It was years after the war, and some veterans of both sides were exchanging reminiscences as a banquet given by the Pickett's men. It was presided over by the first president of Col. J. Phillips, colonel of the 36th Virginia regiment, Pickett's division.

"The most terrifying sight to see, or hear, or feel, or smell, or taste, or think of, is a night attack," said Col. Phillips. "The imagination works with intense activity in the darkness, and even the peaceful times adds infinitely to the horror of a night attack. Nothing is so much more are the horrors of warfare lessened when the opposing forces are in sight of each other and the time of the commencement of hostile intention is the minute of dawn. Then we can see and fire through darkness—for it is the darkest possible night that is always meant.

"One of these night attacks in northern one the French hemmed them in 1864—I shall never forget—and because of its startling horrors, but because of a peculiar and sacred circumstance, almost resulting in the complete, disastrous defeat of the Confederates, with twelve regiments of angels to assist the Confederate cause, I, the poor man was insane; he afterwards died in an asylum. But there were many like him, and many, too, who believed in him and his prophecies. But in a wonderful way the Lord intervened in cases of insanity, both religious and otherwise, which occurred in the Confederate armies during the last year of the war. The commissary department sent to prisons during the time the men were almost starving their clothing was in rags and they were overcoats, blankets and rails, such as often occurs during a Southern winter, were unknown luxuries. Yet, more as because, in many divisions, there were no hospital tents and no drugs to relieve medicines nor adequate facilities for caring for the sick or dressing the wounded. Then brought in from the field. The religious revival began with the first sort. Every earthly hope had failed, and the poor men seemed to comfort themselves that in the end they had prayed in vain. In this world, help must come to them from a supernatural source.

The Sign in Battle.

Let us see how men killed each other in the pass when firearms were not modern or did not exist, and when the opportunity to kill in battle was much greater than it is at the present time. Edward III. and Philip VI. met each other at Crecy Aug. 26, 1346, and lost killed and wounded and prisoners amounted in all to 42,000 men. The Black Prince met Chandos at Poitiers, 1356. RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE STATE EXECUTIVES.

Deneen Urges Deep Waterway.

The biennial message of Gov. Deneen to Illinois served the double purpose of message and inaugural address. Its most important recommendations deal with the deep waterway, the reformation of the State institutions and amendments to the primary law. It recommends the creation of a board of central transportation the State board of charities, urges the improvements that are being made at the State institutions be carried to completion. On the deep waterway the message recommends that the plans formulated by the internal improvement commission be adopted, that the work be planned and a commission, preferably appointed and that provision be made for starting the work of digging the canal as soon as possible.

Gaest Hits Liquor Traffic.

In his message to the Iowa Legislature, that dared most effective regulations of the liquor traffic. "There is no doubt," he says, "that the trend of the times is in the direction of the thorough control and reasonable restriction of the traffic in intoxicating liquors. I would recommend that you amend the Congress relative to the interstate commerce in liquor, so that it would be definitely provided that the legislative for issuing a federal license for the sale of intoxicating liquors would be in the local community directly interested. The federal government should not legalize the liquor traffic in places where the people do not want it to be legalized or tolerated." Gov. Carroll in his inaugural address made a plea for a simplified ballot, conservation of the State's natural resources, and enforcement of prohibition.

Hoeher Governor's Talk.

Gov. J. Frank Hanly, in his final message to the Indiana Legislature said: "Alcohol must be held responsible for more than one-fifth of the national pre-mature deaths, of the 1,000,000 annual deaths, of the 1,000,000 annual deaths, of the sixty-three thousand of the sixty-three thousand of the sixty-three thousand of the United States subject to internal revenue taxes, the 19,000 of the 19,000 of the largest collections, $28,181,340.93. MINE BLAST KILLS 100; TWO WEEKS' TOLL 150

Disaster Is in Same Shaft Where Fifty Met Death on December 20 Last.

CALLED SAFE BY EXPERTS.

Explosion Near Blatefield, W. Va., Hurls Cars from Workings and Traps Victims.

More than 100 men are killed Tuesday in an explosion in the Lick Branch mine near Blatefield, W. Va., the scene of a disaster only fifteen days ago, in which fifty lives were lost. How this accident was caused is known, but experts had just finished an inspection of the workings and declared them safe. Nearly all the victims this time were Americans. The explosion happened at 8:30 o'clock in the morning, while the entire day shift was at work.

The force of the explosion was terrific and the shock was felt far from the scene. Alone the mouth of earth and stone between the workings and the mountain's crown great trees stood from the force of the concussion, while from the mine mouth hel-lud forth a cloud of flame, soot, film and debris, heavy timbers, broken mine cars and even a massive motor used to haul the heavy loads out.

It is certain that the number of men entombed is more than 100. Thirty of them are dead there can be no doubt. The fire in the mine and the dusty gases, to say nothing of the awful force of the explosion, precludes any chance of rescuing any of the men alive. It is reasonably certain that some of the bodies never will be recovered. Some of them were blown to pieces and others incinerated beyond doubt. The fans which furnish the fresh air of the workings, as in the fatal explosion, were not damaged but are forcing fresh air into the mines.

Miles Freeman Dawson, who was near the entrance, was blown from his feet but managed to crawl out safely, so did also Robert Smith, a miner. With the foreman was a boy employed in the building, and he, too, was blown over. A rescue party, organized on the moment, rushed into the smoking mine and tried to rescue him. They were driven back by the deadly fumes of the after gases, and were compelled to leave him to his fate.

The explosion was one of the worst ever known in that region. In 1884, at the South West Virginia Improvement Company's mine, 300 were killed in an explosion. Tuesday's horror is the most disastrous since. The mine is owned by the Pocahontas Consolidated Collieries Company.

The explosion was in a different part of the mine from that of two years before. Since that catastrophe the mine has been inspected by government officials and by the most experienced miners men in the region, and all, it is said, expressed the opinion that it was safe.

It was on Dec. 28 last that the former explosion occurred in this mine, which up to that time had been regarded as a model mine. On that occasion, the fire-damp was not detected and the death list reached fifty. The last body in connection with that explosion was brought to the surface only last Friday, after which the State mine inspector declared that the mine again was safe and that work could be resumed.

CUBANS TO MAKE LAWS.

New Congress Takes First Steps Toward Restored Independence.

Although the reins of self-government will not be officially turned over to the Cuban authorities until Jan. 28, when the inauguration of President-elect Jose Miguel Gomez and Vice President Alfredo Zayas will take place, the month ending Wednesday of the new Cuban Congress is filled session marked by the glossing of the end of the second period of American intervention in the island, which began with the withdrawal of the revolution in August, 1906.

Little or no public interest was manifested in the gathering of the legislators, the purpose of the assembly being merely to pass upon the credentials of members. At the Senate building the twenty-four Senators met shortly after noon and submitted their credentials. The eighty-two members of the House gathered in the new House of Representatives building, formerly the Admiralty Palace, which has been recently reconstructed.

For the first time in the history of the republic the House enjoyed the dignity of occupying its own house, but had not during the former period of independence in an old tobacco warehouse.

The device issued by Provisional Governor Magoon convening the Congress makes a very strict requirement for the attendance of members. Neither Senators nor representatives can excuse pay when absent from roll calls without leave and neither House will be permitted to grant leaves of absence to more than one-sixth of their membership at one time.

Bills establishing conflighting and a national lottery will be among the first to be introduced.

BLAST ENTOMBS 240 MINERS.

Fairview Bodies Recovered from Shaft at Vesspron, Hungary.

In an explosion of fire damp in the Aska coal mine at Vesspron, Hungary, which was followed later by a fire explosion and fire, 240 men were entombed. Thirteen living miners and the bodies of forty-five dead persons thus far have been brought out of the pit. This ice has held to one locality, and it is hoped that the entombed miners will be found alive. The town of Vesspron has only nine policemen of Budapest and has a population of some 19,000.

DEATH TAKES RUSSIAN ADMIRAL

Rojestvensky Succumbs to Heart Trouble in St. Petersburg.

The death is announced of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, who was in command of the Russian fleet in May, 1905, when it was practically annihilated by the Japanese in the battle of the Sea of Japan. The death of Admiral Rojestvensky, which occurred in St. Petersburg Thursday, was due to neuralgia of the heart.

Sinoi Petrovitch Rojestvensky was born in 1848 of Dutch Irish descent, "hay-tedder," "foundation of Hillingsnate," "instigation of a king" and "begins here." The effort and Mr. Willett was rejected.

Mr. Willett was ruled out of order and forced to take his seat upon a point of order made by Representative Cantor of Pennsylvania, who he claimed that the President had defamed the character of Admiral Schley in connection with the battle of Santiago. A vote was taken to the House and Mr. Willett lost by a vote of 126 to 78. Practically every Democrat in the House voted with Mr. Willett. The Republicans strongly favored the admiral of the navy. Mr. Wilson had approachingly conducted his remarks and he received the verdict of the House in silence.

Old Pennsylvania Shaft Collapses, People Fear Earthquake.

Sandertown, near Latrobe, Pa., and the surrounding vicinity is in a state of panic as the result of an earthquake shock felt Tuesday night, which was several hundred yards of the Henry Clay mine and caused about 200 acres of big fissures appeared in the adjacent ground. A number of houses near by were damaged. The people were thrown into a panic, fled from their homes and then cautiously returning to view the damage wrought by the supposed earthquake. An investigation showed that the depression to be due to the collapsing of an abandoned coal mine.

MINE OWNERS ARE EXONERATED

Death of Sixty-Five Is Fault of Companies, Says Coroner's Jury.

The coroner's jury in the case of a number of the victims of the terrible mine disaster at Monongah, W. Va., on December 6 last, exonerated the mine owners from any blame in the matter. The jury decided that the explosion was caused by over charged shot of gunpowder in room 21 of the mine and that 362 men were in the mine at the time of the explosion. Of the 362 men, 65 were killed, 250 escaped and 47 were rescued.

KEYSTONE PATRONS.

Pennsylvania Has More Than 50,000 in 677 Granges.

Hon. W. T. Creasy Succeeds Hon. W. F. Hill as State Master—Important Measures Adopted at the Recent State Grange Meeting at Altoona.

One of the greatest grange organizations in the United States is that of Pennsylvania, which held its annual meeting at Altoona recently. State Master Hill returned from his trip abroad to attend the International institute of agriculture at Rome, Italy, in time to attend his state grange meeting. In his annual address he remarked that there had been great progress in the state during the past year in grange work. Showing the progress made by the grange the past two years, $2500 was now paid to the national grange, whereas ten years ago it was less than $1,000.

Secretary J. T. Allman said that there was only sure before when as high as a number of new members were admitted in any year, but last year, when 7,295 joined. There are now 677 granges in the state, thirty-three organized or reorganized during the year, also five Pomona granges.

W. T. CREASY.

The executive committee recommended that the grange fire insurance company be increased and their work extended into new fields. But little progress has been made in the forming of a life insurance company, all propositions seeming to be too expensive or risky. They said that the grange banks in Pennsylvania had been a success and that the reports from all of them were encouraging.

The legislative committee reaffirmed the position it had previously taken in favoring the township road law vetoed by the governor. This law required that the state should pay 50 cents for every dollar of cash expended by the townships and abolished the $1 per capita tax. The committee believed that the state highway department should be reorganized and the present law be made more flexible to suit varying conditions. Some method should be found to reduce the cost of highways if the townships must carry the expense. It favored no second tax of state moneys that were not equally distributed among the counties, and especially so when a $1,000 state money goes only $3 tax and the owner of a $1,000 home pays $20. The committee expressed itself as unalterably opposed to involving the taxpayer in an interest bearing bonded debt. On the school question it said that a township high school should be established in every district and agriculture and manual training should be taught in these schools. Among the speakers at the public session was Hon. Willis Hays, assistant secretary of agriculture.

On the refusal of Hon. W. F. Hill to become state master Hon. W. T. Creasy of Cambria was elected to that office. F. B. Hemont of Bradford was reelected lecturer, and J. T. Allman of Thompsontown was reelected secretary.

Among the resolutions adopted were those indorsing compulsory teaching of agriculture in township schools; favoring the establishment of the existing transportation facilities. It was decided to make no change in the form of grange seals, but no effort should be made to induce a change of name of any particular bank. Another resolution provided for a bond to chief justice, which will be in charge of Prof. J. W. Johnston, but which is to be supported entirely by voluntary contributions, and good was raised immediately for the work. This plan, while it gives the economic moral support of the order to best option, does not materially meet the demands for other more permanent legislation. The newly elected officers were installed at the best session.

A Mild Recommendation.

The National Stockman is a recent house organ this of the grange. The national grange is a true representative of rural interests. It has a title to speak with authority on many subjects of vital importance to farmers. It is a non-partisan-partisan body that is what party grange and accomplishes more by reason of conservatism. Certain great corporations would not agree that its demands and interpretations are other than radical, but that is a fair's endorsement fact. They are reasonably conservative in the distribution of the great mass of wealth producers and thus have weight. The American people will not put their trust in any reckless radicalism, but want a leadership that is sincere in its interest with plain, hardworking, practical people, who want a square deal. The grange stands for that as it unfeelingly is, making very few mistakes, and it is gaining in influence."

BAY STATE PATRONS.

Encouraging Report on Literary Work of the Grange.

A Co-operative Organization Formed With $25,000 Capital Stock, but Distinct From the State Grange—Large Savings on Farm Supplies Anticipated.

The thirty-sixth annual session of the Massachusetts state grange was held in Worcester. The grange was never in a more prosperous condition in that state. There are now 250 members, an increase of 1,530 the last year.

Corleton H. Richardson of West Brookfield, master of the state grange, in his annual address said that the so great work of the grange could not be determined by the numerical strength, but by agricultural sentiment dominating in the lives of its members. The agricultural school at Monogue and the industrial institute at North Scituate would not have been realized but for the active influence of the order. Education must be the one great subject to engage the attention of patrons.

The annual report of Secretary W. N. Howard disclosed the fact that in the past five years the number of granges has grown from 169 to 218 and the number of members from 16,233 to 21,558. For the first time in the history of the organization the receipts at the secretary's office have exceeded $2,000 during the year. Pomona granges contributed $300 in the special per capita of 2 cents a quarter for members.

State Lecturer Gardner presented some interesting statistics. He said the literary work in the grange had been particularly encouraging. There have been 1,020 debates and 1,000 essays, in which 12,768 persons participated. There had been provided and read 1,781 papers, which were discussed by over 3,000 members; 1,291 speeches delivered grange recitations; 6,980 rendered vocal selections, 4,250 instrumental selections; 6,337 grave readings, and dramatic features to the number of 622 have been presented during the year, in which nearly 5,100 people participated. The total number of persons contributing something to the literary work during the year was 20,000. The combined attendance at grange meetings was 240,844.

To ascertain the amount of money expended by the granges in Massachusetts for the necessities of life the committee on co-operation held four meetings. A series of questions was also addressed to every subordinate grange, which elicited the following facts: Amount expended by the granges in Massachusetts for grocery bills and provisions, $2,570,000; clothing, $969,000; coal, $328,525; hay, grain and stoves, $951,400; grain, $2,104,225; fertilizers, $261,000. From these to transactions the committee figures that at the lowest estimate the granges can save on these $5,000,000 on fertilizers, $270,000, on grain $270,000 and on groceries and purchases $287,000 and on fuel $100,000 more enough to save every family in the order $60 a year in cash, or about $6,000,000 on the total. It was found that on orders received from co-operative different granges for flour it was able to save a dollar per barrel, on approximately 500 tons of grain $3 per ton was saved, and on thirty tons of fertilizer $125 was saved. The committee recommended, among other things, that the grange incorporate a company with a capital of $25,000, with shares of $5, to be sold to members only, the state grange to have no other official connection with it, than to indorse the movement. This recommendation of the committee was later adopted, and a corporation has been organized, with capital stock of $25,000. The manager has headquarters in Boston.

The grange fire insurance company reported risks outstanding Dec. 1, at $5,198,227 and the number of policy holders 3,065.

Among the resolutions adopted was one to establish subscriptions throughout the state, another calling for more stringent regulations of the speed of autos on the country roads. The parcels post proposition was favored, and legislation to prevent the depredations of deer was positive and far favored by the grange. The soldiers' bonus bill called out a lively discussion. There was a diversity of opinion as to what the standard should be, and it was finally decided, awaiting the decision of the supreme court on the constitutionality of the proposed bill law.

Frederic S. Lodd, chairman of the executive committee, concluded his report in these words, which should be emblazoned on the walls of every grange in the United States: "Let us not be nothing that we do not need or say anything we do not fully feel, but demand better justice and then show the world we will be satisfied with nothing else. Let us take no action at this meeting, but pass a resolution that we are not prepared to go home and work for and never cease working until the end is accomplished."

CHAPTER XVI.

Smith had rowed across the Ellen's Lake and out to the Greyhound swinging at her moorings. He had made a wide sweep and had unhesitatingly approached the starboard side under the quarter on the side away from the shore and quickly made fast to her. The tide was running strong and he had to have something to hold on to long from drifting down the lake to sea. He calculated that whoever might be on the Greyhound would be on the shore side, attracted thither by the noise and confusion about the house attendant upon his escape. He resolved to board it by the Greyhound's starboard quarter chain and then drift clear of her and row back to the Ellen. He could leave the men on the dock alone talking. He gathered that there was more than one on the Greyhound, slowly as ship-men on the Greyhound generally accompany. Her crew was large, evidently she had holidays.

He waited patiently until the coast was clear, then he had slid away, and he scrambled from the steady tramp of feet above to stand on the deck that two of the men had come below and that the whole remainder of a watch. Presently he heard the man on watch go forward. Now was his time. He slid out of the shadow, which had been passed through a ring bolt, and with the strong current carrying him swept the boat clear of the Greyhound. He broke out the oars and rowing as noiselessly as possible, headed the skiff towards the land. Fortunately the heavy fog had been anchored some distance offshore and it did not prevent him from rowing in the direction of the Sun alongside the pilothouse. Threading his way in the dark, he felt his bow bump into his boat. He stood up in the boat and could just reach the dolphin striker—that Ellen had schemed rigged—thrusting the boat firmly down in the dolphin, he had cleared the skiff and disappeared in the shadows down the stream. If he succeeded he would have no need of her. If not—well, he would be nearer his wife than a skiff. He was shaking every thing on scenery.

Cautiously drawing himself up on the dolphin, he looked through the Ellen's cabin. He was along the deserted gangway. So far as he could discern in the darkness of the night there was but one man on the deck, and he stood off by the gangway gazing at the shore. Smith, who had taken off his canoe and pulled off his boat, he stepped to the crept towards the unsuspecting Cuddle-ears. He moved as stealthily and as softly as a cat or a tiger. The backless seats were in the saloon, and he had to cross the opening made by the engineer's door. He had to cross to reach the unsuspecting man. He was upon the man before he knew he was there. Smith's hand was on his throat, his knee was on his chest, and he was down on the deck with the man underneath him. The man had dropped forward without a sound, but before he fell to the deck his assailant had closed him in his arms and eased him down silently. The seaman's shout was crushed, and he was helpless in the grip of a man who was capable of giving an alarm or, indeed, of making a noise. He had one arm pinned, and his one on the other side of the deck would have enough to do without the seaman, so silently hand Smith worked.

"I hated to do it," muttered Smith, straightening the man's limbs on the deck, "but I had to. It was your life or mine, your duty or mine, poor fellow."

There was a light burning in the cabin about him. The Ellen was provided with a hand lamp and the cabin was entered from the quarter deck. Not knowing exactly where he would meet, but ready for anything, the young man carefully opened the door, and, entering, came to a halt, astonished.

"Major Jones."

"Well," said the Major in astonishment, "who in the—"

"I tell you to keep quiet," interrupted the former man shrilly. "That's any another word except to answer my questions."

He slowed the barrel of the pistol in the Major's face, and he spoke. There was something about the look of his resolution that convinced the Major that the young man was not to be trifled with under the circumstances. He looked at the Major as if he quite so sound.

"Hand up," whispered the Yankee Cuddle-ears.

"Would you murder me?" inconsiderately inquired the Major as he obeyed.

"I wouldn't harm a hair on your head," answered Smith, much to the relief of a certain young lady who was listening, and through the curtained door started in great excitement, from the cabin close by.

"You were going to take my life," he continued, "more sneakily, I will admit, yours. You're her father. I mean to take this ship I came down in and I intend to do so."

"What do you wish me to do?" asked Jones.

"Go aft into that cabin yonder. I expect I'll be compelled to bind and gag you Mission! always tied the cabin door shut, and I'll come to your life or mine, if you know which it will be."

"The Major's face lighted with suppressed wrath, but he was helpless. Into the cabin he was shoved, with a hand on his gun, and he was left in the dark. The door was closed without a sound, but before he fell to the deck his assailant had closed him in his arms and eased him down silently. The seaman's shout was crushed, and he was helpless in the grip of a man who was capable of giving an alarm or, indeed, of making a noise. WHAT A BREWER SAYS.

Local Option Cutting Their Business —Discouraged at Outlook.

The following is what a brewer in one of the large cities of Ohio says in regard to the business, one brewer at least is looking the issue squarely in the face. He says:

"Our business has been hit hard. We are not selling our goods. Many of the counties about us have gone dry, and our production is greatly curtailed. I am convinced that prohibition does prohibit, regardless of what the circulars say which we send into counties in which contests have been and are being made.

Here is the situation: A county votes to abolish the saloons. In thirty days the results are clear.

The business is outlawed. A few of the old timers will go any length to get their drinks. They will journey to the neighboring city, if they have the money, or they will hunt the bootlegger in the back alley, or in the old barn. But these are exceptions and not the rule.

A large part of the drinking is done by men who drop into a saloon with a friend or friends. It is a social custom, nothing more. With the saloon gone, the custom is discontinued. Many men who take a glass of beer or a nip of whisky will not walk around the corner for it; most certain by they will not hunt a blind tiger or a bootlegger. They do not care enough for it, and, besides they refine to countenance that which public sentiment and a majority of the voters condemn.

There is no incentive for the average moderate drinker to drink clandestinely and alone. He will not do it. He does without and soon gets over the habit of using it at all. There is no more social drinking. That's out out, and that's where we browsers lose out.

And it is a fact that these moderate and social drinkers hit the business hard in these local option campaigns. Of course, many of the hard drinkers vote dry because they want it out of their reach, believing it will be better for themselves and their families. But the other fellows vote against the saloons for various reasons, and I have been surprised at reports brought in by our men to the effect that scores of our patrons are out openly for the dry ticket in their county contests. They have turned the tide against us in more than one instance, I can tell you.

I am frank to admit we are up against a hard proposition. Our common stock is down to five cents and our preferred is worth only 25 cents. The county rights are valueless and almost unanimously disastrous. These contests have developed an army of dry opponents who have become expert at the business, and they go from county to county until it is almost impossible to make any headway against them. In many of these Ohio counties the temperance people have organizations which I have never seen equaled in politics and I have mixed with politicians for a good many years.

What the end will be I do not know, although it looks to be in sight for us. I suppose that in a measure we are to blame, for it is true that we have pushed the business for the money there is in it without much regard for either law or decency.

Some of us would willingly agree to a stringent license law, but I doubt very much if the people of Ohio will stand for it. They think they have us on the run and even now are talking of bringing on elections in Montgomery, Clark and other counties containing large cities.

I am getting tired of this losing fight and nothing better in sight. I had in cash the money I have invested in the business I would place it where it would yield better returns in a line not condemned by the public. I am frank to say I have had enough.

United States Survey Has Recently Published One of North End of Lake Michigan.

The United States Lake Survey has recently published new editions of four charts pertaining to its series of over 120 navigators' charts covering the Great Lakes. These charts are lithographs in colors from special engravings or drawings, prepared from government surveys, and, by congress closed direction, are sold at the nominal fee equaling cost of paper and presswork (mailing fee). Postage stamps are not accepted.

These new editions, all in Lake Michigan waters, are as follows:

New engraving of North end of Lake Michigan, above ann east and west shore south of Kewaunee, extending thence to Mackinac Island in the straits and embracing the whole of Green Bay; scale 1:240,000 (1 inch about 3¾ miles). This chart is of decided value to vessels navigating the dangerous waters in vicinity of the Beaver Island group of the Manitous, and to those running to Green Bay ports. The many new soundings made by the lake survey since 1901, and important modifications of sailing routes occasioned thereby, are incorporated. Price of chart is 15 cents.

New engraving of Waukegan Harbor, Ill., showing entrance channel and inner harbor, plat of the town, and the bordering hydrography of Lake Michigan; scale 1:5,000 (about ⅞ inches to the mile). Prepared from special survey of 1907, with current locations bended to date of issue. Price, 10 cents.

New engravings of Sturgeon Bay Canal, and Harbor of Refuge, showing this entire waterway connecting Lake Michigan and Green Bay, and the adjacent waters at either side; scale 1:20,000 (2¾ inches to the mile); also enlarged hydrographic chart entrance and town of Sturgeon Bay on scale 1:10,000 (2¾ inches to the mile). It embodies recent surveys, showing improvements and amended sailing lines from both ends of the waterway. Price, 15 cents.

FOOD THAT MADE MEN GREAT.

Deserved Tribute to the Worth of "Coffee and Sinkers."

It is related among the distinctions of the old Putnam house, now established before the advancing skyscraper, that it "made popular what afterwards became authentically known as 'coffee and sinkers.'" This is speaking too much good of the dead. No landlord and no hotel made the popularity of the sinker with the coffee accompaniment. Coffee and sinkers are as old as New York, and presumably earlier the Dutch conquered a wilderness. The Dutch succumbed to the English, but the sinkers went forward to new conquests.

On a diet of coffee and sinkers reporters have grown into managing editors, lawyers have developed into congressional leaders, binding politicians have blossomed into conventions. Even the presidents of the United States know them on their native heath.

They who have become great have not forgotten the days of their youth. So the sinkers become the brokers of ranks, the lodge of democracy, the vitamin stay of encouragement to struggling ambitions. The Putnam house disappeared, and sinker has carried away for its theme. Sinkers compelled recognition. It was not made for them. New York World.

BOUND THEY SHOULD HEAR IT.

Minister's Humorous Rebuke to Inattentive Congregation.

Dr. Smith Jellifie, the alienist, was once talking about campaign oratory. "Think," he said of a certain senator, "is such a thoroughgoing, painstaking, and withal tedious, campaign orator that whenever I hear him, I am reminded of an old-fashioned minister of my boyhood.

"This minister, one Sunday morning, spread before him on the reading desk a very thick packet of notes, and launched into a long, dry, heavy sermon.

"The reading of the sermon absorbed him. He did not once lift his eyes. On toward the end, however, happening to glance up, he perceived almost the entire congregation to be sound asleep.

"The minister frowned and paused. He struck the desk a resounding blow that awakened his parishioners. Then he said:

"'My good friends, this sermon cost me a great deal of labor, and I do not think you have given it the attention it deserves. I shall, therefore, repeat it from the beginning.'"

Severe.

"Mr. Tightfist, don't keep dog Minnie in this benighted village—send an English bobtail terrier instead of the musical shopkeeper." "Oh, yes, we do!" replied the man. "In a town or out-town here, sir!"

The present law sets the date back and adds fifteen days, making the season from May 1 to September 15. At present the season is from April 15 to August 15. The reason for the proposed change is that streams in the northern part of the state are too cold in April.

—A leading and public spirited citizen recently asked us this question: "Why don't the business men of Charlevoix have an annual banquet and "tuitfest," as they do in other northern Michigan towns? A little sociability among the business men would be just what ails us." The citizen was correct. His question is a mystifying one, because it disclosses a lack of that homogeneity that is so essential to the general good.

TUG VIOLET IN CHARLEVOIX HARBOR

Northerly Wind Breaks Tug Loose —Brought in by Tug Pamelee. Sold to be Dismantled Very Little.

The tug Violet, which was imprisoned in the ice off Cross Village a week, lies in Charlevoix harbor very little the worse for her rough experience.

After several unsuccessful attempts by three tugs to release her, she was abandoned Friday. The crew was taken off by the tug Pamelee. They arrived here Friday night. All live at St James.

Saturday morning a high northerly wind broke the ice loose, and about 10 o'clock the Violet was seen drifting and rolling heavily to the northward of this port. At noon she was a mile off the pier, and the tug Pamelee went out and picked her up.

She was very little damaged. On board was some miscellaneous freight and a lot of household goods, which were put off on the ice. Ed. Martin was her master, Barney Martin engineer. Charles Cross was a passenger.

And here follows another strange feature of the case. Sunday morning the household goods were discovered in the ice about two miles off this port. The cold snap of Saturday night had frozen the ice solid for miles out.

The owner of the goods is here with his family, having come with the hope of reaching the island this winter. He represents the concern that is building a saw mill at the head of the island.

LATER—The Violet left here under convoy of the McCann Monday evening, and arrived at St. James at mid night.

The Absorbing Question.

No issue has ever confronted the electors of Charlevoix county that is so peculiar in its relation to the frank expression of public opinion, as that involved in the local option proposition. Outside of the active votaries of the temperance movement on the one side, and the saloon people on the other, public sentiment is largely suppressed or hidden, for ostensible reasons. Only the poor devil of an editor must declare under which flag he serves, or be put down as either a coward or nincompoop.

In rounding up the evidence that must decide the question, we find arguments that have premises and arguments that have none, we find sophistries and delusions. As the field is viewed, we find, on the one hand those who battle conscientiously in the cause of humanity, and on the other are those (not by any means confined to saloon interests) whose opinions are governed by the Almighty Dollar.

Seventeen thousand dollars per year of saloon license money will be lost! Yes, just more than seventeen thousand dollars will be turned into channels that will carry sustenance and comfort to the home and augment the trade of the grocer, the butcher and the clothier.

Another phase of the question, (in which Charlevoix and Emmet stand so politically alone among the other counties which have adopted the measure,) is the resort feature. Of course, the City of Charlevoix is the only portion of the county that is interested in this. We cannot bring ourself to the belief that local prohibition will have any perceptible effect on that important phase of our business. It is an easy matter for the resorter to bring a trunk full of booze with him, and he usually does.

But both of the foregoing points are not sufficient to meet the overwhelming array of facts and logic that stand out in characters of fire and blood in support of local prohibition.

No great reform was ever accomplished without a sacrifice, and no sacrifice was ever made that was long unrewarded. In the settlement of issues question issues should eliminate prejudice, and self interest yield to the interests of society and humanity.

The Hoyne City board of trade held an enthusiastic meeting lately, to consider the proposition of building a modern hotel in this city. Several well-known hotel men from outside have been looking over the ground and it is expected something will develop very shortly.

FRUIT GROWERS WILL ORGANIZE.

Farmers of Antrim County to Boom Intermediate Valley as Fruit Region.

A meeting of fruit growers and others interested will be held in the court house in Bellaire on Friday, February 12, for the purpose of forming a fruit growers' association for the development of the intermediate valley as a fruit producing region.

At the same time and place it is expected that an auxiliary association will be formed by the ladies, to be called the Horticultural society to Outdoor Art Society to work toward the beautifying with trees and shrubs of the homes and roadways of the section.

The Intermediate valley lies in the east center of Antrim county along the shores of what is known as the Intermediate chain of lakes, one of the famous inland routes of the northern resort region, and extending from Ellsworth, near the Charlevoix county line, south to Kalkaska county.

There is a considerable quantity of fruit grown in the valley now and many young orchards are growing or contemplated for the near future. But few of the farmers, however, are making the specialty of the fruit business, which it is thought the location, soil and climatic conditions warrant. The growers have in the past been victimized by jobbers in fruit trees, many of which were not true to name and proved worthless. The result has been more or less dissatisfaction and discouragement. Methods of harvesting the fruit have been primitive and injurious to the crop. A lack of systematic spraying and intelligent care of the orchards has operated to impair the quality of the product and permitted insect pests to flourish.

The organization will correct these evils and will seek to better marketing facilities and opportunities.

That the region is the natural habitat of the apple is shown by the thousands of wild apple trees growing in the second growth timber and on the so-called "Indian gardens" of this part of the state.

The organization will be the direct result of agitation started through local papers by Charles S. Gulle, register of deeds, and a fruit grower by way of recreation, and has met with a hearty response from all directions.

The ladies of the W. H. C. had a most enjoyable time at Mrs. Porter's home in Marion Thursday, Jan. 21st. The ladies going out to surprise her and they certainly did. A potluck dinner was prepared, which proved to be a banquet feast. Some of the ladies were an overdose that it required the efforts of the rest to revive them enough to walk part of the way home. They were all satisfied to repeat the visit, if asked to make Mrs. Pensley a visit on the following Thursday and all report a good time, and no accidents.

Capt. P. D. Campbell Abandons the Ocean Trip to Seattle—Leaves New York by Rail for the Western City.

A question now agitating the minds of S. S. S. members is "did Pete Campbell get cold feet?

The "round the horn" trip was abandoned in New York, and Capt. Campbell, with his son Donald, left for Chicago the middle of last week, telegraphing Mr. Campbell to join them there to take the overland route to Seattle. She left for Chicago Monday.

Capt. Campbell still is entitled to a "show down" on his return next spring, but the feeling among the members of the society is that he has forfeited the right to be classed as a hoity-weather sailor.

The cause of the flunk will certainly be investigated.

Thomas T. Bates, editor of the Grand Traverse Herald has been appointed by Governor Warner a member of the Lincoln Farm Association, a national organization to purchase the Lincoln birthplace and erect thereon a permanent national monument.

The body of Julius Dery, captain of the fish tug Iduna, that was wrecked in the storm of December 26, off Frankfort harbor, was discovered Thursday at Platte bay, about 12 miles north of here. The remains were conveyed to Frankfort, where a coroner's inquest was held.

East Jordan Enterprise: The law of Clink & Fitch have decided to relinquish operations in Mr. Clink will retain the present offices in the Munroe block and Mr. Dwight H. Fitch will open up in a new and more office in our city in the near future as soon as he can secure suitable rooms.

Frank Turcott, a young farmer of Milton township, was drowned one evening last week in Elk Lake. He had been in town during the afternoon and had bought a pail of shoes, some groceries and medicine for his wife, who yesterday morning gave birth to a child. Turcott was in town until 5:30 last evening, when he started to cross Elk Lake to his home on the other side. He was on skates and was gone long enough an air hole just before reaching the other shore.

Bogus Gaines. The location of a telegraph station in this city seems now to be almost an assured fact. The board of trade has been hammering after this proposition for more than a year, having written many letters and sent committees to interview the telegraph people, private enterprises have done much but without avail until now the problem seems to be nearer a consummation than at any time since the project was first broached. This week Wm. Sellers, representing the Western Union Telegraph Company, arrived in the city to look over the situation with a view of extending the system to this city. He went away very much pleased with the outlook here and said he ought to have a telegraph office here by at means, and he will report favorably.

Central Lake Torch: What's the matter with Northern Michigan and more especially with Charlevoix county and South Arm township? The first thing we know our neighbors from the south will be coming up here to escape the rigors of the winter season. Mr. Roy Fowler, one of our prosperous farmers living over near Intermediate lake, was unable to attend the session of the Farmers' Institute here this week because he was too busy with his spring jobbing, and this is no pipe dream, either. For three days this week Mr. Fowler has been riding a sulky plow behind a three horse team, turning over deep furrows in the mellow soil of his fertile fields, and this is the last week in January. We doubt if any of our friends in the corn belt can beat it.

LEAP FROM FLAMES TO WATER

Over three score unfortunate workmen lost their lives and many others were badly injured Wednesday morning in a fire which destroyed the interpretative crib in Lake Michigan, a mile and a half off 21st street, Chicago, used by George W. Jackson, the contractor, for the construction of a new water tunnel. Estimates of the fatalities ranged from sixty to seventy. Nineteen, who lived of the flame cribs and worked in shifts, were on the structure when the fire broke out. Many of these were burned to death before they could reach the shoots. Others, their clothes frame, leaped into the lake water regardless of the hostile. A number, unable to swim, sank beneath the surface.

Manned in a fiery prison, with no means of communication with the shore or off and the lyr Chicago, the workmen of Michigan all about them, one moment in a desperate fight for their lives, which was witnessed by crowds on the shore. As soon as the alarm was given prompt measures of relief were taken, but the quick spread of the flames in the wooden structure and the distance to be covered made these efforts all but futile. BILLIK'S NECK IS SAVED.

Sentence of Alleged Chicago Poisoner Commuted to Life Imprisonment.

Herman Billik, sentenced to hang on Friday, Jan. 29, was rescued from the gallows when Governor Deneen, on recommendation of the State Board of Pardons, commuted his sentence to imprisonment for life. The convicted slayer of Mary Vrzal, who five times was granted an eleventh hour respite, fell on his knees at the county jail and wept when the news from Springfield was conveyed to him.

"Life imprisonment means liberty," he declared. "I shall now have the chance I have been fighting for to prove my innocence.

Commutation of Billik's sentence is due to the continuing and subsequent confession of jurisy of Jerry Vrzal, man, with his sister, Emma Nelman and Bertha Vrzal, were the only members of the Vrzal family to escape death by poisoning.

We are of the opinion that even with the elimination of this testimony there is evidence to support the verdict of the jury beyond reasonable doubt," says the parole board. "The taking into consideration statements after sentence by some of the jurors we are warranted in the conclusion the death penalty would not have been inflicted."

Billik, who is 42 years old and was born in Vukar of Bohemian parents, was indicted more than two years ago for having poisoned five members of the Vrzal family. He was placed on trial in June, 1907, before Judge Altgeld. Barnes for the murder of Mary Vrzal, the oldest daughter, and was found guilty on July 18, 1907. He denied his guilt and blamed Mrs. Emma Vrzal, mother of the prosecution because he had incurred her enmity.

TWO SEA GIANTS VOTED.

House Grants Demands for Battleships to Cost $30,000,000.

Two ships, held full sway in the House Friday and the navy appropriation bill, carrying $17,000,000, including $18,000,000 for two first-class battleships, was passed just as it came from the committee. The Japanese war scare was the sole topic in the discussion of which the battleships both sides joined in addition to the passage of the bill favorable action was taken by the committee on the fortifications bill, provisions for naval batteries in the Philippines, Hawaii and Fort Tracia.

By a vote of 190 to 80 authorization was given for the construction by the United States of two of the greatest battleships in the world. This policy was taken despite the opposition of some of the President's Republican colleagues in the House, powerful Democrats, and even the leadership of Speaker Cannon, and over the heads of the Democratic minority parties who unanimously believe it a mistake to go on arming the American navy. The action authorizes the construction of two dreadnoughts, leviathans of 20,000 tons, carrying 12-inch guns, the largest on any warship, and the two vessels to cost when in commission nearly $30,000,000. The vote was accompanied by a patriotic demonstration on the part of and in the gallantry participated in by both Democrats and Republicans and signifying, it was claimed, that the nation would be if a foreign war should actually threatened.

The opponents of the two battleships proposal, led by Chairman Tawney of the House appropriations committee, attacked President Roosevelt, virtually declaring that the present Japanese agitation was a ruse cooked up at the White House to induce Congress to vote for naval increases. Some time of these annual wars with Japan, which always occur simultaneously with the consideration of the naval appropriation bill by Congress. Advised by Taiwan, you know the rest of the time our relations with Japan are friendly, but as soon as the navy bill comes up for annual appropriation bill then we learn from the press and other sources that war is imminent.

Governor of California Says Objection to the Measures Will Not Pass.

As the result of an urgent message from President Roosevelt protesting against the anti-Japanese measures pending before the California Legislature, Governor Gillett has announced that no bill of the kind will be passed. The Governor has authorized the following statement:

"After conferring with the leading members of both branches of the Legislature, I am convinced that no legislation directed against the Japanese will pass. I am satisfied that the people of California, and particularly the members of our Legislature, appreciate the efforts being made by the Federal government and the representatives of Japan to stop immigration to this country of Japanese laborers, skilled and unskilled.

"There can be no doubt that the Japanese government is doing all in its power to prevent its people from emigrating to our shores. I am sure that it would be a serious mistake while they are so doing for us to enact any laws directed against the Japanese people. This question is one in which the Federal government is particularly interested and its wishes should be carefully considered and will, I am sure, by the people of this State."

Governor's Trade in Doorways.

Governor Deneen of the Legislature for 1909, according to estimates based on the appropriations bills, has amounted to $7,984,000 in income, which is a large one of $600,000 from the 1907 figures, and is $1,701,750,000 in exports, a decrease of $41,000,000.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Mr. Taft Defends the Constitution.

None of Mr. Taft's utterances are more cheering than those that he has been making on his speaking tour through the South regarding the Constitution of the United States.

We have had a great deal of hysterical expression of late years with the Constitution its limitations, its checks and balances and its safeguards of liberty. We have heard its impatience not only from those radic-brained agitators who, like the poor, are with us always, but also from the high places of the nation—from men who, because of their public trust, were assumed to know better.

Hence it is particularly pleasing to find that Mr. Taft does not share this impatience. For instance, Mr. Taft declared on the other day as "the most conservative people in the world, because we know a good thing when we see it, and propose to keep it"—namely, the Constitution.

He also expressed the opinion that Americans do not anywhere "wish to destroy their government or a change. It is to make it different from that which our forefathers contemplated in the formation of the Constitution."

If his Mr. Taft is entirely correct. Sane and sober Americans, realizing what their country is and stands for, certainly do not wish to change their form of government. They know that, despite the Constitution's attributed and practical difficulties, that government is worked out.

They know that with and under the institutions established and safeguarded by the Constitution the American people have attained not only great national strength and a large average of individual well-being than any other people in the annals of history.

Yet widely spread are a few in favor of amendments, this being sensible especially in view of the ever increasing demand in labor expectations and in some lines of business. Reports from the railways are of an increased merchandise traffic Northwest and Southwest, and of a large increase in the number of cars loaded, the greater portion coming from the Southwest.

Lumber shipments are more favorable than those of last week, the greater portion coming from the Southwest.

Failures in the United States for the week ending with Jan. 28 were 207, against 184 last week, and in the week of 1908 292 in 1907, 276 in 1906 and 228 in 1905.

Canadian business failures for the same period numbered forty, as against thirty-six last week and fifty-one in the corresponding week last year.—Bradstreet's.

IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

Cost of Maintenance $78,000 Outside of President Roosevelt's Salary.

BILL WAS $19,030 IN 1885.

Expenses of Chief Executive, Except Board Bill and Clothing, Borne by the Government.

Washington correspondence.

VERY four years a "suggestion" originates somewhere that the $50,000 per annum paid by Uncle Sam to the chief magistrate is inadequate; that the salary should be increased to $100,000. President Roosevelt, a new and retire advocates doubling the present salary. Will he have his three shots at the White House bill-eery and missed them all, combating the President's view, declares that $50,000 a year is ample.

The expenses attached to the White House have enormously increased during the past twenty years, and perhaps the greatest increase has been witnessed during the Roosevelt administration. This is by means the expenses that Congress have jumped from $19,000 in 1885 to $53,000 in 1905, exclusive of an appropriation of $25,000 for incidental expenses. The total expenses of the President's home and office are now more than twice the $78,000, as compared with $19,000 in 1885. Bills in addition to the $53,000 appropriation.

Prior to 1873 the salary of the President was fixed at $25,000 a year. It was increased in that year. Author Johnson vetoed the Presidency with the increased salary, and there was never a suspicion that he made a dollar out of it. He saved from his salary, which was only half of what William H. Taft will receive, a fortune of over $200,000. Presidently every expense, except his board bill and tailor, is borne by the government. For ordinary care, repair and furnishing in the White House and for the "contingent expenses" of the executive mansion Congress appropriates annually $25,000 and $15,000 additional for official purposes" the sum of $53,000 was appropriated for the current fiscal year. This estimate is made for 1910, and in addition an estimate is made of $15,000 for improvements, amounting fresh appropriations.

What the Government Furnishes.

The Government bears the White House at an annual cost of $5,000. It furnishes and keeps in repair at a cost of $9,000 a year, in addition to annual appropriations for improvements amounting fresh appropriations.

Washington Is Hot.

Washington is a workman's more than five minutes after time he finds the gate locked and he is not allowed to enter until the half hour is up. This half hour is deducted from his wages. If he is late more than one or by the timekeeper of the Lazy Club about 5 cents for coming late.

If he is late more than one or by during a week everybody is aware of the fact, and he receives the third time he makes his appearance after starting time he is greeted with a terrific combination of sounds produced on any available material by his fellow workmen.

At certain periods the accumulated funds of the Lazy Club are divided among those who have proved themselves. It should be noted, but among the Lazy Club, that the fine of the workman is made to pay the early comers for his laziness. The last man tardiness was fined 10 cents, the "lazy-free" and funds accumulated during the year, and the money distributed, amounting to over 7 shillings a head.

His Deficiency.

A merchant died, leaving to his only son the conduct of an extensive business, and great doubt was expressed whether the young man possessed the ability to carry out the father's policies.

"Well," said the kindly disposed friend, "for my part, I think it very bright and capable."

"Perhaps you're right," said another friend, "Henry is undoubtedly a clever fellow; but take it from me, he can't do his father's job in the least like his father's shoes."—Harper's Weekly.

A Suggestion.

The Mistress—Jane, the dishes you have been getting on the table lately were positively dirty. What have you to say about it?

The servant—I think, mum, that you ought to get colored dishes. They won't show the dirt.

Old as the Hills.

"Wonderful discovery!"

"What?"

"The scientists have positively stirred up vegetables."

"Nothing new about that. The millionaires have been doing it for years."

THE GRANGE

Conducted by J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y.
Press Correspondent New York State Grange

A $16,000 GRANGE HALL.

A Model of its Kind—Modern and Up to Date in Every Particular.

Palmyra grange of New York state has recently dedicated a new grange house which has been pronounced the handsomest building of its sort in the state. The building, for which ground was broken June 8, is built on the clubhouse style, at a total cost expense of $16,000. It is a two story structure of pressed brick and tile, with a large basement of concrete and tile. In the basement and other parts of the building timbers are used for supports, thus doing away with posts and obstructing all obstructions.

In the basement is the dining room, which is 37 by 33 feet, without post or obstruction, and is thoroughly modern in its furnishings and very pleasing in decorative design. The kitchen and serving room is equipped with sinks, drinking boards and every convenience for serving lunches or banquets. In the basement are a with entrance hall and the furnace and coal rooms.

The second floor contains the assembly room, 56 by 33 feet. In this room is a stage, 25 by 12 feet, which is so arranged as to change scenery for entertainments. Bay windows, 14 by 8 feet, supply plenty of light. The seating in this hall is of steel. At each side of the reception hall are ante-rooms with modern equipment. At the main entrance the vestibule is floored with mosaic tile work. In addition to this reception hall, there is a parlor where entrance on the north. Two fire escapes leading from the main assembly room afford ample means of exit in case of emergency.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN STATE.

Vermont State Grange Elects C. F. Smith of Morrisville Master.

The thirty-seventh annual session of the Vermont state grange was held at Burlington. There were about 150 present, representing a total membership of 10,000 in 180 granges. The state master reported sixty granges organized during his term of office. He approved the holding of grange fairs if they be started on not too large a scale. He thought that many of the agricultural societies had not failed to become educational. "Fairs even entertaining by trying to do too much, and they had to resort to cheap, vulgar sideshows in order to make the fair a financial success.

"There was a warm contest over the election of a new state master. The present master, H. W. Ellsworth, of Pittsford, was defeated by C. F. Smith of Morrisville. The Pierce of Brattleboro, was re-elected, but declined to serve because of illness in his family. C. F. Smith of Morrisville was then chosen. The sixth degree was conferred on 20 candidates.

Resolutions were passed in favor of giving the state cattle commission power to compel owners to have their cattle tested with tuberculin where similar action exists; also one in favor of the bill now before the legislature placing a tax of 5 cents on all oleomargarine manufactured in the state.

Colonel E. Smith, the new master of the Vermont state grange, is a prominent citizen of Morrisville and one of the most prominent farmers in the state. Mr. Smith has not joined a neighbor since he became a member of the order. He was president of the State Dairyman's association for two terms. In his new position he will be a member of the executive committee of the National Master Buckeye of Concord, N. H., and State Master Healey of Connecticut will attend the meeting.

State Master Godfrey suggests that all persons who have resolutions to be introduced at the annual session should prepare them in typewritten and send them to their delegates promptly. This is a very important suggestion for the reason that when resolutions are introduced late in the session they almost receive the consideration at the hands of the committee that they should have. We may add that resolutions should be prepared with great care, made as brief as possible and concise, and they should be made to say just what they mean.

The state master also calls the attention of the delegates to the fact that this will be a working body. Delegates should not attend the state grange meeting for pleasure and amusement; they are there for work. This year the voting body will consist of fully 200 delegates, including the masters and every one of the chief officers. Delegates will find work on some committee. They should attend with a view of serving the grange and the order in general to the best of their ability. When all work with this thought in mind the best results will be accomplished.

There will also be a meeting of the county deputies of the state in connection with the state grange meeting. All county deputies are allowed two days' pay and their mileage. Among the topics which will be discussed are the following: "The Deputy's Obligation to the State Master," by J. J. Barker; "How to Organize a Grange," by Fred Sisson; "Grange Inspection," by W. F. Trant; "Propositions in Making Report to the State Secretary," by L. B. Purdee. This meeting will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 3, at 10 o'clock. The deputy's office is a very important one, as it represents the state master in his county and much benefit may accrue from the deputies' meeting.

It is probable that at this meeting of the state grange special attention may be given to larger and more practical co-operation among the granges in buying and selling farm products and farm supplies. If community is the example, which, though possessing drawbacks, may nevertheless be cited, they go back to humble life matter by the Bible. A co-operative organization has been formed with capital of $12,000. Some 70 tons of hay have been sold only to members of the Order. Grange stores in the past have not been very successful. Experience has been the fault of discriminating against nonmembers. In selling them to any labor prices for goods than members of the order. This cause is removed. The store in each county should be held by members of the order in that county, and should give a dividend on it when the business warrants a dividend and also a certain percentage as rebate on each dollar's worth of goods purchased. Thus members will have two advantages over the nonmembers, but the nonmembers will be able to buy as cheaply at the stores as the members.

THE DOMINION GRANGE.

The Order in Canada Is Progressing Slowly.

The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Dominion grange, Toronto, was the largest in attendance for years. The grange movement has made rapid progress in Canada the past two years and members have received much benefit from the order. There are now 1,000 granges, representing 40,000 members, who are paid up in the state grange, and after all expenses are met there may be enough one dollar fees for a fraction beyond exceeding 20,000 of there is but 200 members in good standing after the creation of the fund. In fact the county that number shall be entitled to a delegate, provided that such delegate or delegates shall be a citizen and further provided that all fourth degree members in good standing will be entitled to attendance at the state grange to receive the fifth degree. It is further provided, however, that Dominion grange may grant such one delegate to the state grange, but no county in which a Pomona grange may be situated shall be entitled to a delegate in lieu of a county. Fourth degree members in good standing are eligible as delegates.

Lectures of agricultural grranges will find the settles on grange work which appear in this paper helpful to them if carefully perused.

As Fully Understood It.

Little Bobby had never been to Sunday school before, and came home wide-eyed and excited to relate his adventures to his mother. After giving a flattering account of his teacher, he added: "And she told me to learn the opossum's creed."

Mere Beauty.

When a man tells a girl that mere beauty doesn't appeal to him he's trying in his blunt, clumsy way to comfort her because she isn't pretty.

NEW YORK PATRONS.

Notes and Suggestions Relative to the Forthcoming Meeting of the State Grange.

The annual meeting of the New York state grange will be held at Little Falls early in February and promises to be one of the most important of recent years. The growth of the Order in the state and its influence on farm legislation are so great that the proceedings of the state grange meeting are carefully watched by not only the farmers, but by the legislators as well. There was an increase in the membership of over 5,000 within the past year, making the total membership about 82,000. Governor Hughes is to be present on the evening of the second day of the session, and National Master Bachelder of Concord, N. H., and State Master Healey of Connecticut will attend the meeting.

State Master Godfrey suggests that all persons who have resolutions to be introduced at the annual session should prepare them in typewritten and send them to their delegates promptly. Vulgarity of Guzzeling.

There must be a satisfaction in torturing human beings, for it is done so often. Nobody blames a wife for imbedding her self-respect and remaining lunch, but there is little sympathy for one who deliberately drives a man to deeds of rudeness and violence. Nagging and indulgence in bad temper leave indelible marks on the face of a woman, on her voice and on her character. They skrivel up whatever sweetness nature has put into her disposition and make her unlovely, even in the eyes of those who feel in duty bound to give her affection. It is often hard to maintain allowance under provocation, but there is always the open door of escape, you know. A quarrel does not twice when fed from one side only, and what should be important to every woman with pretensions to refinement is the undisguised vulgarity of bickering. Education and refinement are supposed to lift us so far above vulgarity, but even the best of our saints sometimes.—Exchange.

Drudgery in the Kitchen.

The path of progress is clear. There is no more reason why the women in modern civilization should scrub and cook and care and dust than there is why these things should be done by men. The development of the proper mechanical and the growth of labor saving devices of all kinds will finally abolish the necessity of doing these things each day in each house, through the land. Co-operation, while it we are slowly learning to greet as a friend, will overcome the drudgery and make the life of a woman as enjoyable and eventful as that of a human.—Searing and Walsh in "Economics."

In Beautiful Sepulcher.

The last resting place of the great Norwegian novelist, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, is one of the most beautiful in its national cemetery, a place that could be hoped for by the side of a lake, at the extremity of a fiord, there is the cemetery of Ascheim, near Bergen, there is a natural grotto formed in the solid rock, which rises precipitously from the water's edge. Here the bones of Bjornson's ancestors are buried, and as the grotto is only accessible from the lake, the funeral cortege will have to make the journey by water.

Fresh Air for Complexion.

Tell a young woman that fresh air is good for her health and she may not take the trouble to try it to be as much of it as possible, but tell her that it is good for her complexion and she will sleep on the roof.—Jor than Bridge in the Ladies' Home Journal. And that is just what it is good for as much as anything else, for the complexion is the outward sign of good running order of things within.

Ahead of the Game.

Dykeman's attended a successful sleight-of-hand performance last night.

Dyker—So?

Dyker—Yes. I lost the conjurer a counterfeit dollar and he gave me back the change.

Somewhat Rough on Society "Man."

At dinner one evening a well-known actress was most amiable to a very young literary man who sat next to her. He was mightily pleased at being so much good humor with a fine actress. Suddenly she said, in her artless, pretty manner, "I hear you think I am part in a new play, and I have been watching you every dinner we were introduced. You don't mind, do you?"

Reducing Weight.

Boarhouse Owner—William, was you too heavy. Can't you take some thing off?" Jockey—"I'm wearing the lightest suit, and haven't tested to see if I can." Owner—"Then for goodness' sake, go and get shaved."—"Mollie.

A Lost Bet.

An Irish waiter named Kenny was lofted for his wit and ready answers. A party of gentlemen who were staying at the hotel heard of Kenny's wit, and one of them made a bet that he would say something Kenny couldn't answer of course.

A bottle of champagne was ordered; the one who had made the bet took hold of the bottle and commenced to open it. The cork came out with a "bang," and flew into Kenny's mouth. "Ah," he said, "that is not the way to Cork!"

Kenny took the cork out of his mouth and replied: "No, but it's the way to Kilkenny!"—Idem.

He Said It.

"Horace," remarked Mrs. Pinkers, "we are going to have company at dinner, and I do wish you would brighten up and look like an honorary pallbearer. Say something humorous."

The company came, and, with a few preliminary coughs and winks, which were intended to announce to his wife that the attention was about to be concentrated, Mr. Pinkers said, timidly, to the company:

"Yes, dear, what is it?" asked Mrs. Pinkers, pleasantly.

"Have you got all of your hair on this evening?"—Judge.

Not Her Goal.

"Did you ever hear of a man sued for divorce from his wife because she was a bean-ball player?"

"Naughty he did it because she didn't make enough bone runs."

About Happiness.

There is no more beneficial tonic than good cheer. It invigorates the digestive organs and has a magic effect upon the system. Giggling is not the thing, and it is a habit that brings sty sides, and soon spoils even a great lady. Why not laugh? It improves the appearance and makes one popular. There is nothing to be glum over, and, if there is, being glum will not help it. Laugh and the world laughs with you; cry and you will wish to hide you. Too girl so far wants to be beautiful must cultivate a good, old, hearty, hearty laugh. She must go out and enjoy herself, she must find plenty of laughter in her daily life. That is the only true way to live and the only way capable of bringing beauty.

Poetical Epitaph.

The epitaph collector displayed contemptuously the phenomena of a reverent and stately marble tomb. "A new epitaph," he said, "and one of the best in my collection. It is the epitaph of a lady of indomitable spirit. Her friends wanted to put on it, in her honor, 'She now lies at her rest.' But the lady herself, who was still fond of her husband, ordered the stone cutter to change the phrase to read, 'She now lies at her rest.' Is not that a good epitaph?"

Hen Fruit.

Not a little world wisdom lies in the conduct of the British press. Its managers do not let their instincts for gain stray after the superior appreciation of how things sold in heat look in cold print in the world ahead. They do not let their interests be the cutwers of their foreign critics.—Boston Transcript.

Her Kick.

"I don't mind finding a gray hair or two in my own hair," sighed the bachelor girl, who shows some few signs of the sere and yellow leaf, "but when I pull 12 for a nice bunch of shades brown curls and have to pick them out of chose, too, it isn't fair. Do you think it is?"

Man's Inhumanity to Woman.

In all the civilized cities of the world women is degraded by modern morality herself and hold herself cheap in public hall, theater and even in the street young, to what man of proper instincts would like to see his own sister or daughter the attitude and in the drapery so popular at such places? It all comes from denying to woman a responsible voice in the highest affairs and placing her on a lower plane. It is proposed to loudly forbid her to serve in a public house, because of its bad moral atmosphere, which man alone have given it, while public opinion allows her to make reckless displays on the stage of the theater and music hall.—Westminster Review.

This Time He Was Right.

Pat was a new policeman on the beat. He hadn't been over very long. So one morning when a crazy woman was screaming a waltz dream on top of an ash barrel that tried to think of a sufficient excuse for meeting her. The day before he had arrested a man, but when he reached the station house he had forgotten the reason for the arrest. But the waltz continued on the ash barrel and a crowd of men and boys had collected. So Pat bravely stepped in.

"Madam, I arrest yer. Yer a fraud, sinder, yer are! Yer stopping the traffic!"

THE REAL AMERICAN HEIRESS.

A Worthy Standard of Conduct the Best Inheritance Heritage.

To know that our's forebears were people of refinement, of culture, of gentle breeding, instead of heaping arrogance should challenge the love that is in one, lest he fall short as a representative of those in whose persons these graces once flowered, writes Hilda Richmond Grant in Harper's Bazar.

Inherited standard of life—let us put that down in our list of blessings. And for all inherent good which has come to us, let us be thankful, without the asking, and which may be lost only if we fail in our responsibility, let us delight to give thanks.

To American women, then, will to our children any true story of prowess of children, of their sires who are reverent waiting—of any great quality which has found expression in lives of any of their ancestors—so that they may trace themselves then forward with the only imperishable heritage. Story of Dying Trees.

Attention has recently been directed to the number of trees in Glasgow which are in a dying state, their sickly condition being attributed to chlorine. A correspondent mentions a singular instance in regard to a tree, from which a John Pattison planted in the center of his garden in Kelvinbrae on the birth of his five sons. Two of his sons died early in the nineteenth century, but from that date until 1850 when there were only three of the sons alive, one of the trees from which son Matthew died one of the trees and on the night of Frederick and John's death (some years before) one of the trees fell, certainly, as the writer remarks, a singular coincidence.—Glasgow Herald.

IN NEW ENGLAND;

Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island Patrons.

Interesting Features of the Work as Shown in the Reports of the State Grange Meetings.

One of the most active grange states in the Union is the old Pine Tree State, which has a membership of 25,000 and is active in everything that pertains to the interest of the great Order. Without going into a detailed report of the last meeting, it will be sufficient to note some of the points that were adopted. In the report of Merrill, for the dairy committee, will then now into were passed covering the dairy interests and demanding of the grange to present the subject to the honorable legislature. Dairy books must be improved and sanitary rules enforced. He believed that the sweet cream butterly should be encouraged and that farmers should cooperate with the national immigration commissioner in securing good farm hands. Hon. Walter B. Mason, for the committee on education, said, "There is no middle-ground between the school and the college, and we should try to discover the gap to bridge it." He believed that normal school institutes would be a great aid, but they should be an auxiliary to the farmers' institute. Agriculture should be taught in rural schools. Sanitary inspection of the schools was advocated, and the committee urged that the legislature take active use its influence in this matter. The grange placed itself on record as opposed to any change in the present arbitration clause of the insurance law. The committee on competition emphasized the importance of getting home to buy and sell and urged that this subject be given its proper place in the lecturer's hour in each subordinate grange. A class of about 200 took the sixth degree. Invitations for the next meeting were received from Augusta and Bangor.

NEW HAMPSHIRE GRANGE.

Excellent Reports From State Meeting Held at Portsmouth.

What is considered to have been one of the most successful meetings of the New Hampshire state grange ever held was its December meeting, also year. There were fully 1,500 patrons present on the busy day, the session. A sixth degree class of 284 was initiated. The only election this year was to the executive committee, which resulted in the re-election of A. J. Richardson of Littleton.

The report of the lecturer showing the theory work done in the subordinate granges during the year was replete with information. Until we look at these dozens one can scarcely comprehend the amount of work that is done during the lecturer's hour in the various subordinate granges. During the year there have been delivered in the subordinate granges of New Hampshire 4,831 vocal and 4,117 instrumental selections of music, 1,924 readings and recitations, 1,385 essays, 835 addresses, 87 sermons, 286 debates, 265 tableaux, there have been 2,929 discussions participated in by 14,401 participants, and the total attendance at these exercises was 105,115; 295 granges had 962 discussions during the year, 1,000 addresses, 1,000 essays, 1,000 recitations, 1,000 vocal and 4,117 instrumental selections of music, 1,924 readings and recitations, 1,385 essays, 835 addresses, 87 sermons, 286 debates, 265 tableaux;

CHAPTER XVII.

Having got possession of the prisoner this manly and experienced lady had lost no time in arranging and carrying out his price, Captain Smith sailed off and entered the cabin. Passing through it, he opened the door of the after cabin, out of the landing, pulled out the gag, and set the irate Major loose. For His watch had gathered poetry, his resentment had increased, during his period of detention and repression. He had been "done up" in the most ignominious way and had not taken place.

"I'm sorry," said Smith politely, "to have treated a gentleman of your age and position with such apparent discourtesy, but circumstances were such that I and my friends felt compelled to assume a hardened course to my nature."

"Hang been coming down, did you release me to insult me?"

"You are right," answered Smith. "I beg your pardon. I believed—"

"To take me a Northern prisoner, I suppose."

"To be you go free. You are a noncombatant."

"I want to be one long! You've taken my blockade-runner, you've taken my privateer. I hope you're satisfied!"

"Not quite, sir. There is one more thing I must take."

"That is?"

"The Major's sword."

"Take it, sir!"

"Thank you, sir. Will you kindly sit down at that table and write a note which I shall have someone take up to Mrs. Ellen requesting her to dress immediately?"

"Yes, I want."

"Further, sir, lest you are still a prisoner, you will, I hope, give me your parole not to leave the cabin without my leave."

"Why, I want to."

"I asked you a question, Major Jones," repeated Captain Smith, with a ring in his voice.

"I'm not accustomed to send for her," answered the Major, sullenly, dismay, "when in liberty."

"In liberty?" exclaimed Smith, springing at the door to get it open.

"The door is locked," said Miss Ellen, demurely enough.

"I am," Captain Smith turned to Major Jones. "Where are the keys, sir?"

"I don't know, sir. They were here."

"You took them with you when you went out with the ladies," said Miss Ellen from the inner cabin.

"Oh, yes, I remember," said the young officer, tumbling in his pocket. Drawing out the bunch, he tried hard to shove the door he succeeded in fitting one to the lock and opened the door. Out stepped Miss Ellen.

"Were you in there all the time?"

"Yes."

"Did you hear everything?"

"Every word."

"You heard this young ruffian threaten to murder me and never made a sound?" exclaimed the Major. "It was a pity with your other conduct."

"I knew he couldn't harm you, sir."

"But if he had?"

"I should have interfered."

"You've interfered enough in the last two days, you ruffian—"

"Pardon me, Major Jones," said Captain Smith, "but I will not allow you to address Miss Jones in this manner. Remember, you are still a prisoner."

"Am I a prisoner, too?" queried Miss Ellen.

"You are free as the air."

"What are you going to do?"

"We're going down to as fast as we can and I'm going out to sea with the two ships"—the Major groaned. "Will you go with me Miss Ellen?—your daughter is my promised wife, Major—do you prefer to stay with your father?"

"I tell you I will have none of her," interrupted the old man savagely. "She was betrayed me. She has been false to me, and has left me. If you want her, take her. I could wish you no worse fate."

"Sir!" said Smith, thoroughly indignant now, "if you give rules to another insult!! I ask you again!"

"Forgive me, Miss Jones, I beg pardon." I beg your pardon, I believe, I suppose."

"To be you go free. You are a noncombatant."

"I want to be long! You've taken my blockade-runner, you've taken my privateer. I hope you're satisfied!"

"Not quite, sir. There is one more thing I must take."

A FEW POLITICAL NUBBINS.

Some Thoughts Suggested By Experience and Observation. Others, Perhaps, a Result of Poor Digestion.

TEDDY AND THE ANIMALS.

The conflict between the President and Congress still has the boards, and it promises to continue through the brief month that remains of Mr. Roosevelt's tenure.

The editor of the SENTINEL remembers well the days when he crashed under the circus tent. He remembers well the uniformed man whose duty it was to "stir up the animals." When the lion roared at one end of the tent and the monkey chattered at the other, he always knew that the animal agitator was up and about.

Sometimes the red hot iron was brought out, and the noisy demonstration increased. Glory be! If the President has succeeded in converting the secret service into that sort of a weapon, more power to him. When the show is out we shall know more than we did when we went in.

We have heard it said that if you will catch a rar alive, singe it, then turn it loose, it will drive all the other rats from cover into the open. Why need we say more directly apply the simile?

If the present congress, at the end of two years, can show as clean a record of usefulness in the people's interest, or a like record of accomplishment, as Theodore Roosevelt's record of the past two exhibits, they can go home and look an honest constituent in the face

Why Is There No Slassnie Disturbance?

What is keeping our distinguished governor so quiet—he who hag fired Michigan republicans into the third term faith last fall? Is the unnatural silence indicative of a contrite spirit, or is it only the calm that precedes a storm?

We had expected, at about this time, to hear the firmament crack, and to see the planets shoot from their orbits. We would rendee unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, but we have in vain been holding our ears to the ground for some tour, harking for some lofty note of challenge from Michigan's knight errant—her first third term governor, but no sound breaks the oppressive silence.

It is said by the erudite Lansing correspondents of the Detroit papers that the governor has complete control of the present legislature; but what about the next one, governor?—The one that will elect a successor to J. C. Burrows?

"Barks is willin'," and Barks other name is Fred M. Warner.

That the legislature will this winter so amend the laws governing commercial fishing as to make them more in consonance with the interests of that important industry, "were a consummation devoutly to be wished." Our "Billy" Bennett in the second man on the fish committee and it will be here early in February.

The Office Seeks the Man.

Never in the history of Michigan has there been, in connection with the office of governor, a candidacy that, on a larger scale, is described in the aphorism—"the Office Seeks the Man," than that of Chase S. Osborne, just now on the high road to a second term.

To our personal knowledge, Mr. Osborne has "thrice on the Loupe-cal" declined to consider it, and after scores of informal requisitions in the lower peninsula had joined those of the north in urging him to accept. Progressm and Warnerism, with their innumerable minor ramifications, have kept Mr. Osborne comparatively in obscurity, so far as the governorship was concerned, and his unobtrusive nature has revel to strengthen these conditions.

And now, only because of the increased and increased importunate list of a large element in his party, has he consented to be a candidate. Chase S. Osborne is no less conspicuous for his ability than he is for that element in his nature of which we speak—unobtrusiveness. The qualities which appeal to your trust and chivalry are his in large endowment. His extensive business experience in his own state and travels in almost every part of the habitable globe, he is possessed of a mental and temperamental equipment that few men are blessed with. Probably no republican in Michigan stands better with his party. He has no affiliation with any clan or faction. He stands "foint square in every wind that blows," and is as stalwart and strong in his republicanism as the everlasting rocks of his beloved Lake Superior environs.

Chase S. Osborne will be the next governor of Michigan, unless the mountains of Saskatchewan and the floods of Georgian Bay are dumped into the Soo canal in the meantime.

Dear old Capt. Bontecou; how we miss him! When we hear the call of the political wild we look around for our old friend, and he is gone. The Petoskey Record of today is in point of editorial quality, one of the ablest papers in Michigan, but when Bontecou got into a fight you knew there was a fight going on. He wrote with the courage and dash of a cuirassier and the diction of a Prentice. In the fierce, he disdained the wildboar and chase the lion as his game. When he poired his lance for battle the journalistic knights and their armor bearers began to sit up and notice things. But his lance never bore poison on its point. Dear old Captain Bontecou; he was a man after our own heart.

To say that Taft will be the subservient tool of Roosevelt is a lie of the vintage of 1902, when they said Wm. McKinley would be the willing vassal of Mark Hannah. There are a good many people in this country who would not object to Taft and Roosevelt keeping their heads pretty close together, when it comes to formulating National policies, although President Taft can make good without any of Teddy's help. But Mr. Roosevelt will not but in. In the pages of our National history there cannot be found the record of a president who accomplished so much for the public good as has Theodore Roosevelt in the seven years of his presidential tenure, and that the work so heroically begun will be just as bravely continued there can be no doubt.

The Secret of Long Life.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolonge life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, expands wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. Its a godsend to weak, sick and debilitated people. "Kidney trouble had blighted my life for months," writes W. M. Sherman, of Cushing, Me., "but Electric Bitters cured me entirely." Only 50c. at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

Richard Drescher, son of M. R. Drescher, D. & C. railway agent at Deward, has been promoted to engineer. Drescher one day recently performed an act that showed presence of mind and probably had its effect in advancing him in the company's service. The day was unusually foggy and it was impossible to see more than a few feet ahead of a train. The mill tracks at this point run down a steep grade, the tracks also being between rows of houses. While "Dick" was taking a train of logs to the mill he suddenly came upon a 3-year-old girl playing with her little sleigh on the track. Dick blew the whistle and put on the emergency brakes. He got deliberately wacked to the center of the track and sat down on her sleigh. Dick brought the train to a full stop just two car lengths from the child.

—A housing eight pound boy at the home of W. C. Bellinger.

—Baxter W. R. C. will meet Thursday, Feb 11th, at 2:30 p. m. sharp. Special business.

—The tug Gelken, Capt. Gelken, made a Beaver Island mail trip Friday, encountering no ice to speak of.

—On Saturday Miss Maggie Coplter bought of R. V. Hillsdung the house and lot on Clinton street, next to the Episcopal church.

—Dr. A. M. Wilkinson writes his brother from New York that he is settled down at the hospital, and is making the most of his opportunity.

—Silver A. Crocker, of Boyne City, convicted of adultery at the recent term of court, was yesterday sentenced to imprisonment from one to three years, with a recommendation of one year.

—Lakes Michigan and Huron show a stage 23 inches lower than the average January stage of the past ten years, and 74 inches lower than last year, but 94 inches higher than in 1906 in January, 1896, the water was 333 inches higher.

—Dr. J. B. Tibbles, assisted by Doctors Armstrong and Monteagne, performed a very delicate surgical operation on Mrs H. O. Smith, at the home of her parents, on Park avenue, last Saturday. The operation was perfectly successful, and the patient is doing well.

—At a meeting of the City Fire Department held at the City Hall on Feb. 1, 1909, the following officers were elected: Pres., Chas. Hayes; Chief, Millard Olney; Foreman of Company, H. D. Marshall; Foreman of Hose, Elmer Marshall; Sec'y., W. H. Coates; Treas., E. J. Tuttle.

—We are in receipt of a letter from Olaf Nordman, dated Fort Arthur, Ont., Feb. 6th, stating that he is about to leave there for Lake of the Woods and Winnipeg, and expects to be home in two weeks. A Port Arthur paper states he sends up records the action of the common council in voting $4,000 to repair the Booth dock.

—Herbert Montague, of Traverse City, grand master of the Masonic Fraternity of Michigan, has been very favorably mentioned as a candidate for regent of the university of Michigan. Mr. Montague has been urged by prominent upper peninsula people to become a candidate for this high honor and has not given the matter serious consideration. He has also been urged by people in high places in the southern peninsula with the request to allow his name to go before the state convention, which is to be held at Grand Rapids.

—The High School Senior class are preparing to give their play about the middle of April.

—Word has been received here announcing the death, in Detroit, last week, of John Weed, formerly of this place.

—The ladies of the W. R. C. spent the day, Thursday, Feb. 4th, with Mrs. Lena Cram. The very popular potluck dinner was enjoyed by all.

—Regular convocation of R. A. M. on Monday evening, Feb. 15th. Also work M. M. M. Companions are cordially invited to be present. By order of E. H. P.

—Mrs. John A. Lynn left here Saturday to join her husband in St. Louis, where Mr. Lynn is engaged on a contract music work in the Anheuser-Busch Grand Turn park. He expects to be engaged on the work until late in the spring.

—National President, Geo. A. Scott, of Waverly, N. Y., and District Manager, E. D. Dunn, of Allegan, Mich., will be in Charlevoix, Tuesday, Feb. 16th. They will hold an officers meeting Tuesday afternoon at the Hotel Elston, and in the evening Mr. Scott will speak to the members of Charlevoix Legion, No. 47, at Odd Fellows' Hall. Address to begin promptly at seven o'clock.

—A Radical change in the U. S. Weather Bureau storm warnings takes effect April 1st, but the changes confined to the lights. Heretofore the red light above the white light denoted westerly winds; the red light alone indicating easterly winds. Hereafter but one light will be displayed at a time—the red light indicating easterly winds, and the white light indicating westerly winds. The lamps will be transposed, the white light above the red.

—The recent communications to the SENTINEL signed the proper observance of the one-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Lincoln, seems to have borne fruit. The ancient and honorable Charlevoix Historical Society will appropriately observe the day by an open meeting at the Congregational church on Friday evening of this week. It is eminently proper that the Historical Society should as the initiator in observing this historic day.

Chicago Record-Herald: Reorganization of A. Booth & Co., the $12,000,000 fish, game and sea food corporation, which was forced into the hands of a federal receiver last September, was determined upon yesterday by the creditors' committee which has aided the receiver in running the business for nearly six months. At a meeting in the Corn Exchange Bank Building it was decided that the business should be taken over and reorganization brought about as soon as possible. This action, it was declared, met with the approval of W. J. Chalmers, the receiver, and a formal petition asking that the company be taken out of court is being framed.

—H. N. Faulkner and wife, of Chicago, are in town a few days on business.

—Hudson O Smith, of Owosso, joined his wife here Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

—The Tug Gelken went out Monday and set nets, but the big end of winter seems to have arrived Tuesday, and a "stiff" is quite questionable.

—Home Co. No. 1, Charlevoix Fire Department, will give a masque ball at the Charlevoix Theater on the night of Feb. 22nd. Don't fail to give the boys a lift. Valuable prizes will be awarded.

—The ice harvest begun Monday morning all along the line. In all probability it will be a record cut, as there was a shortage last fall. About every available man will be employed for the next two weeks in this work, to say nothing of teams.

—Cable advices from St. James state that there are but nine inches of ice in the harbor, and the ice harvest is not yet begun. It is intended that an effort will be made Friday or Saturday of this week to make a Cross Village mail trip. Everybody was well on the island yesterday.

—F. G. Hines and family moved into their new Park Avenue home last week. In the construction of this fine residence the old portion was included, but there is very little of it left in evidence. The exterior appearance it is fully in harmony with modern architectural ideas, while the interior is a model of convenience and comfort. The residence is a credit to the city.

—The ordinance which we publish this week furnishes a key to the situation with reference to the future industrial progress of Charlevoix. There is it much that interests every citizen of Charlevoix. Between the lines it reads "Onward." In breathing the wintry blizzards let us consider ourselves with the thought that the sun will shine and the snows melt by and by.

—Chicago Record-Herald: Augustus A. Bush, who recently purchased the old home of General Ulysses S. Grant, on the Gravois road, St. Louis county, and known throughout the country as the "Grant Farm", has converted it into a model game preserve. He has purchased the old home of the general, the famous log cabin, which, after being knocked down and carried around the country for exhibition, has been returned to its former site and occupies a position on the farm overlooking the road. The place will be thrown open to the public as a museum. It is the intention of Mr. Busch to collect as many tenant reiics as possible and restore them to the cabin. The cabin itself is intact and just as General Grant left it, except that a few logs have been cut out of an inside partition. The old "spring house" has been preserved in its entirety. A fence of model barrels which was erected during the civil war surrounds the cabin. A veteran who served under Grant is caretaker.

—George Van Pelt writes us from Chicago as follows: "It is time that we took advantage of the "good roads question" and get help from the state and county. During the twenty-five years that I have lived in Norwood, I suppose it is safe to say we have spent $20,000 on the road between Charlevoix and Norwood, and the roads are mighty little, if any, better than they were a good many years ago. A sample of ordinary good road building can be seen on the last year's work near Van Ormen creek. The road is really not so good today as it was before anything was done to it, and if a culvert had been built and the same amount of work put in on the old road as there was on the new, besides paying neighbor Shaw this money, it would have been a great deal better than it is now. The sharp curve at the bottom of the hill going north on east is a very dangerous one at dark night, and a team could draw as much up the old road going south as it can on the new one, and the new part near the Santos farm was a big mudhole even when I left, and after the rains came, I bear it was almost impassable. I hope Norwood township will build a mile of of state road this year, then continue to build a mile every year. As a business proposition it is the cheapest and best thing we can possibly do."

The Manistee & Northeastern railroad has succeeded in selling $1,500,000 worth of bonds and the road will now be extended from Hookey toward Alpena, crossing the G. R. & I. near Fife Lake.

LOSS OF A GOOD CITIZEN.

The Death of I. Z. Merriam Removes From Our Midst One of the Most Valuable Members of the Community.

Iram Z. Merriam died at his home in this city last Thursday. Mr. Merriam contracted a cold about three weeks ago, which, although not regarded as serious, confined him to his home. During this confinement he suffered a stroke of paralysis, which gradually weakened his mind until the end came.

Deceased was born in Cassovia, N. Y., Sept. 7, 1832, where he grew up to young manhood. He was married at Cassovia April 10th, 1857, to Marion L. Dewey. Soon after he removed with his young wife to Fort Atkinson, Wis., where he was engaged in the mercantile business until 1868.

For about twelve years succeeding that date he made his home in Dubuque, Iowa, doing a flourishing business in agricultural instruments. In 1884 he accepted a position with the Esterly Harvester Machine Co. in Whitewater, Wis., which position he filled very successfully for a number of years, until the firm moved to Minneapolis.

In 1855 his wife died, leaving a son and daughter. In 1890 he was married to Miss Sadie Inwood, youngest daughter of the late James Inwood, of Charlevoix.

Mr. Merriam filled the office of postmaster of Whitewater, Wis., for four years, during President McKinley's first term. In 1906 he removed to Charlevoix. He served very successfully as alderman from the first ward for two years, his term of office expiring last spring.

I. Z. Merriam was a true man—true to every principle of dignified manhood. Probably Charlevoix never had a citizen who more fully enjoyed the respect of the community than he. He was always active in church and society work, and was considered most intelligently helpful.

The remains were taken to Whitewater Saturday for interment.

LOCAL OPTION SUBMITTED.

The County Solons Do a Unanimous Vote. Refer Local Prohibition to the People.

The board of supervisors met to adjourned session last Tuesday. A petition, with 2,000 names signed thereto, was presented to the board praying that the question of county prohibition be submitted to the people at the next spring election. By a unanimous vote the petition was granted, and the question submitted.

The matter of setting off certain territory in Charlevoix township into the township of Hayes was indefinitely tabled. Inasmuch as a petition forance with 62 names came in from Hayes, the matter may be considered as settled.

The proposition to adopt the Lorence voting machine was voted down.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

Death of Jackson Ingalls at His Petoskey Home—A Pioneer of Charlevoix.

Jackson Ingalls, an 1866 pioneer of Charlevoix, died at his Petoskey home on Tuesday, aged 72 years.

Deceased was one of the best known early settlers of "Dear Old Charlevoix, having come here in the early days of Fox & Cook in 1866. For thirteen years he was dock foreman for that firm, and had charge of its extensive steamboat fuel business.

His father, Hazen Ingalls, settled at Bear Creek, now Petoskey, in 1856, when there was but one other settler—Mr. Porter.

Deceased had been a charter member of Charlevoix Lodge, No. 232, F. & A. M. before demitting to Petoskey Lodge.

County Normal.

Deputy State Superintendent F. L. Cesler, of Lansing, visited the class Thursday of last week. During the day he gave several very interesting talks and many helpful suggestions.

Mrs. James Howey, of East Jordan, is appointed county chairman and will supply blank petitions for any lady that will set them in his effort to give to the women her equal right.

ALLIE MOORE.

The "Charlevoix Boy" Wins Everything Again—Left for Europe Yesterday.

Private advices state that Allie Moore, the "Charlevoix Boy," and champion roller skater of the World, left for London yesterday. Referring to an account of Moore's New York victories, taken from "the Billboard:"

"Allie Moore, the world's professional champion roller skater, won the three match race from Fred Tyrrell in handy style taking all four events in two heats and his little due jumper, two new world's records were hung up, the quarter and half mile. The quarter was started in 0:37, while the half was raced off in 1:14 1-5, taking four fifths of the world's record held by Wm. Rehmann, whose record of 1:15 will remain as the amateur record for that distance. Moore showed class, speed and generalship as a team of his caliber and possess to be successful, in following and judging pace.

On Wednesday the half and mile events were skated. Tyrrell was first to try the half, going the distance in 1:16 1-5. Stewart Gainer, of Saxa Ind., acted as pacemaker in this event for Tyrrell. When Moore started his half he skated the distance faster by 4-5 than ever registered for the distance, his time being 1:14 1-5. Two seconds faster than Tyrrell. When the time was announced it was accepted with cheers. The mile was the next event skated. Tyrrell skated all the first half after which he blew up and quit. Moore lined up on the mark and had Henry Becker, his pacemaker, well placed. After Becker had shifted Moore around in 0:30 1-5 for the first two laps, Joe Munch, the Northwest champion of Minneapolis, swung in for two laps and continued the fast pace Becker had started. Moore was taking incredible pace and giving a fine exhibition of speed and generalship, he always appeared cool and collected.

After Munch, Baker again swung in for two more when Munch again took two and Moore jumped out for the remaining half finishing the mile in 2:42 2-5, or two fifths slower than his own world's record. After the contest there was not even the least doubt but what Moore would win.

The following night, Thursday, the quarter was skated. Tyrrell going his third in 0:36 3-5. Moore lined up for his quarter and was away nicely. Henry Becker again as pacemaker, getting Moore away to a winning fashion. Moore's time for the quarter was 0:37 and was the only race in which Tyrrell showed himself, but the distance being so short the margin had to be small. Tyrrell again made a trial at the mile in which he was paced by Nip Heiter and Stewart Gainer and let him have more than he could handle. In the first half Tyrrell skated well, but not as fast as Moore. In the second half he slowed down and finished the mile in 2:38.

The fourth and last race was the two mile. The fact that Moore skated about thrice that Tyrrell would not skate. Moore's two mile was an exhibition of speed, pace, generalship and finish. Neal, who recently joined the professional class they were known in two of the fastest amateurs in Chicago. Joe Munch tended to the coaching of the pacemakers and showed that he knew how pacemakers should handled as he always had Becker and Neal out in the proper time, each alternoted every two laps. Moore skated the two miles in 5:33 2-5. Moore skated to his usual good form and having accidents should again hand the championship this season.

A Monster Petition.

The Woman's Suffrage Association are making a strong effort to secure 1,000,000 names to their petition that they will put before congress at its coming session. It has been twenty years since a petition was made to congress in behalf of the women of our land.

Michigan women have taken on themselves the task of getting 100,000 names, and the work is well under way.

Our governor has signed it, also the lieut. governor and other state officials; also leaders of the labor unions, leaders of the Grange, Lady Maccabees, W. C. T. U., Women's clubs, Ladies Society of Equity leaders, and Farmers Society of Equity.

TRUST CAN'T COLLECT DEBT.

Violator of Sherman Act Cannot Demand Payment of Bills.

The case of the Continental Wall Paper Company vs. Lewis Voight & Sons of Cincinnati was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in Voight's favor. The suit was brought by the company on a debt of $57,000, the payment of which was resisted on the ground that the paper company is a trust, in effect the decision holds that an illegal trust, organized contrary to the Sherman anti-trust law, cannot use the court to collect debts.

It was represented that Voight had bought over $200,000 worth of paper on which he had paid 50 per cent more than he would have had to pay if there had been competition. It was also set out that the Continental company had been organized to control the business of the various small paper factories of the United States and that Voight, as a jobber in its products had been compelled to sign a strict agreement on the threat that if he did not he would be sold no him and that it would be made impossible for him to continue in business. In a demurrer the company admitted that it was a trust and still contended that it could properly collect debts due it.

The Supreme Court of the United States has denied the application of the Consolidated Tobacco Company of New York for a rehearing. The case involved the validity of the Sherman anti-trust law and recently decided against the company and in favor of the law.

The company made application for a rehearing on the ground that the decree of the court was inconsistent with some of the conclusions set out in the opinion. The effect of the latter decision is to leave standing Judge Peckham's decision.

NEVADA RAPS THE PRESIDENT.

California Is Urged to Act Against the Japs in Spite of Him.

An anti-Japanese resolution was introduced in the Assembly of the Nevada Legislature the other day which is believed will be pigeonhole. The resolution was adopted in committee of the whole. After stating that the Japanese are acquiring lands and property in this and other States, the resolution says:

"The President has seen fit to take advantage of his high office in the exercise of his coercive and intolerable legislation in California upon this subject, whereby we view with alarm this attempted usurpation of the government of State rights, therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, the people of the State of Nevada, represented in Senate and Assembly, do hereby recommend to the State of California to pay no heed to, or yield to the admonishing of the President in this instance, but go ahead and enact such stringent measures as will and enact such stringent measures as will absolutely stop forever the encroachment of the Japanese and the further acquiring of foothold in this nation, and

"Whereas, We believe there is no danger of war with the Japanese, so far as we are concerned, and if there should, we can see no reason why we should not be able to whip the Japanese, or at least, if we should be defeated, we can see no reason why we should not be able to take our whole country with us."

CUBA IS FREE AGAIN; ISLAND CELEBRATES

Governor Magoon Turns Reins of Government Over to President Gomez.

ELABORATE CEREMONY HELD.

New Executive Is Leader of Liberal Party and Choice of People—His Regime to Be Progressive.

A new era of Cuban independence dawned Thursday when the affairs of the island, which have been admitted to by American officials for more than two years as a result of the revolution against former President Palma in 1906, were formally transferred to the newly-elected native executives. The coming of this new day of Cuban liberty was signaled by a general display of fireworks, the velvet blackness of the tropical midnight being set afame by screeching rockets and bombs which sent down showers of golden rain and gleaming, variegated lights. The streets of Havana, which were brilliantly illuminated and garlanded with chains of incandescent bulbs, were thronged until an early hour in the morning and a carnival spirit every where prevailed.

Thousands of people gathered around the Cuban Club throughout the night, where inaugural and farewell balls were held jointly in honor of President Gomez and Vice President Zayas and Dr. Magoon. An interesting ceremony was the presenting of the old battleship Maine with elaborate wreaths of garlands and bedecking at her masts on the protruding military top of a new American flag. This idea originated among the crew of the new battleship Maine, which now is in the Darter, who subscribed $170 for the purpose.

President Gomez was escorted from his home to the palace by detachments of troops and the rural guard. He rode in the same carriage with Gov. Magoon, who called for him with a native military guard of honor. The occupants of the carriage were greeted by a brief. Precisely at noon President Gomez stepped out upon the balcony overlooking the Plaza de Armas and took the oath faithfully to enforce the laws of the republic and defend its constitution. The oath was administered by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Afterward President Gomez made a short address.

Jose Miguel Gomez assumes power as leader of the Liberal Coalition party and as choice of the people at the elections last fall. The Cubans always held it against former President Palma that he was the choice of the American government. No such complaint can be made in the case of Gomez, for the Americans studiously avoided any thing resembling advice or suggestion as to the candidates or the platform.

THIEF HIDES 19 DAYS IN TUNNEL

Trapped in Barrow Under Store, He Waits Long to Surrender.

After eighteen days' imprisonment in a cramped, underground passageway beneath a cigar store in San Francisco which he is charged with having robbed, Edward U. Hand, a civil engineer who claims to be a graduate of the Iowa State University, was arrested while endeavoring to escape from the barrow. Hand crawled into the tunnel under three weeks ago and before he could get out again the police discovered signs indicating that the man who had taken refuge there had gone out and made his entry through the cellar. They at once posted a watch and Hand's retreat was cut off, though his presence or the existence of the tunnel was unknown. Hand borrowed until he made his way into a saloon which adjoined the cigar store and he obtained blankets, food, magazines and an electric light which he carried with him to illuminate his underground home. For nineteen nights the policemen on the beat sat in the dark in the cellar where Hand's bed had been found. Unable to escape by daylight because of his conspicuous appearance and a trail to the street at night because of the presence of the officer, Hand finally crawled out of his hole and surrendered. He claims that he did not rob the safe of the cigar store as is charged, but that this was done by a companion who discovered the combination of the strong box by watching through a hole in the floor as it was opened each morning.

$600,000 BLAZE IN ST. PAUL.

Entire Downtown Section Threatened, but Snow Stops Spread.

Fire starting on the second floor of the White House Department Store, between Cedar and Minnesota streets, on Seventh street, St. Paul, at 7:20 o'clock Friday evening, for a time threatened to devastate a large part of the business district of the city. As it was a half-dozen buildings were almost destroyed with an aggregate loss of about $600,000. There was no loss of life and no serious injuries are reported. The cause of the fire is not known. Favored by a high, northwest wind, burning cinders were thrown flying over the business streets of the city, and the occupants of many buildings began to remove their property. But the rain and snow prevented the spread of the fire, being effect upon other than the immediate surrounding buildings. The severest loss was sustained by the White House Department Store, $15,000; California Wine House, $125,000; Wadsworth's Fire and Paint Store, $10,000; Fire Hotel, $75,000; McQuaid Grocery Company, $10,000, and many other smaller losses.

IN HONOR OF THE POET POE

Elaborate Ceremonies Held and Statue Unveiled to His Memory.

The 100th anniversary of the birth of the poet, Edgar Allen Poe, was celebrated, elaborate ceremonies being held at the cemetery, which he lived at New York (Fordham), at Boston, his birthplace and at the University of Virginia, where he was a student. A statue was unveiled to his memory at Fordham and the old cottage was thrown open to the public by bulletins. Exercises were also held at the New York University and at Columbia.

BLIZZARD STRIKES COUNTRY.

Large Area Is Smitten by Severe Storm—Cold and Death Attend.

The worst blizzard in many years has been raging over the colonel and the most thickly populated section of the United States. Practically all that vast expanse of territory lying east of the Rocky Mountains States, and extending so far south as the mountains of Tennessee, was in the grasp of the storm king.

Rain, sleet and snow, accompanied by driving winds, marked the progress of the storm. The atmospheric disturbance, both by reason of the severity of the widespread storm and the loss of life, hundreds of thousands of square miles of territory affected, was almost unprecedented. Death, hard-ship, suffering, and a property loss of millions upon millions of dollars followed in the wake of the great blizzard of 1909.

Barely, if ever, in the history of the United States Weather Bureau had such a great stretch of territory been covered at once by one storm. Reports from that in every town, every hamlet, over every foot of land from the Mississippi river east as far as Albany and Oswego, N. Y., as far north as Marquette, Mich., and as far south as the Appalachian Mountains in Tennessee, the blizzard spread its fury.

Scores of trains were stalled in the Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan, hundreds of miles of them—were down; communications was interrupted; city and interurban electric railway lines in many cities were temporarily put out of commission; shipping was damaged; buildings were wrecked; live stock was suffering and freezing to death; humanity likewise was feeling the effects of the blizzard. Following closely on the heels of the blizzard came a cold wave.

DENIES RUDOWITZ EXTRADITION

Russia's Demand for Prisoner Refused by United States Marshal.

Christian Rudowitz, Russian political refugee, whom the government of the czar charged with murder in an effort to extradite him for punishment, is a free man. Rudowitz, who was arrested Friday at Chicago by Marshal Kern, who acted on a cable from the Russian government, was released from custody late Saturday afternoon by Judge Kohlsaat, who ruled that the case made out against the prisoner did not show that he was a fugitive from justice.

Rudowitz, who is a tall, well-built man, with a pleasant face, and who speaks English fluently, was in court when the decision was rendered. He was not in the court room when the decision was announced, however, being in the marshal's office at the time. When he was told of the decision he was very much pleased, and said he would go to his home in Milwaukee.

Rudowitz's case was taken up in the court of Judge Kohlsaat at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Assistant United States Attorney Stellwagen, who represented the Russian government, made a long argument in support of the extradition proceedings, but Rudowitz was represented by Attorney Frederick Ullrich, who argued that the charge against his client was not that of murder, but that of a political offense, and that Rudowitz was a political refugee.

Judge Kohlsaat, in his decision, said that the charge against Rudowitz was that of murder, and that it was not a political offense. The court said that the evidence showed that Rudowitz was a member of the revolutionary party in Russia, and that he was charged with having murdered a man who was a member of the police force. The court said that the evidence showed that the murder was committed during a period of political disturbance, and that it was not a common murder. The court said that the evidence showed that Rudowitz was a political refugee, and that he was not a fugitive from justice.

Rudowitz was taken from the Chicago Avenue station by Marshal Kern and his deputies, and was taken to the Federal building, where he was locked up in the marshal's office. He was then taken to the office of Attorney Stellwagen, where he was kept until the time for the hearing before Judge Kohlsaat came.

Rudowitz was arrested on the night of Dec. 17 last, at his home, 1000 Chicago avenue, on a cable received from the Russian government. The cable said that Rudowitz was a member of the revolutionary party in Russia, and was charged with murdering a member of the police force. The cable said that the murder was committed during a period of political disturbance, and was not a common murder. The cable said that Rudowitz was a political refugee, and was not a fugitive from justice.

Rudowitz was taken from his home to the Chicago Avenue station, and was there locked up. He was then taken to the office of Attorney Stellwagen, where he was kept until the time for the hearing before Judge Kohlsaat came.

The Great Tontine

HAWLEY SMART

Author of "Bulkeley Bundle," "Bound to Win," Etc.

THE GREAT TONTINE is a fine work of fiction, established with a truly wonderful and fascinating plot. It is a splendid story and deals with an original subject in a powerful way.

The incidents of this sterling romance are cleverly drawn and full of great originality and interest. The characters are life-like and the serial one of the very best ever offered.

CHAPTER I.

Herbert Pallingham, fifth Viscount Lakington, had inherited his title at sixteen years of age, and at the time of his father. There had been no other dinner on the occasion. The cleverest young one that has ever been heard of." answered Jones. "How on earth does he get his information?" murmured Jones. "He hasn't been out 2,000 leg, but continued dogmatically to lay him another sixty than ever. He hadn't been burst, as it has burst some of mine by.

"Mr. Who-Whom-Whatsoever," said Mr. Who-Whom-Whatsoever, "you are a very remarkable man." "Thank you," said the young man, and taking a good deal of it, between his teeth and hence."

"Well, I don't know, I rather like the Man myself." I remember, I think, we used to enjoy "Mr. Who-Whom-Whatsoever." "Yes," said Mr. Who-Whom-Whatsoever, "I

"Yes," replied the Viscount, laughing, "as it so happens I did mention the subject to him. Now, as you know, I'm not a betting man—never troubles his head about it. In short, but, with a view, presumably, to suit my limited appreciation, he puts his opinion of that scheme into our presence. He described it as being a yearling entered for the Derby to be run when he was twenty years old, and remarked further that he looked to pocket his money over and over and over, and making a good deal of it, between

UNIFORM SHIP TAX.

Lake States Discuss Plan of Legislation to Allow Vessel Owners Dodge Taxes

A Chicago special says: Governor Warner, of Michigan, today called to order a convention of governors of the lake states for the purpose of devising a plan for uniform legislation relating to tax on lake vessels. Besides Governor Warner, Governor Dunn and representatives of the governors of Minnesota and New York were present.

Governor Warner said that there are several systems of taxation which make some states more favorable than others to ship owners in the matter of taxation, with the result that those who are in a position to do so schedule their lake property in the favorable states.

"There is danger, if this thing is not stopped, that it will result in a competition among the states in a general bid for the taxes on those vessels.

"Most of the states has an ad valorem system of taxation, but there are some that do not. But even where we have this system it is not enforced.

"In Michigan we get about $22,000 tax a year on 250,000 tons under the ad valorem system, and in Minnesota they get only about $14,000 on 500,000 tons under the tonnage system.

"This kind of property is easily movable and can be taken from one state to another."

The Schools.

To the Editor:

The second half of the school term for the year 1909-10 is now being started, and it is a pleasure to be able to state that the general condition of the schools of the county, both rural and city, is excellent.

Much of the credit for this condition is due the educational institutions of the state, in that they are constantly making their teachers' courses stronger from year to year, that each year giving us teachers who are better fitted for the great work of teaching. Credit is also due patrons and school officers, who are growing more and more liberal with both teachers and schools by making the remuneration for work such that the teachers can afford to train themselves properly, and also by furnishing more and better things for the teachers to work with, but by far the greatest credit is due the teachers themselves, who have more generally come to realize that teaching school is a real profession, and that to be successful requires the conscientious and concerted effort of the teaching force of the schools.

One thing that places the writer particularly this year is the increased interest of the teachers in their own work and in the work of other teachers.

I have spent some time in each of the city schools of the county, and one can not help noting the fact in every one of them that the teachers are heartily supporting each other in every department of the work.

As one travels from district to district in the rural schools he will notice that, though the school buildings are two or three miles distant, yet a congregation of the teachers will praise helpful to them, and a lack of energy or exercise work that is allowed to develop in one of the schools will readily affect the other school, and will make the work of the other teacher more arduous and less effective.

It has always seemed to the writer that this influence that one school with its teacher will have upon another will increase as the distance between then decreases.

So I say again that the major portion of the credit for the excellent condition of our schools is due the teachers who are so loyally supporting their cause and who are so conscientious in their efforts.

Conditions at present point to a larger class of eighth grade graduates from the rural schools than we have had in any previous examination, and from what I have seen of the various students in this grade, I am convinced that a larger percentage of them will pass than has heretofore been able to write successfully.

The work of the new tramey law is another factor which has helped to bring about this condition of affairs, and this law is certainly doing a great work for our schools.

The semester tests in all of our village schools have been very gratifying to both the teachers and the pupils.

I have recently carefully examined the questions given in tests and the results of the work done by the students of the Charlevoix schools and I can safely say that not since I have been in touch with the work here have I seen a more complete set of answers given by pupils or a better spirit of work than may be seen right now in the Charlevoix schools.

The number of failures is very low, and the average standing very high. The questions which were given in tests were shown me, and I consider them very fair, covering the work well, and so arranged that the answers would require a practical knowledge of the subject, and the student who can answer the questions shown are certainly has a practical working knowledge of the subjects he has studied.

The teachers of the county, both rural and village, will hold an institute in East Jordan, on March 4 and 5. Good outside talent will be present, and a pleasant and profitable time assured all who attend.

Program and particulars of the meeting will be announced later.

J. H. MILFORD.

The Secret of Long Life.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, renews wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. It is guaranteed to weak, sick and debilitated people. "Kidney trouble had blighted my life for months," writes W. M. Sherman, of Cushing, Me., "but Electric Bitters cured me entirely." Only 50c at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

SCHOOL NOTES.

A Physical Culture class and also a High School chorus has been organized in the high school this week. For a week or two there has been free skating on Pine Lake, which some of the teachers as well as the scholars have enjoyed.

Miss Lila Bradley of Harbor Springs, spent the past two weeks in this city visiting her sister Miss A. M. Hendricks and other friends.

The class flowers of the Senior Class have been awarded to Leslie Crane as Valedictorian and Mary Dunlap as Salutatorian. These honors were given to the ones having the highest standings during their four years of high school.

Last Semesters examination marks were the highest received for a number of years according to the teachers' reports. Almost everyone passed in all of their subjects. We are all going to work hard and see if we can raise the marks still higher this semester.

Monday morning we were greeted by many new faces. The new faces proved to be members of the eighth grade who had satisfactorily passed the examinations. With the usual ceremonies they were taken into the high school as freshmen. We welcome them one all, our hearty congratulations.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS.

Well! Well! Beaver Island is to have a brass band. The instruments are expected almost any time now. Wagner who would'n' thought it?

Not within the memory of the oldest resident has the perch fishing with hook and line been so good as it is at present time. Some fine catches are being made. Not a few of the finny beauties measure fifteen inches and weigh upwards of two pounds each.

Capt. Ed. Martin takes this means of thanking the inhabitants of Cross Village for their kindness during the time the tug was fast in the ice of that port.

The tug-time dance given last week for the benefit of the band boys, was a decided success. Miss May Gallagher captaining the lady's price and Will Gibson the gent's.

E. C. Ludwig who has been on the sick list the past two week is reported to be improving very rapidly.

Oscar Martin has cut his gasoline launch in two and put five feet into her. When completed she will be the trimmest little craft in the bylou.

Capt. C. C. Allers, is confined to the house with an attack of rheumatism.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Fishon, Feb. 1st, a girl.

Daniel H. Green came very near loosing a valuable team one day last week by getting in the ice.

Stalling is excellent so far this winter. For several days last month the whole lookout formed one vast rink.

Mr. Frank Dunkey who has been on the sick list for several days is reported better.

We are under the impression that this fastest time ever made in filling and a tug was made by Capt. John McGuan. Three hours from the time he started he had his tug ready and was on the way to the assistance of the tug Violet.

New Boats For Arnold.

Geo. T. Arnold, of Mackinge Island, makes the following announcement:

"The Arnold Transportation company begs to announce that it now has under course of construction a side-wheel steamer for the "Snow Route" and a propeller for the "Snow Route." Both steamers are being constructed of steel and will be ready for service at the opening of navigation, 1909.

"The steamer for the "Snow Route" is to be over 300 feet long (5 feet beam, 150 feet over the guards) with a guaranteed speed of 19 miles per hour. She will make a round trip daily between Chicago and Sault Ste Marie during the tourist season, calling at Mackinaw City, St. Ignace, Mackinac Island and DeTour.

"The steamer for the "Snow Route" is 152 feet long by 28 feet beam with a guaranteed speed of 16 miles per hour. She will make two round trips daily between St. Ignace and Mackinac Island and the Les Cheneaux Islands.

"No expense is being spared to bring these steamers up to the standard demanded by the traveling public and they will not be excelled by any steamer on Inland waters in luxury and up-to-date convenience and comforts.

"With the addition of these new steamers to its present fleet, the Arnold Transit Company will be in better shape than ever before to care for the large crowds that annually visit the "Soo" and Mackinac, and its 1909 service should satisfy the most exacting.

"The company also takes this opportunity to express its sincere thanks for the generous support received in the past, and its aim will always be to warrant a continuance of same.

—Dig down and pay the SENTINEL what you owe it now!

—Michigan beet growers receive the highest price for beets in the world.

—Mr. and Mrs Frank Coatta entertained a number of friends at the Cottage restaurant Monday night.

—D. S. Dayton has leased the McKinnon residence on Park Avenue for two years, and will move into it this spring.

—Mrs. Wm. Wiles went to Cross Village Saturday, where she will join her husband and remain about two weeks.

—Last season's experience should brace the farmer up to plant all the acreage to beets he can possibly care for. Remember it is the cash crop of the farm.

—This is the third week that the editor of this paper has been confined to his home by pleurisy—two weeks of it a relapse, due to a contributary attack of "flood in the head."

—The indications are that potatoes will continue to be in the source of a luxury. In the Big City market the jobbers' price is 85 cents and farmers in the potato business are getting 50 to 65 cents.

—A good sign—the sugar factory people are not worrying any about beet contracts. The work goes leaving on, and the best area of Northern Michigan will largely exceed that of any previous year.

—If you owe the SENTINEL from $1.50 up, hand in the money! We propose to collect all subscription arrearages at once. Take due notice. We have special need of funds now and we propose to get them.

—The state game warden favor a general hunter's license at $1.00 a year, non resident license remaining as at present. It is expected such an arrangement would bring in $50,000 and enable the game warden's department self sustaining.

—A Lincoln birthday surprise party occurred at the home of Capt. and Mrs. A. A. Kent last Friday evening. Winter parties down at the life saving station embrace the perfection of social enjoyment, and on this occasion it was an exceptionally jolly gather ing.

—Will Marshall, employed at B. W. Miller's store, met with a most distressing accident Saturday. While opening a box, a piece of a nail went into his eye. A physician extracted the fragment, and it was thought for a time that the eye was destroyed but hopes are now entertained that the sight will only be impaired some what.

—Mrs. A. W. Hartwell, of Atwood, has been the guest of Mrs. Albon Smith for the past ten days.

—The Salvation Army will serve hot lunch at the room next to Shawhy's store, on Saturday, Feb 20th, afternoon and evening, to raise funds for rents, etc. Come and eat with us.

—E. S. Slucks began Tuesday building lee roads from the lime stone quarries to the sugar factory, and will at once begin work on the contract of delivering 80,000 tons of limestone for the campaign of 1909.

—The county road institute for Charlevoix county will be held at Charlevoix on Feb 27th 1909. High way commissioners in attendance will receive their expenses and one day's pay. Everyone interested in good roads is cordially invited to attend. The session will be held in the court house.

—Word was received here Tuesday from Harbor Springs announcing the death at that place, of Dr. Geo. W. Beaman, formerly of this city. Dr. Beaman came to Charlevoix as a druggist, for several years conducting the store now owned by A. B. Fleis ciner. Several years ago he took up the study of medicine, and graduated at a Detroit medical college. For some time he practiced here. He leaves a wife, who is the daughter of Wm. Cooper, of this city. He was a member of Charlevoix Lodge No. 262, F. & A. M—Harbor Springs special to the Grand Rapids Herald says: "Dr. Beaman committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid. He had been having trouble with his wife, it is alleged, and had been drinking. She reproved him for his alcoholic excesses, when he drew the bottle of acid from his pocket and in spite of her efforts to prevent him, drank its contents. A physician was summoned, but he died at 4 o'clock.

—Gov. Warner was the principal speaker at the closing session of the State supervisors' association Thursday. He touched on mortgage taxation and said he favored leaving the system as it is now, with a few light changes. He said he would have the tax, which is now one half of 1 per cent divided into two classes, one for the state the other for the county. A quarter of the half of 1 per cent he would give to the state and the remaining three-quarters to the county. He said that with the tax exempted the state annually loses nearly $800,000.

—Potatoes are advanced in the Grand Rapids market, jobbers selling them 75 to 80 cents per bushel. They are buying only to fill orders, taking no chances on present market conditions. One dealer said recently, "If it was not for the foreign importation Michigan potatoes would go to $1.25 per bushel and the held stock, which is over 52 per cent, would be cleaned up in a very short time. I cannot see any reason why the foreign spuds should not continue to arrive indefinitely, as the stock is large and it will have the tendency to keep the Michigan grown from climbing very fast."

—Commercial apple growing is attracting much attention during the past few years, and no business offers better inducements to the future generations this industry. The demand for good apples increases every year and the old orchards that have been neglected and allowed to die out will no longer be a factor in controlling the price of the fruit. Apple growing, like all other branches of farming, is becoming a science. The day is past when the old time hit or miss farmers can make good. It demands scientific work to keep up with the times, whether on a farm or in the city.

—Away back in 1871 Charles H. Bellinger came to Charlevoix with his family. There were very few stocks here then, and fewer watches, but Mr. Bellinger opened a jewelry store right on the "go by." Serving his apprenticeship in Ogdensburg, N. Y., and working at his trade a year and a half at Frankfort, he brought with him an expert knowledge of the business. By close application to business and an enviable record for integrity, he has built up a splendid business. The stock he carries, in variety and quality, indicates success. It was a pioneer deserved success, is Charles H. Bellinger.

—Detroit Journal: Myron Sherwood of Marquette, the last two handed miner in the upper peninsula, dropped down to Detroit today following the State convention at Grand Rapids. He is here on business, but is not neglecting to say a good word for the gubernatorial aspirations of Chas. S. Osborn. "The whole north country is for Osborn," says Mr. Sherwood, "and when he gets into the race the upper peninsula will stand behind him to a man. He is a big manan aide man, and his nomination and election will go a long ways toward healing the breaches which now exist in the Republican party."

LOOK TO YOUR COMPASS.

That Useful Instrument Does Not Always Tell the Unvarnished Truth.

Faith in the popular superstition that the needle of the compass points to the north was the cause of 217 impromptu stranded at the lake bottom last year.

Compass point north, indeed! Why, as long ago as Columbus' time it was discovered that the needle was willful, and America came near not being discovered for a century or two more in consequence. But it has remained for modern machines to discover the true pranks of the magnetized bit of steel.

When they hoved the compass on the United States battleship Maine it was found that the supposedly trustworthy needle pointed southeast. If the behemoth had laid out a course for Greenland by that compass he might have brought up all standing on the Cape of Good Hope.

The perversion of the magnet was explained by the undue attraction of a couple of steel turrets and a 12 inch gun. The mariner thereupon made allowance for the outward influence and sailed the seas still entire particular.

The growth of the merchant marine on the great lakes, the introduction of steel hulls in the hoppers of such cargoes as are carried in ore, actually magnetize, has disturbed the accuracy of the compasses on these inland waters, hence the increasing number of lumps on the subaqueous landscape.

A chart of the strandings for the last year has been forwarded from Washington to the local hydrographic office. It shows that groundings occur most frequently in the straits, the narrows where Lakes Superior, Michigan and Huron grow mighty. White Fish Point, in Lake Superior, has witnessed more than its share of stranding at that.

The south end of Lake Michigan has been fairly free from these unfortunate happenings, though one boat went hard aground in the north branch of the Chicago river and a couple touched bottom with more or less violence near Indiana Harbor during the year.

The 217 instances noted by the government cartographers were all of a serious nature. Only two strandings were accompanied by loss of life, but all of them occasioned damage of some measure of continence.

Ignorance of the compass is given as the direct cause of their difficulties. It is pointed out that loss of life and money, not to mention unwarranted delays, would be saved year's if the season knew a few more of the line points about the variation of the compass from the magnetic north.

The Chicago hydrographic office now is given credit for doing more than any other for the training of mariners. Large numbers are given instruction every winter, and the office already has an enviable record for turning out competent shipmasters.

—Good roads and good markets go together. You can not expect a thoroughly responsive market unless the roads leading thereto are improved to a measure of merit. We very believe that the good roads movement is as truly philanthropic and humanitarian as local option. The farmer with a good wagon and under him and a good road ahead of him to a market, is master of the situation. A bad, poorly drained, muddy road makes the farmer a slave and his wife a drudge. If we have any surplus energy left over from the local option campaign, let us unrest it into the good roads movement and the home seekers' campaign—the two causes most deserving of united, heroic effort.

Use Your Conscience.

The question of saloons or no saloons is now up to you, fellow citizens, and you must soon decide which way you will vote.

When a moral question confronts you, and you are compelled to decide between two courses, the conscience is the only safe guide.

Use your conscience!

If prohibition is adopted, the public coffers will suffer—no one denies that—but the public conscience will suffer more if it is not!

It is a question between the public purse and the individual conscience, and we believe the conscience will win.

Use your conscience!

As a matter of fact, time spent in arguing the question is time wasted—because there was never a question since the world was made that so effectually divides itself on its face as does the saloon question.

There are none so ignorant that they cannot grasp the philosophy of the question, and none so depraved that they cannot recognize the law of cause and effect. Both these classes are endowed with that God-given, soul quality—conscience—; the safest, truest soul-pilot.

Use your conscience!

Moreover, reverting to the matter of the public purse. Which is of the greatest importance to you, the public purse or your own private purse? In addition to the reference of the question to your conscience, use a little ordinary business horse sense! But—

Use your conscience!

Old Emmet Will Go Dry.

A prominent citizen of Petoskey, who occupies what he terms "conservative grounds" on the local option question, recently expressed the opinion to the writer that Emmet county will go dry by a large majority.

A somewhat careful survey of the ground indicates that Petoskey and Harbor Springs will go wet, but that the township will go almost solidly dry.

But a well organized campaign is being inaugurated in both Petoskey and Harbor Springs by the prohibition managers, and they express a hope of carrying both.

—The Record is in receipt of information through James Kehoe, local agent of the Pere Marquette railroad company that the arrangements for the home seekers excursion to be given by the Pere Marquette railroad this spring have been completed. The points from which these excursions will start will be Chicago, Englewood, Grand Crossing and South Chicago, in Illinois; Michigan City, Indiana; Benton Harbor, Michigan, and Toledo, Ohio. The rate of the fare for the round trip is to be $2.00, good to return in 15 days. This will allow those who take advantage of these trips plenty of time to inspect Northern Michigan's advantages. The dates of the excursions are March 23, April 5 and 20, and May 4 and 18.

—A deep water channel from Chicago to Buffalo via the "Soo" is in contemplation. In a few days a measure will be introduced in Congress providing, in brief, for the complete survey and perhaps for the construction of such a water way. Behind the project are practically all of the shipping, manufacturing and laboring interests on the great lakes. That the plan is entirely feasible is indicated by the fact that already there is a Chicago to Buffalo channel twenty one feet deep. This water way is the growth of many years and although the depth has been increased from time to time, it has not kept pace with the growth of commerce on the lakes. Contracts have already been let for the construction of a lock at the "Soo" which will accommodate vessels of three times the tonnage on the lakes at one time. The depth of water over the sills of the new lock will be twenty six feet and the cost of the project will be approximately $7,000,000.

POLITICS RULES IN NOTED MURDER TRIAL

Tennessee in Bitter Fight Over Slaying of Senator Edward W. Carmack.

BRINGS STATE PROHIBITION.

Factions Line Up on Guilt of the Accused Men and a Battle Will Be to the Finish.

"Our State is passing through the shadows. Her people are divided. We have fallen into the habit of hatred, suspicion and revenge." These words, uttered feelingly by Governor M. R. Patterson of Tennessee in his second inaugural address, had reference to the trial of Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, Colonel Cooper and John Sharp, former sheriff, who are charged with the murder of Edward W. Carmack, who represented his State six years in the United States Senate. The sentiment echoed back from every part of the State and more than ever it formed the mind and the thought of Tennessee on the stirring drama that has been going on at Nashville. The trial is more than a battle for the forfeit or saving of life. In the background is a great political play, wherein the characters check and tense feelings are at odds. What the end may be nobody knows, but into the shadows of Governor Patterson he spoke at the end of his address a statement of fact, but a prophecy such whether of the play his one prophecy.

By common consent it is agreed that State-wide prohibition sentiment had been brought about at this time of Carmack, its most conspicuous champion. It was the sentiment in the bullies of a man who had opposed him and he was the leader in the signing of legislation that brought this unexpected climax of the situation. Into the state had ever known. On the Jan. 12 the Senate passed by 20 to 13 a bill prohibiting the sale of liquor within four miles of any schoolhouse in the State. The next day the House followed the senate 50 to 29. Governor Patterson vetoed the bill and, with more resolution than he had force, even house vetoed it. Then for the statute books where it stands today, effective July 1 next. Governor Patterson gave as his reason for his veto the assertion that it was less the duty of the Legislature of self-government, that it set aside the reserved will of the people, that it would destroy property, impair State revenues, increase the burdens of taxation and undermine the public morals by making the people evasive, deceitful and hypocritical. Answering this attitude the Legislature promptly put a stinger on the issue of prohibition by passing a bill forbidding the manufacture of liquors in the State after the last of next January.

The State Anti-Saloon League had its convention almost within stone's throw of the court house, Preachers there laid stress on the "martyrdom of Senator Carmack." Attorney General Jefferson Mekers, representing the State, has indicated he does not wish and will not have on the jury, if he can avoid it, any man addicted to the use of intoxicants usually.

The trial of the infamous murderers of Carmack is going to be one of the most bitterly contested in the history of the entire State. On every hand there are charges of a marked jury. Charges of counterclaims are made and flow think during the selection of the jury, and it was necessary to bring hundreds of talesmen up for examination before the necessary twelve were secured.

While a large number of talesmen have been examined and excused as ineligible, much of the time has been consumed in passing upon the character of the men, their prejudices, their relations to clubs, habits of drinking or abstinence. It will be the endeavor of the defense, it is predicted, to show that the shooting of Carmack was done in self-defense.

ANTI-JAP BILL HARMS, ROOSEVELT MAINTAINS

Tells California Speaker Pending Measure May Cause "Very Grave Mischief."

WILL TAKE IT INTO COURTS.

State Laws Violating Treaty Obligations of United States Will Not Stand Court Test.

"The policy of the administration is to remove the incidents of friction by endeavoring the real object which the people of the Pacific coast have at heart with the minimum of friction and trouble, while the misguided men who advocate other measures are the equal which I protest are following a policy which cannot fail to result in the offence with the maximum of insult and which, while infinitely failing to achieve any real result for good, may easily accomplish infinite harm."

In this language President Roosevelt, in a long telegram to Speaker P. A. Stanton of the California Assembly, set forth the government's view of the anti-Japanese legislation now before that body.

Message Sent to Stanton.

To Speaker Stanton the President said the following:

"I trust there will be no misunderstanding of the federal government's attitude. We are jealously endeavoring to guard the honor of California and of the entire West in accordance with the desires of the western people by friendly agreement with Japan we are now carrying out a policy which will insure the interests and desires of the Pacific states, is compatible just and with our treaty obligations and with annual esteem and admiration between the American and Japanese.

"The Japanese government is really in good faith trying to do its part to carry out the policy, precisely as the American government is doing. The policy aims at mutuality of obligation and behavior. In accordance with it the curtain is drawn on the Japanese shall come here exactly as Americans go to Japan, which is in effect that travelers, students, persons engaged in international business, are such as shall have the freedom of our land, shall be free to come and go at pleasure or study, and the like; shall have the freedom of our schools to attend the same, and shall be given the best treatment, but that there shall be no assignment in the same by people of other country to the other.

"During the last six months, under this policy, more Japanese have left the country than have come in, and the total number in the United States has diminished by over 2,000. These figures are absolutely accurate and cannot be impeached. In other words, if the present policy continues for a year or two it works in the future as it is now working, all difficulty will disappear, and the Japanese, while at the same time each nation will retain its self-respect and the good will of the other.

"Such a bill as this school bill would be a most unfortunate thing, whether in the line of the object aimed at and given publicity to by its introduction, or in addition, the United States government would be obliged to take a hand in the matter in the federal courts to test such legislation as we hold it to be flatly a violation of the treaty.

"For this reason I refer you to the numerous decisions of the United States Supreme Court in regard to State laws which violate treaty obligations of the United States. The legislature would certainly cause much unhappy and unjustifiable friction and would probably cause the administration to be confronted with the necessity of a decision of a test suit which the people of the Pacific states have at heart to be brought and carried up to the courts.

"I am sure that the sound judgment of the people of California will support you, Mr. Speaker, in your efforts. Let me repeat that at present we are actually doing the thing which the people of California wish to be done, and I trust the governor will under which this is being done cannot do good and may do great harm.

"If, in the next year or two, the Japanese government sees that the arrangement which has worked so successfully during the last six months is no longer working successfully, then there will be a change in attitude, and the reversal by the national government of the policy which it has pursued the policy is working well and until it works badly should be given a fair and honest trial, and when changed it can only be changed effectively by the national government."

Sensational gains in the volume of payments through the banks and in the larger use of money indicate that further progress is made in commerce. Mr. Root pronounced himself "a convinced and uncompromising nationalist" at the school of Alexander Hamilton. He declared his belief in the exercise of the powers of the national government to the full limit of the constitutional grants, as these grants were conferred by the Hamilton school.

Nevertheless, Mr. Root pleaded for state power within the limits of constitutional authority. He said: "I believe that the founders of the republic intended that there should be a system of government with the maximum of insult and which, while infinitely failing to achieve any real result for good, may easily accomplish infinite harm."

"For this reason I refer you to the numerous decisions of the United States Supreme Court in regard to State laws which violate treaty obligations of the United States. The legislature would certainly cause much unhappy and unjustifiable friction and would probably cause the administration to be confronted with the necessity of a decision of a test suit which the people of the Pacific states have at heart to be brought and carried up to the courts.

"I am sure that the sound judgment of the people of California will support you, Mr. Speaker, in your efforts. Let me repeat that at present we are actually doing the thing which the people of California wish to be done, and I trust the governor will under which this is being done cannot do good and may do great harm.

"If, in the next year or two, the Japanese government sees that the arrangement which has worked so successfully during the last six months is no longer working successfully, then there will be a change in attitude, and the reversal by the national government of the policy which it has pursued the policy is working well and until it works badly should be given a fair and honest trial, and when changed it can only be changed effectively by the national government."

Parks of Washington.

Parks are the crowned and Congressional library grounds, the Union depot plant and the botanical gardens of the city of Washington boasts more than three acres in parks, excluding nearly 100 triangles and circles at street intersections and nodes upon miles of shaded asphalt streets, equal to the boulevards of many other cities. The largest of all these parks is Rock Creek park. This beauty spot covers 1,600 acres immediately adjacent to the geological park, which contains 121 acres, and its natural combination of parks and streams, hills and dales, trees and meadows yet to unite perfectly in a system of public parks is now city in the country. Additional appropriations are asked of congress every year for more parks and public playgrounds.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(Special Correspondence.)

When the 4th of March comes there is no man who will go into private life followed up more sincere regrets than Colonel Pete Hepburn, the veteran congressman from Iowa, who was defeated for reelection. The colonel goes out regretfully. He has been made an active figure in the house and in debate that the strongest of congress has always been his fate, and he feels that he will be heavily on the side of the minorities hereafter.

The colonel's fate was standing in the balcony of his house looking at the views of Alaska that were displayed there.

"Do you know I would like very much to see that country," he said to a Congressman friend of New York, who was standing near by.

"Yes, it must be very interesting," said Mr. Hewitt. "I had intended to make a trip there this summer, but I am afraid the extra session of congress will interfere with my plans."

"The extra session of congress will not cause me any inconvenience," replied the colonel as he turned away, with a sigh.

"Chief Justice" Is Title.

"There are very few people who know what the proper designation is of the man who presides over the impeachment court," said Charles G. Bennett, secretary of the senate. "Generally he is referred to as the chief justice of the United States supreme court. In fact, he is the chief justice. That's his official title. Most of our precedents in impeaching date back to the fifties, have fallen into the error of giving him the long title. When George Washington nominated Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut for this post he described it as chief justice of the supreme court of the United States. Mr. Adams in his turn made the same error in nominating Richard H. Taney. So did Abraham Lincoln when he appointed Salmon P. Chase. Grover Cleveland was the first man to give the true title in his nomination. When he appointed Melville W. Fuller he nominated him to be chief justice and ever since the Senate nominations will be framed in this fashion."

Wealthy Tops Wearers.

It is said that the two richest members of the senate are Duke Ile Stephenson of Wisconsin and Uncle Steve Elkins of West Virginia. The millionaire of each run up to thirty bobtail, but it is noticeable that young Senator Guggenheim of Colorado declares that he can match so millions as high as either of the two men.

Guggenheim made his millions out of mines. Uncle Steve got his from West Virginia coal properties and railroads, and Uncle Ile amassed his fortune from the pelagic forests of the northwest. Uncle Ile, by the way, has taken an into dislike to the business in sockeies because of his advocacy of the removal of the duty on hides. This is a political necessity on the part of the senator, and it was prompted by the wish to compare of his timber holdings at cheap rates, although he has made effort to enforce a reduction in his income.

CHAPTER III.

In this same month of May, 1890, two persons stood in the Jardin des Plantes at Montpelier wandering in the sun and basking in the lap of St. Medard. The one is a lady who, though considerably past the accident of life, still bears traces of remarkable beauty—Julia Cheiverton. Her companion was a good-looking, blonde man, of thirty or thereabouts, with the bearing of a soldier most indelibly impressed upon him.

"It was very good of you to come, Aunt Julia; you have been so unspeakable all fort, not only to Mary, but to myself all this trying time. She has no intimate friend in this place, and in their hour of trial a friend counsel is all. A woman hungers for a friend at such a time."

"Tut, Fred; you know perfectly well that I have always loved Mary better than anything on earth. I had to love you in the first place because she loved you, and of course I had to love that too; then, and here she pleased me, a child of almost three years of age, who was playing at a fifth distance from them, "because you two loved her. As for my being sorry that I should not come to Mary in her trouble."

"The neither sneer nor sneeze," he rejoined. "And I trust you will have a fine crowing to morrow."

"I shall come now to see you and Mary many a time, and yet," she continued with a sigh, "I shall be lonely for your sake. This is no place for you, a man of your years, to condemn to wear out his life without occupation; it is and to think upon."

"I know it, I know it," he replied bitterly; "and everyone knows, Aunt Julia, how hard I have striven, and still strive, to get occupation of some sort. But after ten years soldiering one seems to be fit for nothing else. Heaven knows I would rather that before two years' time he would marry a girl that could almost be his grandmother, and that the world would be no disinheritance in favor of the new arrival!"

"Hush, Fred," replied Miss Cateriham gently. "It is of no use talking over what is done past redemption, though I am afraid you played your cards sadly when indeed—"

"Injudiciously, you mean, Aunt Julia. You didn't—you don't know I was going to see him make no other kind of himself with our painting on his folly in him."

"I am afraid, my dear Fred," replied the lady, "that you did not discuss the thing in quite so temperate a fashion as would have been advisable. There, let another word," she continued quietly, as she saw he was about to interrupt her. "Don't destroy my last evening by taking over this unfortunate matter. You and your father have quarrelled, apparently irretrievably. Time is the one even suggest a fit mediator between you. There is no more to be said. We can only wait the time may eventually 'right' what is now so wrong."

"It is the meantime, Aunt Julia, I must live here because it is cheap, or until I can get something to do, or until I can leave Mary I shall run across to London again, and see if I can hear of anything."

"Let us hope you'll be successful; but it is time we must be moving. Ten time, Missy; come along," and taking the child by the hand, Miss Cateriham led her away home to the town.

Fred Cheiverton might well look despondingly at his prospects. His case was somewhat hard, brought about in some measure, no doubt, by his own but trivial faults, but the consequences, unfortunate, were a tendency rare. His future looked fair enough when, barely four years ago, he married a girl of very good family. True, they were by no means rich people, and his Mary, being one of many daughters, came to him a dowerless bride. But what did that matter? The election was an only son, and his father, with whom he was a prime favorite, was a wealthy man. That his prospector, at the age of thirty-eight, should have fallen over head and ears in love with the pampered daughter of the house of his parents was rather hard upon Fred. He authority bound himself with a wife and child, without a profession, and with the interest of his father, upon which the needs of his commission, to live upon. He tried hard to make the little money go as far as possible; but poor Fred had never been brought up to study "the economies," and he was naturally, though slowly, trenching upon his capital.

Miss Cateriham duly took her departure the next morning, and as she journeyed lonely to London reflected very sadly over Fred Cheiverton's prospects. Of course, if a sum in the neighbourhood of two hundred and fifty pounds a year, it is his business to keep himself and his family on that; but it was quite clear to Miss Cateriham and the Cheiverton would spend the whole of their capital before they had learnt how to live upon the income. Into the idea of a young fellow like Fred being condemned to spend his entire life in some French country town! It was too painful. What a thousand pities he had left the army!

Mr. Cutbushe, a friend, welcomed her warmly back to Lyall Place. He listened gravely to the story of Fred Cheiverton's broken career, but, as the business ells had himself foretold, almost the first question the barrister asked was in what direction he had best exert himself.

"Let me know the sort of thing he wants, and I'll engage that I'd manage to get at some of the people who have the giving away of such posts. If you ask my advice, I should say the best thing you could do is to try and bring about a reconciliation between father and son."

"I never saw Mr. Cheiverton again in the day of Fred's wedding; but he is a very bitter, implacable old man, from all accounts, and I am afraid Fred gave him very great provocation. You must not forget that I have asked you to help my son in his own flat, not my husband. Mr. Carbuckle, I want to consult you about another subject. It happen during the last few years that I have saved a little money. I want to invest it in something that will return a very large interest."

"Then on my word, Miss Cateham, there are only three ways open to you that I know of. You must use it on a horse race, take it to Homburg, or invest it in the 'Great Tontine.'"

"In the 'Great Tontine!'"

Substantially Sid Mr. Carbuckle plunge into an explanation of what he termed Mr. Salsbury's magnificent conception. "You are probably declined, Miss Cateham," he said at length, "to lose this money, whatever you do with it; you might as well lose a hundred in the 'Great Tontine' as anywhere else. For a lady best upon such speculation as yourself this speculation seems made for you. At the end of the first ten years not will probably be drawing a dividend of ten or twelve per cent, and from that it is sure to a progressively increasing dividend. As the thing nears its end the few lucky holders of lives will be drawing comfortable incomes as interest for the original hundred they put in; and then think of the grand prize to which up with. A property worth a hundred and thirty thousand pounds will fall to the fortunate winner; but even if you keep in the 'Tontine' till at all near the finish you will have got your money back over and over again."

Miss Cateham was very much fascinated with the scheme, and as she listened, suddenly flashed across her mind a story of Terence Finnigin, an old family servant. The Finnigins were a tough lived race, he himself was sixty, and his father had lived to eighty-seven. She determined that she would put one hundred pounds of her savings into the "Great Tontine," and that the rest of the world consultant should be Terence Finnigan. She would speak to Mr. Cutbushe for instructions, who readily undertook all the necessary arrangements.

CHAPTER IV.

Twenty years have passed and gone since Herbert Phillimore, Viscount Lakington, landed that fine place known as Stockmill. He was quite willing to go through the accumulation of his respected father's income, and, while he lasted, Mr. Lyme Wrggle proved himself a very quiet relative in that respect. He made money lightly by dabbling speculations, and he spent his savings freely. He behaved with a high liberality to his son-in-law. Not only did he make the newly married couple a handsome allowance, but he responded to a manager beyond all pride to extraneous taps in his purse strings. Lord and Lady Lakington lived in Grosvenor Square, and Stockmill was used only as the seaside of Mr. Lyme Wrggle. Thus, when the state of his affairs came to be investigated he should be found frequently and seriously thoughtfully bankrupt. The estate was not encumbered, but prepared the world for, that of the wreck of the Stockmill property, there never could be no doubt the great financier once possessed it, there remained but fifteen hundred a year, which had been settled on Mrs. Lyme Wrggle upon the time that her daughter was born. Lord Lakington found himself in a sudden plight as Fred Cheiverton, with a wife and child, and left a beggar.

Wealth is, after all, a matter of comparison. It is simply income in considerable excess of what we have been accustomed to. Fifteen hundred a year would of course represent affluence to the many. To wrggle, clever-managing Mrs. Lyme Wrggle it represented poverty. To Lord Lakington it meant penury. He will do good, and he will duly awake to the fact that the annual dividend, paid to him on the hundred pounds he had placed in the "Great Tontine" was rapidly becoming a very big one, and he would be regarded as pocket money. A hundred a year or so may not be much to a man who has lost his all, but it means a very respectable sum when viewed in the light of lesser offers.

The death of his wife made no difference to Lord Lakington's domestic arrangements. He and his daughter still continued to reside with Mrs. Lyme Wrggle. Not only had he and the old lady always been upon excellent terms, but she was greatly assuming importance in his eyes, which was destined a little later on, become overwhelming. Lord and Lady Lakington had had nominated when investing the hundred pounds, Lord Aveil in the "Great Tontine," and such was the vivacity and vitality exhibited by his lordship that he began seriously to think that it was very possible she might survive all the other competitors. Hope and thought but little of the great lottery prize, and took a share in it, at the most, never would have done so had it not been rendered obligatory on him by the terms of the deed that he won; but his memoirs was now entitled to it every and year in very pleasing fashion; and as the years rolled by, that fee was regarded instead at sixty should begin to fall fast. He was only in accordance with the laws of nature. As the fires fell so did the shareholders dividends, and so, consequently, did the dividends increase for those whose numbers were fortunately still in life. The new generation had grown built long ago, and was now supposed to be a thriving and prosperous establishment. If all events enabled its trustee, Mr. Sullivan, to pay the Lady Lakington her rent, which was divided proportionally among the survivors. As the tenants now get well past the three-score and ten years allotted to humanity, the fires began to fall every spring like leaves in autumn. Finally Viscount Lakington found that his half yearly dividend amounted to one thousand pounds, and in fact, Mrs. Lyme Wrggle was one of the last four surviving lives in the gigantic spell, and that the possibility of his coming into a fortune of eight thousand a year was hanging upon the life of that venerable lady.

On a bright June morning, Lord Lakington enters the dining room of a comfortable suite of rooms in Victoria road, Kensington, crosses to the breakfast table, and proceeds to place upon his lady's grandsonne. Life is made pleasantly enough for him at present. In the payment of a comfortable home, presided over by two women both happily devoid of no like, he can thoroughly rely upon all those comforts which because rather dear to an old man of seventy-fifty; and he has now ample resources to enable him to indulge in all such social pleasures as he may desire. Both his nation-in-law and his daughter have set for so long made him the first consideration in the world, that he little wonder the Viscount should have developed a certain selfishness, which, his own point only has dawn on him, Lord Lakington found himself in a sudden plight as Fred Cheiverton, with a wife and child, and left a beggar.

Wealth is, after all, a matter of comparison. It is simply income in considerable excess of what we have been accustomed to. Fifteen hundred a year would of course represent affluence to the many. County Road System.

The following article may be of interest to our people, in view of the talk of adopting the county roads system in this county.

In a nut shell, the county road system is a plan whereby the leading public roads of a county are improved and kept in repair by a board of county road commissioners at the expense of every property owner in the county.

The tax for county roads cannot be more than $2. on each $1,000 valuation.

All roads not taken over by the county road commissioners are kept in repair in the usual way by the township.

All damages on county roads are collected from the county.

The township road taxes on the property abutting the county road goes to the township to be expended on roads in other parts of the township.

Costly bridges are thus built on the leading roads by the county instead of by the township.

Property in villages and cities contribute toward the county road fund as does the farm property.

Good roads are like fish poles with lines on both ends, making it possible for the farmer in the country to fish in the village and city market any day in the year, so taking advantage of the high prices.

It also gives the village and city merchants a chance to fish in the country for farm products when he is in need of them, for with the telephone he can call up a dozen or more farmer friends and in a few hours have on the way loads of potatoes, corn, wheat or any other farm product that he may need.

Further keep in mind always, that country roads are built by money raised on every dollar's worth of assessed property in Michigan.

A tax is spread on all property in the county, not to exceed two dollars on a thousand dollars assessed valuation. Then the road building begins, and when it is completed, if built of gravel or stone according to specifications, a reward is paid by the state of one thousand dollars per mile for stone road and five hundred for gravel. This money comes from a tax levied on all property in the state.

If a majority of those voting thereon vote "yes" then the system is adopted.

The next move is for the supervisors to decide:

1st. How many county road commissioners there shall be, not to exceed three.

2nd. What their compensation shall be.

3d. To appoint the commissioners.

The commissioners must meet on or before October 1 each year, and decide which roads shall be built and how much tax should be levied for road purposes, not to exceed one dollar on each one thousand dollars of assessed valuation, and hand their determination to the board of supervisors.

The board of supervisors has the veto power, so the road board have to make such recommends as will suit the supervisors, or fail to get the tax spread.

The tax is collected in December.

Then the county commissioners can lay out their work and begin early the next spring to build state reward road.

No real work can be done in counties not now under the system until 1910.

Soldier Balks Death Pilot.

It suggest to J. A. Stone, a civil war veteran, of Kemp, Tex., that a pilot existed between a desperate long trouble and a grave to cause its assistance. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." A Campaign for Home Seekers.

It is very gratifying to know that the railroad companies whose lines cross the Grand Traverse region, and the territory north of it, south of the straits, are uniting in a movement to attract eastern home seekers in a northward "trek."

Very much can be said in commendation of this proposition, from the railroad standpoint, as agricultural development is a vital adjunct of railroad prosperity. But the fruit of the land will not all be gathered by the railroads.

Every county in the territory involved should co-operate with the railroads in making the campaign a vigorous one. In the matter of the adaptability of Northern Michigan soil and climate to agricultural and horticultural pursuits, the period of experiment has long since passed.

The trouble with Northern Michigan, that, while we have a respectable percentage of intelligent and successful farmers, we have too few of them. The number should be doubled or better.

Another deplorable fact is that throughout Northern Michigan there are tens of thousands of acres of non-productive land—land that is only waiting for the axe and the plow to add its profitable tribute to the granary and storehouse.

Few regions are more highly favored than Northern Michigan in every advantage desired by the home seeker, chief of which, of course, are the primary elements referred to above. But neat to these are the twin channels of communication and transportation—rail and water, and the ever-constantly increasing capacity of both to meet the steadily increasing demand.

Here is a field that offers to the intelligent, industrious and thrifty home-seeker a home especially favored by nature. Too soil in wealth abounds, and the whole that come to you from the lakes bring health and vigor.

Push along the home seekers' campaign!

The Secret of Long Life.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. For long ages physicians of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, tones the nerves, stimulates the liver, and tone to the entire system. In a goldenrod to weak, sick and debilitated people. "Kidney troubles had blighted my life for months," writes W. S. Sherman, of Cushing, Me., "but Electric Bitters cured me entirely." Only 50c at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

Arrangements have been made whereby N. A. Stowe of Grand Rapids, ex-president of the board of trade of that city, and president of the Michigan Tradesman, and George H. Hood, a well known resident of Newaygo, will take possession of the resort and will conduct it next summer, negotiations having been conducted with the Newaygo Resort association to that end.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

The job of court stenographer is usually a good paying position. James H. Henderson, who officiates in that capacity in this judicial circuit, also performs the duties in the Wexford circuit, which includes four counties. For his services in the Wexford circuit he receives $1,540 compensation per year, and likely as much more in the circuit. In addition he gets liberal fees for furnishing copies of testimony in cases that are appealed and altogether makes more than many of the good attorneys of the circuit.

Central Lake Special: Monday was the sixty-third anniversary of the marriage of Joshua Mudge to Eliza May—almost the oldest span of a married life, and both parties to the marriage contract in good health. Living in their own home with their only son and their grandson as near neighbors, is a record sorry not often excelled. Joshua Mudge is 88 years old and his venerable wife is 82. There were two children born to this worthy couple, a boy and a girl, the latter dying in her teens. The son is Elizabeth Mudge, father of Grant Mudge, both prominent and prosperous farmers on rural route No. 1, out of this village.

Central Lake Torch: James W. Brown, whose farm is in Banks township adjoining Bellaire, visited Lake Essex, was in Central Lake on business Saturday, and reported to the Torch man that on February 3, he killed a sow months old pig forward May 4th, 1908, which weighed when dressed 411 pounds. Its girth was 6 feet, 8 inches, and length when hung up was 6 feet, 2 inches. The sow to this pig was killed on the 12th of November, and dressed 368 pounds. At that time Mr. Brown estimated that the larger pig would would have dressed 390 pounds, making 171 pounds of fresh pork on the big pig between the two dates, eight days less than five months, or a little better than two pounds a day for the eighty-four days.

Boyne Journal: The Huron Lumber & Salt Company, of Bay City, with a capital stock of $600,000, has filed articles of association. Of the capital $500,000 is paid in. The Huron Lumber & Salt Company is the organization that results from negotiations between the White Bros., of Boyne City, and Bay City capitalists and lumbermen. At a conference held several weeks ago the fact that the organization would go through was announced, although at that time it was thought the company would be called the Michigan Lumber Company. Chief among the stockholders are the White brothers, two of Boyne City and one of Buffalo, and F. T. Wood, worth and John C. Kerr, of Bay City, besides others who hold smaller blocks of stock. Among those of Boyne City who have stock in the concern are S. C. Smith, W. L. Martin, Robert White, Martin Reeder, R. W. Wigle, J. M. Harris, George Russell, Grant Brown, and E. C. Fulgham and C. L. Smith of Petoskey. Others of this city contemplate taking some stock. The company will operate camps in Alpena and Montmorency counties, and a portion of the paid in capital is to be used for the purpose of buying vessels, etc. The mill will be erected upon the North side, the land for the purpose in Bay City.

—A box social is announced for Saturday evening of this week, to be given at the high school building by the Senior Class. All are invited and a good time is assured.

—No mail yet from Beaver Island by the ice route, and there is very little prospects of getting one this spring. It is the first time in many years that this has occurred, and the island people are walking the floor.

—A very pleasant surprise party occurred at the home of Mr and Mrs. John Kelley, Monday evening, Feb. 22, the occasion being Mrs. Kelley's birthday. About 25 guests were present, and upon their departure left many beautiful gifts as reminders of the day.

—About twenty friends of Mr. and Mrs Walter Dennis gave them a jolly surprise at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bellinger, last Saturday evening. Progressive euchre was the entertainment, and first prizes were awarded to Mr. Amos Webster and Mrs. Agnes Jarvis. The consolation prizes went to Jeadamore Cortler and Van Dusen.

—Geo. H. Van Pelt, of Chicago and Charlevoix, is in town and is doing business. He comes to Charlevoix from the office of the Chicago Telephone Co. This building is in addition to the block to be erected north of the postoffice, on the alley. Work on both buildings will begin early this spring. It is not given out who will occupy the new building.

—W. J. Bachow, on Tuesday, took possession of his new home. The residence on Park avenue, recently occupied by F. H. Hubbard. Mr. Bachow who now occupied the Bartholomew residence, on State street, will move into his new home sometime this spring. The place is in one of the most attractive residence sections of the city, overlooking Lake Michigan and the harbor entrance, the length of Park avenue and the east portion of the city to the south terrace.

—Word is received here from Seattle that Capt. and Mrs. Campbell and Don will make a trip to Alaska this spring.

—The new constitution of Michigan which has just been ratified, gives tax suffrage to women. A large delegation of women representing all classes had a hearing before the constitutional convention asking that women have full suffrage with men. Their plea was 175,000 individual signatures. Michigan is the fifth state to give women tax suffrage.

—Cable advices from Beaver Island yesterday stated that, although the entire island coast from the north channel to the head was hammered by ice, open water could be seen about six miles from the harbor. No water can be seen in Lake Michigan from this port. A few more cold nights like that of Wednesday will bridge the Cross Village channel and open mail communication.

—Late Adams' famous bears went dead one night last week, and the cause of their death is one of the mysteries. They had been "off their feed" for some time, and there are strong suspicions that some one had been feeding them ground glass. They were a decided attraction to visitors during the summer months, and the younger people of the resort colony will learn with regret of their death.

—Mrs. Charlotte M. Hewett died Sunday, Feb. 21st, at the home of her son, Alonzo Hewett, on Dixon Ave., of bronchial pneumonia. The remains were taken to East Jordan for burial. Deceased, whose husband died about thirty years ago, was born at Flint, Mich., Feb. 24th, 1845, and married to Joseph Edward Hewitt Sept. 1866. Mrs. Hewitt was the mother of 11 children, 9 of whom are living. Four sons and five daughters.

Forty Years of Work.

Forty years ago this week, the present publisher of this paper, then but little more than twenty-one years of age, settled into Charlevoix with a satchel on his back.

Charlevoix then consisted of a postoffice, one store and not to exceed a dozen houses, and the population consisted chiefly of fishermen and propeller-wood choppers and handlers.

We could write a page about the trials and discouragements that beset the SENTINEL in those pioneer days, but it would be of little use, there are a few who know of them, but the rising generation and the latter day comers know very little of the record.

The SENTINEL and Charlevoix County are, figuratively, twins,—both having been born the same year—and nearly the same week, the SENTINEL had not always been a good paper, and been strengthened by the confidence and friendship of the public, it would long since have been consigned to the journalistic graveyard.

Without any desire to take unto oneself undue credit, we venture to express the opinion that a newspaper that lives forty years under the direction of one publisher has earned the right to graze "on green pastures and beside still waters." The SENTINEL and Charlevoix have together counted the milestones since the birth of both.

During the four decades the SENTINEL has had but two rings in its repertoire, with never a discordant note sounded in either. One has been an anthem of praise for Charlevoix, Charlevoix county and Northern Michigan, and the other has been the inspired symphony of that political faith into which it was born. In neither has there ever been a retard or diminuendo.

It is an honor to publish a paper forty years, but it is a greater honor to remain and a fair partner in the same harness. God willing, we hope to enjoy that honor. We believe the SENTINEL has richly earned the right to live comfortably in its old age. We believe it retains the loyal friendship and support of the people of this community.

The present publisher will not always be here, but the SENTINEL will. In its historic relationship to Charlevoix it is "bone of her bone and flesh of her flesh." They came into being together in the travail of pioneer struggle, and they will go on together through the years of generations yet unborn.

FIVE MEN IN JEOPARDY.

Carried Out From Harbor Springs On Cake of Ice—Drift to Point Off Charlevoix—Rescued Following Day by Harbor Springs Fishermen—Heroic Efforts of Charlevoix Volunteers.

Late Wednesday afternoon Edward Jodler, William Rosemeyer, Chas. Wright, Byron Wright and Morris Power, fishermen, were carried out from Harbor Springs into Lake Michigan on an ice floe when the ice broke away from the shore. After being blown ten miles out in the lake, the men were rescued late Thursday afternoon by Albert Fisher, who went out to them in a canvass canoe. The canoe sprung a leak just as he reached the floe, and was hauled out on the ice. The sleigh having shifted, the fishermen used the canoe for a sail and succeeded in reaching the shore in safety.

The men were seen from this port late Thursday forenoon. They were off North Point, about seven miles out. Messrs were at once taken for rescue. Capt. Kent, of the life saving station, calling to his aid Palmer and Kibbie, the No. 1 surfmen, Allinson and Hazel, and 2 men of the crew, secured six more husky volunteers, and, hauling the self-bailing life boat to the needle side, they set out through the drift ice for the point where the men were last seen, the start being made about two o'clock. By almost superhuman effort they forced the boat through the ice about ten miles, most further from time to time observing their vision.

Being unable to locate the men, Capt. Kent anchored the boat for shore, which they did not reach until midnight. When darkness came on Capt. Wm. Finucan, accompanied by several citizens, went to North Point and built signal fires, using gasoline freely. This was a great benefit to Capt. Kent in affecting his course.

It was certainly a narrow escape, and should serve as a warning to others.

Supt. Woodley Re-Engaged.

It is gratifying to the SENTINEL to be able to record the fact that the school board last week voted unanimously to retain Mr Woodley the next school year as superintendent.

There is no profession in the public service in which an official so rarely escapes the crucible of criticism as that of the educator, especially if the educator exercises executive functions. There are times when he must either stand on his dignity or unfortunately blame himself; when he must either fight or run. Fortunate, indeed, is the man who closes the school year without some things to show for his courage and reflexes. Mr. Woodley has had his bumps, but he has always come through the ordeal smiling, self reliant and calm.

He has worked industriously and conscientiously to elevate the standard of the Charlevoix schools, and he has succeeded. This is manifestly attested by the recent action of the school board.

We congratulate both the board and Mr. Woodley.

Well Known Ferry Boat to be Removed from Little Traverse Bay.

From the Petoskey Record.

A deal was closed a few days ago, whereby Captains Campbell and Wilbur of Charlevoix secure possession of the ferry boat Searchlight, which has run between Petoskey and the resorts around the bay for the past ten years.

The boat was one of the Little Traverse Bay Ferry Line owned by Captains Campbell and Wilbur, of Charlevoix, and W. F. Gill, of Harbor Springs. Mr. Gill sold his interest to the two Charlevoix men, who will take the staunch little steamer from the bay. Just what disposition will be made of her is not known at present, but she may be placed on Pine Lake and ply between Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan.

The old ferry line was composed of the steamers Adrienne and Hazel, which was owned by W. E. Chrysler & Co. The Hazel was the rebuilt steamer Gracie Barker, which burned to the water's edge several years ago, and then rebuilt was christened "Hazel," after Miss Hazel, daughter of Capt. W. E. Chrysler. This boat was sold and the steamer Silver Spray purchased to take her place when W. E. Chrysler & Co. sold the line to its present owners, five years ago. The steamer Adrienne was rebuilt at Harbor Springs, about ten years ago, to conform as nearly as possible to her sister boat, the Hazel, and when rebuilt she was christened the Searchlight.

Improvements at Baker's Inn.

The improvements being made at Baker's Inn, (formerly Hotel Rasthet) will make that house one of the most attractive hotels in Northern Michigan.

Elegant metal ceilings and sidewalls have been placed in the dining room, office and parlor, and the work of decorating the same is now in progress. When completed, these rooms will compare favorably with those of any public house anywhere.

In addition to these improvements, a modern annunciator has been installed, which takes in every room in the house. But best of all, and something far in advance of anything yet undertaken by any Northern Michigan hotel, is the placing of a telephone in every sleeping room, all connected with the local exchange and long distance.

Many other improvements and changes are being made throughout the house that are suggested by the long and successful hotel experience of the bakers. They have still further plans for improvement that have not yet been fully worked out.

Independent Water Plant for Golf Links.

On Thursday last J. J. Gaskin, warden of the Chicago Club, received detailed plans and specifications for the piping of the golf links.

It is the purpose of the Golf Association, which is as adjunct of the Chicago Club, to water the links from an independent plant, to be erected on the shore of Pine Lake, opposite the freight house.

Work on the pumping station and piping will be commenced early this spring, and the work will give employment to a large number of men.

The Charlevoix golf links are the finest in the state, and among the best in the country.

Messrs. Brown and Gardner of St. Louis, Mo., were in East Jordan last week in a consultation with the board of trade of that city relative to the establishment of a "Boyne City" near that place. As we understand the proposition is to arrange a suitable place for a summer home for baby the expenditure of a sum of 5000 population or more. There are many beautiful spots about Pine Lake that are very suitable for such an enterprise, and some of them are near East Jordan.

The Great Tontine

By HAWLEY SMART

Author of "Broken Bonds," "Bound to Win," Etc.

CHAPTER V.

Lord Lailington is at present experiencing a rather favorable time of it, this being one of the last three shareholders left in the "Tontine" to be the largest speculation he has ever embarked in. In his racing days he had never aimed at win to tremendous a stake as this. It spread wider fortune or ruin. A few months might see him in possession of fifty thousand a year, or deprived of the very comfortable income his dividend from our big lottery afforded him.

He went to the Vivastry Theatre, and was duly shown into the manager's sanctum, who received him cordially, "Is established to be entered. "I have come down to have a chat with you, because you know something about everybody.

"Well, I can't expect you to conduct with me for being at law out of it. It is too much to ask of you, but I should really thought, Vincent, I should have acquired some. Do you have of course had your letter from the directors, informing you that your services from the end of last. Well, I can't complain; and I have had my hundred back a good many times over."

"I want you to tell me something about my two sitting-tenants."

"I can tell you very little about Miss Catherine. She is a modern lady living at Kew, and I know nothing further about her than that she is very rich, and she has been unanimously missing for the last three years. As for Pegram, he is a lawyer down in North Wales. It was published in the papers at the time."

"It's a tremendous big stake to be playing for," observed Lord Lailington, "two hundred and seven thousand pounds. It would be a misnomer to call it a fortune, would it, Vincent? Whether it would be possible to compromise. You know this lady and the other, and might succeed in the subject for me."

"Not for all the sort. The probabilities are that a quiet, elderly lady like Miss Catherine has never troubled her self to inquire the names of the other occupiers."

"Well, it shall be as you like," replied Sir Pagram; "but I think you are wrong."

CHAPTER VI.

Standing off the Hendford road, and in the immediate vicinity of Kew Gardens, is a small cottage half embowered in creepers. Fitting about amongst the flowers with a pair of clippers and dibbling a flower bed, is there is a young lady of some three or four and twenty, whose acquaintance we made many years ago. This is Mary Chichester, whom we last saw as a little lass in the Jardin des Plantes at Avranches, in company with mademoiselle, with gown and hair long and rose to match, and a fresh, fair countenance that instinctive people to the her upon first acquaintance. Two years after Aunt Julia went to assist her niece in her trouble the latter's fears were realized. Mrs. Chichester caught a bad cold, which speedily developed the latest cause of consumption. Her Aunt Julia promised before she died that she would take care of little Mary, and when she returned to England she brought the child with her.

"It seems hard to deprive poor of the little one in the first agony of your sorrow," Fred, but at her age I was make better care of her than you, and in a few years I shall hope to restore her to you as a daughter, side in some wise to be in you what her last another was."

"It is best so," he replied sadly; "the child requires that wonderful care that only a woman can give, for she is delicate, and makes no friends or fear she should have inherited her mother's nervous complaint, and so, when I must leave my home for the future, and such a home for her in the future, and save, if possible, the pittance that still remains for her. The capital has settled partly of late, he added, bitterly, "in a fatal smile.

Poor Fred Chichester was not destined to realize his hopes. He said no more of his intention to Miss Catherine, but he had already made up his mind as to what he would do. Their child was weary of his fruitless endeavors to obtain employment in England, he had so early thought as to whether there might not be greater opportunities for him abroad, when suddenly it flashed across him that, for one of his trade, there was a fortune ready for the picking up, now on the books of the Tontine. The great stake in question was the Kew Cottage, which its tenant, and he had heard of more than one Englishman who had obtained employment in either army. With the Northern armies especially, which so long held sodden, who came out properly recommended from officers in the service of home, he tolerably sure of a pair of assistants.

Fred Chichester hurried over to London, and, with considerable difficulty, left to his little daughter, put a hundred pounds in the bank, and, sailed for New Orleans with the last letters of introduction and recommendation from several of the military friends whose sons he had served. He speedily obtained a situation, distinguished himself more than one occasion, and finally fell, some months afterwards, a victim to the bloody field of Gettysburg. His faithful companion had begged so hard to accompany him that, conscious though he was of the sacrifice involved, he had not the day of fortune as himself being accompanied by a woman's helpmeet had to relent. The North were very partial to the ladies, and, as they were, some one or eight years of his death, some one or eight years of his real age, could be difficult, to allege about something in the same tongue as his master. He was by Chichester's side when he fell, and passed southward through their field of carnage himself, there in a cottage, hovel, hospital, he held "the master" in the grave.

And now the Fred's discomposing is interrupted by a voice exclaiming, "Hoeing, Mary! Hoeing, child, and poor old the tree." and Miss Catersham appears at the Pavilion.

"Coming, Aunie," replied the girl as she moved quietly towards the window, "and I wish you a lovely pour I have ranged so quite a bouquet of the choicest flowers you ever saw, fear no trace of having been despoiled."

"Thank you, child," replied Miss Catersham as she took her seat at the breakfast table. "The roses are as sweet as those of your cheeks my dear. By the way, Mary, I have had a letter from Sir Pagram inside this morning. I will read it to you.

"Dear Miss Cater-aun—No news as yet, but I hope shortly to be able to send a pet to find him, as he has been missing for some considerable time, and, I have deputed to a young friend of mine who has just joined the bar to undertake the case of the case. He has cross-examined me as to details in a very pleasant way, and I have ventured to put you and Miss Mary also in the box; so I hope you will be prepared to meet the very sagacious lawyer you with a pleasant smile. Hoping that you are well, I remain, Yours ever, Pegram."

"Well, certainly," replied Miss Catersham with a smile, "both for the old cow and mine. Mr. Carbuckle has no doubt put you in possession of all regrettable particulars connected with the case."

"Excuse, Miss Catersham," interrupted Mr. Pegram, "but I should like to gather all the details of this affair from your lips. Now, will you kindly answer the questions I am about to put to you?" and Robert Pegram proceeded to cross-examine the Miss Mary in a manner that did much credit to his professional skill.

"Who was your visitor, Aunie?" explained Miss Chichester as she entered the drawing room.

"That was Mr. Carbuckle's young man," replied Miss Catersham. "He's got a distinguished appearance, but I fancy he is clever. The questions he asked about poor Terence struck me as shrewd and to the point. He knows now all we can tell him."

Miss Catersham had never told her niece anything about her connection with the "Great Tontine," and Mary Chichester had never heard of the big lottery in her life.

(To be continued.)

SOME LONG-FELT WANTS.

Invention Offers Fame and Fortune to the Clever Man.

It is agreed on all hands that invention offers one of the surest roads to fame and fortune, and one of the easiest roads, too. Now there is no lack of inventive genius; there never were so many clever people in the world as there are today, but somehow their energies are not always applied in the right direction, and so they fail. It is just the old story of eyes and ears; you cannot see what is wanted.

There is a plumber laboriously pouring melted lead over a pipe joint and smoothing it down with a leather slick; he has got not think of a way to join those pipes cold, and to do it quickly and thoroughly? If you can he has a fortune waiting for you. And here is a nice easy little invention guaranteed to betid to the ladies; just a simple and effective means of fastening gauze in window screens. Surely it is a shiv on the inventive genius of the age that we should still have to resort to pins in this enlightened 20th century.

Have you ever seen a train driver leaning over with a long crowbar to shift the points at a junction, or a man at the corner with a lever for the same purpose? Very clumsy and primitive, don't you think? Below a man driving the driver, by simply pressing a footplate on the car plate, a mechanical hand, the point which every way the desired and every transway company in the country will have to adopt sooner or later.

Tramways suggest roads. The road is a thoroughfare, and the road is the inventor of a satisfactory paving material. At present the rule seems to be, and what is good for the wheels is bad for the hoofs, and vice versa. That is to say, where the road is smooth and the wheels run easily there is no grip for the hoofs; and where it is rough a vehicle is hard to drag. Then there is the motor to reckon with. Projected by the back wheels, it is bound to kick if the surface is not all gravel. What is wanted is a smooth, hard, absorbent surface, with at the same time a perfect grip, and this is too hard for you, try to invent a spike that could be quickly fixed on a horse's shoes—by the driver—to give grip in time of frost.

Then there is a crying need for a cheap road which could serve for small cities and villages through the year. There is nothing of the kind in existence. And an envelope that could not be opened without detection would be a great boon to anxious lovers and all those whom circumstances have placed at the mercy of inquisitive landladies.

The bottle that cannot be refilled is still wanted. There are several on the market, it is true, but the right one is yet to come. And how about the bed and give fastening? Think how much time you spend in tying your boots, and how annoying it is when the lace breaks, and you know that you have just your morning train to catch, and you can't do it in a hurry. A neat, quick and simple little device is wanted—something that would cost little to produce and could be easily replaced when worn out. Invent it, and you are wealthy for life.

WHEN ANDY WAS AN OPERATOR.

He Put In Practice the Precept Which He Urges Today.

Evidently Andy Carnegie has put in practice all his life the precept he enforced on his subordinates when he was only a dabd telegraph operator a good many years ago. The story was told by the other actor in it at the dinner the operators gave Andy a few days ago. There had been a wreck on the road, says the Cincinnati Times-Star's New York correspondent. The operator had had no direct responsibility, so far as he knew. But he had been out to a dance the night before, and he was very sleepy. And he remembered that he had nodded more than once as he sat at his key. He told Andy Carnegie so. Carnegie looked at him in disgusted reproach. "There's two things you've got to learn in this business," said Carnegie. "First is to keep your mouth shut. The second is not to talk so much."

And that's all he ever heard Carnegie about his dereliction. Carnegie admitted it might be true. And then he told his own favorite story on himself, which he never fails to tell, and which, after all, is always worth hearing. It has to do with his application for membership in a club of authors. He was turned down once because the authors thought his secretary wrote his book. He had prepared the original copy, in his own pencled handwriting, he was turned down because he was a millionaire. But at the third application another litterateur arose to plead for Carnegie's admission. "He may be a millionaire," said he, "but we needn't fear his competition. He's the worst author alive."

THE POPULAR PULPIT

REWARDS.

By Henry F. Cope.

"Establish thou the work of our hands."—Ps. xc. 17.

In hours of discouragement we are likely to remember that many great ones, striving for lofty purposes, met little but disappointment, and have declared its rewards only illusory delusions. We are likely to argue: For the success on which we set our hearts of ten, we are attributed, in retrospect, to fortuitous circumstances. Does life hold any trustworthy promise of worthy reward? Is it worth the sacrifice? If it be true that at the end of every stage there waits for us only an empty, mocking prize, if happiness is ever a revolving rainbow, where when the mistiness of the morning lifts can we find that which will hold the time to things high and serve it for the best?

May it not be that we are making a great mistake in looking for our reward in the end of our work? In thinking of life's rewards as of they were a prize? The best reward for all in the things to be attained; they are the attaining. Joy is not a distant mountain peak; joy is the light and warmth within the breast of every man who climbs upward.

We wear our lives away in fretful seeking after things after, in reality, we have within us the power, and wealth. So life comes to the end with the heart still hungry, with the cupboard bread and the waters of life. We have sought for bubbles strung in the form of a rainbow, and we find that bread is to be had for the asking.

Life is not a lottery in our prizes, but in our work. Be our true rewards. The greatest happiness is not in the end, but in the something worth while to do, some part to play in the world's business, some task to be done, some deepest in him and serves all his powers—something life's work to be done, and it is to be done—that he and his wife and his children shall lead the right kind of life.

"For this reason it is of the first importance that the United States Department of Agriculture, through which as prime agent the Ideas the commission of all the agencies of the world, should become without delay in fact a department of country life, fitted to deal not only with crops, but also with all the larger aspects of life in the open country.

Immediate Needs Pointed Out.

"From all that has been done and learned, there great general and immediate needs of country life stand out:

"1. Better conservation among farmers, to put them on a level with the organized forces with which they deal in business.

"Second, a new kind of schools (the country schools) which shall teach the children as much outdoor as indoor work, and in such a way that will prepare for country life, and not, as at present, mainly to lure from it.

"Third, better means of communication between farmers, that they may pool, which the country people are everywhere, and the right, "Neighbor, I know you are a man of your word, and I am with you." Fourth, a new type of country church, which shall be a center of inspiration and helpfulness to the country people in the slavery of continuous labor.

"Organization to secure for the country the things that are common to the central theme of the community's report.

Farmers Must Help Themselves.

"There must be a vital enlargement of farmers' conservation. Many conservative farmers themselves," say the commissioners. "It is indispensable that farmers shall work for their own common interests and for the national welfare. It is not enough that they be governmental activity, no legislation, not even better schools, will greatly avail. The farmer must be made conscious that make for morality and spiritual ideals in every rural community and neighborhood. We miss the heart of the problem if we neglect to foster spiritual ideals and neighborhood righteousness. The best way to improve ideals for private conduct and public life is to build institutions of religion.

"The church is great power of leadership. The whole people should understand that it is vitally important to stand behind the rural church and to help it become a great power in developing concrete country life ideals. It is especially important that the country church recognize that it has a social responsibility to the entire community as well as a religious responsibility to its own group of people."

The German population now exceeds that of Prussia by over 250,000.

The first piano factory in the Australian colony of Victoria is in course of erection at Melbourne.

The number of men, women and children who received poor law relief in Ireland during the year ended March 31, 1905, amounted to 204,220.

After stealing money and a lot of silver and clothing from James Hurwitz of Bayonne, N. J., burglars nearly succeeded in taking the piano out of the house before the occupants awakened.

Near Vallenar a gold mine has lately been discovered from which one box has taken that contained 200 ounces of pure gold per ton of 2,000 pounds. This is in the old gold mining region of Chile.

The foundation for the recently completed Harlaw of Refuge lighthouse, Delaware bay, is a solid block of concrete eighteen feet deep, forty feet in diameter at the base and thirty-six feet at the top.

As illustrative of the cosmopolitan conditions in New Hampshire it is recorded that in Somersworth recently an Englishman carried an American flag in a company of Hibernians at a French funeral.

With the completion of the translation into Yiddish on which Professor Leslie Harrison of Worcester, Mass., has been working for three years the Bible will be readable in every spoken language in the world.

As a service of thanksgiving for the harvest of the new City south of an English Nonconformist church even draped from end to end with fruit and corn the whole space occupied with tolerable peas and packing barrels.

When the Simplon tunnel was made in Switzerland the old road over the pass was no longer kept free of snow in winter. This, however, resulted in so much inconvenience that it has been decided to keep the road open all the year round again.

The Whistler house in Lowell, Mass., the old fashioned three-story dwelling in which James Abbott MacNeill Whistler, the artist, was born July 10, 1834, was dedicated recently as a memorial tablet was set in the permanent tablet in the house for the Lowell Art association.

A Persian of Gulbul, Tex., who used green willow posts at the corners of his barn, found after a year that they had taken root and raised his barn from some three feet. He now has put in more willow posts and expects to have a three story barn in the course of time.

Doors that swing of themselves are the latest. At the Hotel Astor, New York, the attendant who stands at the main entrance merely has to press a button and the door, which is operated by electricity, revolves. This plan has the advantage of keeping the speed uniform.

An invention which, it is said, will revolutionize the curing of meats has been perfected by Cleveland men. Electricity will be used to cause the salt to penetrate the meats and this process does for the market in one minute the time the present method requires.

In a scene of a ballroom, recently shown in a New York moving picture show, R. J. Mellor, who is a young leader, whom for three years he had been unable to communicate with and, notwithstanding the noise of the band during the race, was able to obtain his address.

All the German joint stock companies engaged in the Lerring fishery have now entered into an agreement for regulating the selling prices of their catch. The consumption of raw fish has greatly increased among the German population owing to the very high price of meat.

Mrs. L. H. Bishop of Chicago offered $100 prize for the best verses fitting to the tune for women in Chicago, and some of them were certainly funny. One of the "verses" into the men took care that it is a terrible shame that they should be under all the rules when we are willing to do your hedges and the housework.

Bel-Ami, missing children in German schools seems on the increase. Some twenty-three are still listed officially showing that in Prussia from 1900 to 1904 the average number of suicides or attempts at suicide among pupils of the higher schools was 11 per annum; in 1905, 16; 1906, 16; 1907, 20; 1908, 23.

Harry Tarantin, who did the other day, was one of the multimillionaires of whom the general public knew and saw very little. Some years ago his fortune was computed at 12,000,000. His estate alone amounted to several hundreds of thousands of pounds a year, for to a great extent he lived frugally. His one luxury being good cigars, which he smoked incessantly.

State colored commissioners, representing Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin and Michigan at a recent meeting in Chicago took action toward issuing circulars on railroad rights of way. Resolutions were adopted urging the strict enforcement of laws against walking on railroad tracks and suggesting that police powers be given to railroad firemen to arrest trespassers and prevent fires on rights of way.

The mayor of Chicago who by force of circumstances are compelled to buy their coal by the bushelful pay for it much wider in excess of the prices charged by those who can purchase in lots or more a sum equal to the total contributions to the five principal charitable organizations in the city. This is the conclusion reached by the officials of the Chicago Relief and Aid society after an investigation into conditions prevalent in the congested districts.

WOMAN AND FASHION

The Newest Negligee.

The cut shows a graceful design for a negligee, the model being of old rose polish silk. The plain is cut with a sweeping train fastened about the bottom by a deep opaline bow. The yoke is lined across the front and sleeves with cloth, while satin ribbon is used to match. The collar and sleeve edge are finished with old rose ruffles of a very much darker shade.

The Geisha Frock.

A novelty in girls' garments is the geisha frock, and an extremely odd looking one it is. Fashioned from tan linen, it has a pleated skirt attached to a white muslin sleeveless waist (just by way of sage ery), and over it is a blouse cut exactly on the same lines as that worn by a Chinese, reaching just over the hips. This coat is cut in a Dutch short square, and the sleeves are full shape, ending at the elbows.

The dress may be worn with a gainsborough hat, as pictured. The brim of the blouse and edges of sleeves and neck are decorated with a simple embroidery worked in white thread.

The distinguished feature of this new design is the addition of fingerfrilling. On the lower edge at underarm seams the blouse is cut away for about six by four inches and the space filled in with the frilling. There is a similar effect given at the edges of the bell sleeves with a narrower frilling.

New Use For Old Lace Gheuls.

Women lucky enough to own old lace should be well on every thoughtful mind, which covers the front of the gown and is tied behind much in the way of the child's ordinary old fashioned pinafore. These lace aprons are best over a princess dress. A good substitute is a brent stole of lace, which at once suggests a use for the broad lace scarfs among women have put away with their treasured lace shawls. The woman who is indeed fortunate who has lace and old jewelry, for these articles at present are prized as well as sentimental treasures.

The Curveless Mode.

Its boldness is the middle on suggesting any curves of fullness in the outline that three seems little left to remind us of the female figure.

Dresses are so planned, padded and draped that they do away with any semblance of hips, bust or waist, and the world achieves the desired effect when it is complimented for its shapeless.

Any author dares to show away with to pads, either arranged on the corsage or in the dress fabric and the silhouette produced is the Pompadour. It is to become the latest and newest is our idea of beauty.

Handmade Linen Gloves.

Some white handkerchief linen is used for the blouse shown in the sketch. About any other can be used

Costume of German Jurists.

"The black robe and the cap belonging to the outfit of a lawyer in the German universities," writes an American tourist from that place, "and when the lawyer attains the dignity of judge the collar on his robe is changed from silk to velvet. In this law providing for the 'guard of honor' was passed, the prerequisites for practicing attorneys instituted a white neckties. Years ago this ceremony consisted in duelling. Because, as lawyers tell me, it 'was expensive and troublesome' for a young judge in Berlin, however, who insists on the proper dress, and lawyers who happen before him must appear, if neckties be black, to be turned away with the remark: 'Your cravat is not white.'"

Getting Along All Right.

A young Japanese in one of our institutions of learning, having acquired a very good knowledge of English, wrote an essay to deliver a lecture of that language. On his return, says the Harper's Central, one of the instructors asked if he had a pleasant time. He replied: "Yes, very; I have very good time on this lecture." "Oh, quite well, but the audience? Do you think they would could see no jokes." "Could you give me an instance?" "Well, I opened my lecture by saying that the day of March 4, 1905, was the happiest day of Japanese and probably other, based is hardly appointed to the occasion." "Well?" "Then I continued: 'But a public notice has been given by proclamation of a copy of this order, that the Japanese are forbidden to sold day of hostage, in the Chatfields Restitution to the Japanese." "Well?" "It is only a joke."

A Bad Catch.

"Hurrying out on hearing a commotion, I found that it was my little three-year-old sister, Muriel, whose eyes and hair were covered with blood. As soon as I had bathed her hand and quieted her, I asked her the cause of the accident. 'I there that letter go for God to catch,' was the reply. 'But he didn't catch it!'—Dallmanger."

WAS JUST ONE DOLLAR AHEAD.

What Little Financial Transaction Had Netted Widow.

"Mrs. then a year ago," said the insurance man, "I received a letter which said that the writer was a widow and asked for a little financial assistance. She wasn't very greedy, but would let me off with a dollar. I showed the letter then a pleasantle to gold to further attention to it. Just week another came. Then a third and a fourth, and as a matter of fact one came for each week in the year until I got 52 of them. The widow had spent $1.01 in her efforts to obtain a dollar from me. I thought such persistency deserved an answer of some sort, and so I wrote her:

"'Madam: I have received 52 letters from the dollar asked for, but can't you figure that you are still four cents out?'

"Thanks. No, I can't figure that way. So I begged my stationery and stamps from the neighbors. I am just $1 in pocket to your credit.

"'I have always had a tender heart for widows,' sighed the insurance man, 'but in this case I don't think there is any call for my sympathy.'"

INGERSOLL'S TRIBUTE TO LOVE.

First Dress of Immortality; Fills the World with Melody.

Love is the only bow on life's dark cloud. It is the morning and evening star. It shines with the same splendor on the mansion or the quiet tomb. It is the mother of art; inspirer of poet, painter and sculptor. It is the star and light of every heart; builder of every home; shelter of every fire on the hearth; it was the first dress of immortality. It fills the world with melody; for music is the voice of love. Love is the magician, the enchanter that changes worthless rags into wings and makes rich royal queens and kings of common clay. It is the perfume of that wonderful flower, the heart, and without that sacred emblem, that divine incense, we are less than beasts; but with it—earth is heaven and we are gods.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Vincent Karas, employed as janitor in the Wilson freightshed, is missing and it is believed he may have lost his life in the burning building. Miss May Donnelly, 20 years old, employed as night telephone operator, proved herself a heroine. She remained at the switchboard notifying the different employes in the zones of the fire until overcome by smoke. Frank and Don Corbus, brothers, employed as clerks in the office, found Miss Donnelly unconscious in front of the switchboard and carried her to the office of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad, where she was revived.

The fire was discovered shortly after 11 o'clock in the office portion of the building and soon was a general alarm was given. Fanned by a lake wind blowing from the west, the flames spread so rapidly that by the time the first company arrived the entire structure was ablaze. The Wilcox freightshed was a crowd of high structure, and the Wilcox freight, 14th street. It was erected many years ago at a cost of $100,000. Chief Horn's fire crews were perhaps the first to discover the fire. He was unable to offer any explanation as to the cause, but said he first saw flames bursting through the roof in the two-story part near an office.

TRAIN HOLD-UP NEAR DENVER

Bandits Who Stopped Mail Had Carefully Laid Plans.

That the holding up of the Denver and Rio Grande passenger train, which left Denver early Saturday morning was the work of three bandits of the highwaymen, and that the robbery of the mail car was their main, but not possibly, $50,000 in gold, was the opinion of officers of the police and railroad officials. So far no tangible clue to the identity of the robbers or the robbers has been found, but it seems probable that the men went to Denver and are now hiding in that city. Eighteen packages of registered mail were stolen.

The robbery was remarkable for its originality and daring. It took place within sight of Denver, which is less than two miles of Fort Logan, the United States military reservation, and in the spot where bandits are generally. Yet so thoroughly was the work of the robbers and so well had their plans laid that they had fully an hour and a half start of the officers.

Reports of the details of the hold-up indicates that a third man, and possibly a fourth, were engaged in the robbery; that a rubber tired buggy was in waiting for the bandits to use, and that firearms and red-signal fires were used successfully in an attempt to stop the train before the automatic revolvers of the two men on the engine could be brought into action.

From the manner in which the holdup was accomplished it is thought one or more of the bandits are the men responsible for the hold-up of the Denver and Rio Grande train last May, when the Express Messenger Wright was killed.

SIX LOSE LIVES IN FIRE.

Roof Falls and Five Milwaukee Firemen Meet Death.

Five firemen are dead, nine injured, two of the latter fatally, and one other is lost his life as a result of a fire which broke out in the warehouse of the Milwaukee Malt Manufacturing Company, at 225 Chybourn street. Mr. Chase, who was last seen Saturday morning before 11 o'clock, the warehouse, together with the three-story brick plant of the Nelson Manufacturing Company, near by, being practically destroyed with a loss of $250,000, which is covered by insurance.

The Nelson company's loss by the fire has reached a direct settlement with the government, by which the company will continue the work of its property in Venezuela and agrees to pay the government a royalty revenue of $20,000 a year. Furthermore, the company will pay the government a cash indemnity of $20,000 to compensate the said government for the loss of its property in the Matos trade.

ROOSEVELT EULOGIZES THE WAR PRESIDENT

Lays Corner Stone of Memorial at the Cabin Where Lincoln Was Born.

KENTUCKY TOWN A MECCA

Hodgenville Temporary Capital of World—Other Noted Men Make Speeches at Famous Farm.

In an address which probably will rank as one of the most forceful he has ever delivered, President Roosevelt on Monday of Lincoln's birthday delivered the nation's tribute to the War President at the spot where 100 years ago the great emancipator was born.

Mr. Roosevelt drew a lesson for the men of today in solving the great problems of the nation from Lincoln's "combination of indomitable resolution with cool-headed sanity." He never went to extremes, showed "timid and lukewarm people were always deeply hateful to him because he was no extreme." the speaker asserted.

"No more practical man ever lived than this intensely lackwards idealist," said Mr. Roosevelt, "but he had nothing in common with those practical men who are unconscious are warped until they fail to distinguish between evil and evil, fail to understand that strength, ability, shrewdness, whether in the world of business or of politics, only serve to make their possessor a more serious, a more evil menace if he is unscrupulous, if they are not guided and controlled by a fine and high moral purpose. Lincoln did not hate the man from whom he differed. He saw clearly that the same high qualities of the same courage and willingness for self-sacrifice, and devotion to the right it was among them to save the right, belonged both to the men of the North and to the men of the South.

"As the years roll by, and as our eyes, wherever we dwell, grow to feel an equal pride in the valor and self-devotion alike of the men who wore the blue and the men who wore the gray so this whole nation will grow to feel a peculiar sense of pride in the significance of the mighty men who marched the mighty days, the lower at his country and of all mankind; the man whose blood was shed for the union of his people and for the freedom of a race—Abraham Lincoln."

The President's address was delivered in the laying of that corner stone for the memorial on the farm near Hodgenville, Ky., where stands the log cabin which was Lincoln's birthplace. Governor Willson of Kentucky, Secretary of War Wright and Vice Governor Fort of Missouri were the other speakers.

PEACE WITH VENEZUELA

Protocol Signed to Settle All Disputes with United States.

A protocol, in substance of the matters between the United States and Venezuela was signed Saturday. The Venezuelan cabinet the previous day approved the proposal to effect the settlement of disputes between the United States and Venezuela, thus removing the last obstacle in the signing of the protocol.

Three claims go to the Hague tribunal for arbitration, the fourth is settled by a small cash payment, and the fifth has been settled directly between the Venezuelan government and the claimants. The protocol is expected to be signed by the United States and to Venezuela. It saves the dignity and honor of Venezuela, while as for the United States the troublesome claims that have led to so much negotiation disposed of.

The New York and Bermudez Asphalt companies, through Mr. Bowen, has reached a direct settlement with the government, by which the company will continue the work of its property in Venezuela and agrees to pay the government a royalty revenue of $20,000 a year. Furthermore, the company will pay the government a cash indemnity of $20,000 to compensate the said government for the loss of its property in the Matos trade.

DOG SAVES 12 IN HOTEL FIRE

Several Guests Carried Into Street After Animal Gives Alarm.

The barking of a collie dog owned by Owen Hughes, proprietor of the Hotel Del Europe on West 9th street, New York, probably saved the lives of twelve people who were asleep in the hotel when the blaze got to the basement. Hughes, who slept on the second floor with his wife and three children, was awakened by the dog's barking and found the hall filling with smoke. An alarm was turned in and he then ran down to see if he could extinguish the blaze in the basement. Several of the guests were carried out by ladders and had to be carried to the street.

Girls Narrowly Escape Fire.

Forty young women employed in the laundry department of Morris & Co.'s packing plant in Kansas City, Kan., are poorly escaped with their lives when fire broke out in the second floor of the plant. The fire practically destroyed the interior of the entire building.

Platform Collapses; Three Die.

By the collapse of a platform upon which a group of men were at work on a building at the plant of the American Shipbuilding Company at Cleveland, Ohio, John Hoffman, Frank Barrella and Stephen Kelsch were killed.

300 ROASTED ALIVE IN MEXICAN THEATER

Moving Picture Film Sets Fire to Crowded Playhouse at Acapulco and Panic Ensues.

CORPSES BLOCK ALL THE EXITS.

Whole Families Blotted Out by Disaster Which Overtakes City During a Gala Performance.

Three hundred people were burned to death and many were injured in a fire which destroyed the Flores Theatre in the City of Acapulco, Mexico, Sunday night. The news of the disaster reached the city of Mexico Monday morning. Inexplicable consumbation with Acapulco having been destroyed telegraphic the fire that the telegraph office adjoining the theater was burned and all store put out of commission. It is known that several Americans were among the victims.

The Flores Theatre was a wooden structure and Sunday night over 1,000 people crowded into it to witness a gala performance given in honor of Governor Damian Flores of the State of Guerrero, who was visiting the city at the time. One of the numbers on the program consisted of a series of moving pictures. While the operator was exhibiting, these a film caught fire and in a flash was communicated to some hunting which had been used for decorative purposes.

Corpses Choke Way.

In an incredibly short time the flames spread to all parts of the structure. There were but three narrow exits and the panic-stricken audience rushed to them, many being killed, to be crushed to death, their bodies falling in a heap to block the doorways.

The screams of those imprisoned were terrifying, owing to the rapidity with which the fire spread and the intense heat it was impossible to attempt rescue work, and those imprisoned were literally roasted alive, as the fire burned with little smoke and no were suffocated.

The efforts of the fire department were confined to attempting to save the adjoining buildings, and the firemen succeeded so well that the property loss was small. The Spanish office, post-office and custom house were damaged, but all of the government records and the registered mail were saved.

Monday pitiful scenes of grief were witnessed in the streets of the City. Men, women and children were wandering from place to place, hunting for relatives and friends. Many of the dead were from the first families of Acapulco, the flower of the Mexican nobility. The loss of the city has been being a social event of considerable importance, the theater filling up with men and added families for miles around. In some instances whole families are wiped out of existence.

The unemployed authorities have issued proclamations in the City of Mexico, in which they speak of the dead as "the heroes who have fallen in the battle of the dead were buried in the Panteon, the cemetery of the City of Mexico, the dead were buried in the Panteon, the cemetery of the City of Mexico, the dead were buried in the Panteon, the cemetery of the City of Mexico,

GIRL BOUND TO BATH TUB.

Chicago Police Are Mystified by Strange Adventure.

The Chicago police are trying to unravel the mystery that surrounds the finding of Miss Rita Quigley, 18, unconscious and bleeding in a bath tub at the Wellington Hotel in that city. The girl's hands and legs were tightly bound to the tub and a gag was in her mouth. She was suffering from laudanum from a bottle that lay on the floor, and had been attacked before being bound.

She was found after police had been told of a note sent to her roommate, which said she expected to be killed at the hotel. The note apparently had been mailed before the hour at which Miss Quigley said she was taken to the hotel by a strange man and woman, who threw pepper into her eyes and hurried her away in the cab. The girl said she wrote the note while her capors were absent from her room. She made no attempt to attract help by screaming or by using the phone in the room.

The girl came recently from Ireland and was arranged to a benefactor for whom she worked with pilfering. Friends of the girl told the police of her generosity. The name of the woman for whom she worked was on the night book in the hotel note when found in the tub. The late employer said the girl had never seen the woman and declared the girl was seeking revenge.

The door of the bath room was locked on the inside.

TAFT CABINET IS COMPLETE.

Knox Agrees to Serve, but Will Take No Increase in Salary.

President-elect Taft has completed his cabinet. Announcement was made Tuesday that Senator Knox would accept the Secretaryship of State when the enabling act passed by Congress to put into effect the increase in the salary of that office would be sent on increase of salary, even if Congress were to vote one. Jacob H. Dickinson of Chicago and Nashville is to be Secretary of War. Invitations to Treasurer Judge Willis M. Vandervoorter of Wooster, Ohio, to be Secretary of the Treasury. This was the last place filled by Mr. Taft and is subject to position change between now and March 4. The remainder of the cabinet is to be announced as mentioned.

Secretary of the Interior, Richard A. Ballinger of Washington.

Postmaster General, Frank Hitchcock of Massachusetts.

Attorney General, George W. Wickersham of New York.

Secretary of Commerce and Labor, Charles L. Nagel of Missouri.

Secretary of Agriculture, James Wilson of Iowa.

The positive announcement that Mr. Knox would be the new Secretary of State was made by President-elect Taft shortly after his arrival at the White House. The statement was made after Mr. Knox, in whom the incoming executive and Mr. Knox, in whom Mr. Taft insisted that all possible difficulty had been settled by the action of Congress.

DEEP SNOW SAVES LOSS OF LIFE.

Great Northern Train Wrecked and Chicago Man Badly Injured.

The snow was probably all that saved many of the passengers on the Great Northern train which left Grand Forks, N. D., Tuesday for Winnipeg. The train was derailed three miles north of Arbuck, the engine remaining on the track and the cars being piled in the ditch. Nearly all of the 150 passengers on the train were more or less injured. One of the more seriously was Charles McCree of Chicago, who received a severe cut over the eyes, the smoker and observation cars were filled with the snow and the couch remained upright. The accident was due to a broken rail.

NATION HAILS FLEET THAT GIRDLES GLOBE

EPOCH-MAKING CRUISE ENDS

Roosevelt, as Commander in Chief of Navy, Welcomes Admiral Sperry's Squadron.

PANDEMONIUM REIGNS ON SEA.

Nearly Ten Miles of Formidable War Craft Steams Majestically Past the President's Yacht.

With pennants streaming, twenty-eight hands playing the "Star-Spangled Banner" and saluting cannon roaring a tribute to the President, the battleship fleet of the American navy ended its world cruise at 4:00 Point Comfort, Va., Monday. After standing in review before the President, whose eagle crested flag of blue was at the mast of the cruiser yacht Mayflower, the sixteen white battle ships cast anchor in the fairway of Hampton Roads, from which they started fourteen months ago on their voyage of 43,000 miles.

The joy of home-coming was written upon the faces of every blue jacket and officer on the vessels. The long cruise, the visits to many of the most famous ports of the world and the homage paid to the fleet by every nation have been a source of pleasure to everyone aboard, but there was no sense in all the world to compare in beauty with the home-coming made by the fleet as it steamed a triumphant, self reliant and defiant line through the Virginia capes and entered the hospitable waters of Chesapeake Bay and Hampton Roads. The majestic camouflet steamed at the head of the returning squadron, in the wake of the white ships was a welcoming host in gray—four battle ships and five powerful cruisers being in this escorting column with a thousand miles to sea to convoy the first word of welcome.

President Receives Officers.

Foreign naval attaches, parties of government officials and high officers of the army and navy were aboard the fleet which steamed out to greet the incoming vessels and to see the review by the President at the mouth of the Hampton Roads. The Mayflower came down from Washington with a distinguished party, and cast her anchors in the waters in which she took up a position at the sailing of the fleet. Immediately behind the Mayflower, carrying the President, lay a convoy of vessels, such as never was assembled in the world before, and "navy sweethearts" filled their decks. From every national was flung the signal "Welcome Home."

Now aboard the Mayflower a black mounted gun belched forth a puff of white smoke and a tremendous explosion shake the echoes along the shores of historic Hampton Roads, covered with people so far as the eye could reach. Twenty-one guns fired from each vessel in the royal succession from the flagship Connecticut bearing on its jackie Admiral Sperry, commander of the fleet, saluted the President, fire streaming "Homeward bound" pennant and the long lines of jackies manning her yard arms and shouting top and mast head ship along the deck were soon wrapped in smoke. From every vessel in the welcoming fleet rolled back a volume of cheers such as was never heard in Hampton Roads before. It was a burst of patriotic enthusiasm in which the human voice was matched against steel and gunpowder. Every sun capstan grabbed his whistle line and tore loose at a rate that threatened to have left no one stranded on the shore for lack of steam to get home.

After the ceremonial greeting of the battle ships and their escort the Mayflower crossed to the end of the long column into Hampton Roads, and when the home-coming craft had anchored she took up a position in the center of the fleet. Admiral Sperry and the other flag officers, together with commanding officers, were received on board, and to them President Roosevelt extended the cordial thanks which he afterward expressed more in the silence and cheers of the four dreadnaut dreadships—the Connecticut, the Louisiana, the Georgia and the Wisconsin—which he visited into the afternoon.

Gala Day on Historic Waters.

The boom of the sunrise gun echoing over the scene of 300 years of old from Mercer marked the beginning of a gala day on the waters of Hampton Roads, first made famous by the battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac. It was the vivid imagination to look back over a span of forty-odd years to compare the fleet of that earlier date with the combatants with a modern battle ship of the class of the Connecticut, for in the battle ship and cruiser squadrons which filed past the Mayflower and anchored in Hampton Roads were represented 420,000 tons of water displacement. Every battle ship in commission in the navy and a place in the long line. There were twenty of the heavily belted vessels.

EXTRA SESSION MARCH 15.

President-Elect Taft Announces Date for the Convening of Congress.

The extra session of Congress will be convened on March 15. This date has been definitely settled and President-elect Taft authorized the announcement. Formerly the impression had been that the Republican House Leader Payne had the information of the House. He said he had been authorized by Mr. Taft to state that the special session of the 62d Congress would be called to convene on March 15.

ANGELL OUT AS PRESIDENT.

Resigns at Ann Arbor to Be Made Chancellor Forthwith.

Dr. James Burrill Angell has resigned from the presidency of the Ann Arbor University of Michigan after thirty-eight years of continuous service. The board of regents accepted the resignation, as Dr. Angell urgently requested that action, but gave assurance that he would not entirely sever his connection with the institution by persisting him in appointment to the position of chancellor of the university.

President Angell's resignation will take effect at the close of the present college year. He attempted to resign four years ago, but at that time the regents refused to consider his request.

DR. JAMES B. ANGELL.

Since that time rumors have been frequent that the venerable educator would relinquish the reins to a young man. Despite these rumors, the action both of President Angell and the board came as a big surprise.

Dr. Angell still continues to lecture on international law and the history of treaties even after his resignation takes effect, and as chancellor will receive an annual salary of $4000, in addition having his present residence maintained.

Defect in Infernal Machine Saves Lives of L. W. Jones and Family.

Lawrence M. Jones, a wealthy dry goods merchant of Kansas City, and his family were gathered into the library of their home Tuesday by a note which an authorized messenger had left at Jones's door. The note was addressed to the master of the house. Within the library was a package addressed to the family. The package was opened by Jones's son, who was home from Yale for the Christmas holidays. The lid was hardly lifted when a loud report shattered the house and the library was wrecked by a dynamite bomb. The explosion was heard for a mile and a crowd gathered in front of the house. The son was the only member of the family who was in the room when the bomb exploded. He was not seriously injured. The bomb was made of a tin box, the lid of which was fastened with a spring. The lid was lifted by the pressure of the package

WASHINGTON LETTER

[Special Correspondence.]

At a recent meeting of the inaugural committee, a resolution endorsing the participation of the famous Philippine expositionary band in all of the functions incident to the inauguration of William Howard Taft as president on March 4 was unanimously adopted. In accordance with the action of the committee the secretary of war, through Brigadier General Clarence R. Edwards, U. S. A., chief of the bureau of insular affairs and a member of the inaugural committee, has authorized their coming. The trip will be made without cost to the Philippine government, but private parties interested in having them appear at the convention have guaranteed to defray their expenses while in Washington.

The Filipino Band.

The band, which has been in existence for ten years and has the reputation of being second to none in the world, is a regularly organized military body, established by the Philippine government and composed of Filipinos under the direction of the command of Captain Walter H. Loveless a commissioned officer in the Philippine constabulary and a graduate of the conservatories of music in Cherlsrul and Vienna.

Inaugural Railway Fares.

The chairman of the inaugural committee on transportation has announced the following railroad rates from points more than twenty miles from points more than 100 miles and not exceeding 250 miles from Washington, 2 cents per mile in each direction and beyond the 250 mile limit rates not exceed the best class limited fare for the round trip for parties of fifty or more traveling together on sale tickets in both directions, 1½ cents a mile each way in each direction. Tickets to be sold March 1, 2 and 3, valid for return leaving Washington until March 8, inclusive.

Mr. Courts in Demand.

There is no other servant of the United States in the capital halloing than James C. Courts, the administrative clerk of the house committee on appropriations. With all the great committees of the house, he is absolutely at sea more than any other man.

It would be almost an entire impossibility for Chairman Tawney or any other member of the committee to carry in his mind the vast details of the appropriation bills which it brings into the house, carrying amounts varying from a few to more than thousands. Some member of the house wants to know about some item in every bill, and frequently the whole house wants to know about a good many of them. Chairman Tawney can answer without so many questions as any other chairman who ever stood in his shoes, but in courts who, when he sits down, is almost lifted by the desk to resume his seat, he is the easily popular man the chairman's memory fails.

Speedy Legislation.

When congress recently voted $500,000 for the relief of the Italian earthquake victims an unusual scene was enacted in the house. A rubber-neck congressman had arisen between the president and congress ait to the amount of $500 and was about to propose a $1,000 for the Italian relief, expected by the house committee on appropriations and put it over the president's veto, when Mr. Cousins, a Iowa Republican congressman, rushed down the aisle and in the member's table handing about a dozen cigars and cigarettes, and lighting one himself, he puffed the fragrant smoke into the faces of Mr. Cooper and his colleagues who had voted against the bill and voters who had voted the bill to the committee.

Crowds of the Capital.

Compared with its nearest rival—Baltimore—Washington is nothing approaches Baltimore's percentage of growth between 1890 and 1900 was 17.1, while Washington's was 23.6. The disparity in expansion will undoubtedly be greater in the decade from 1900 to 1910, for Baltimore's growth was checked for a year or more by the losses of the great fire of 1904, while Washington's growth has been stimulated by enormous building operations, most of them conducted under the auspices of the national government.

Most Residence City.

In the physical aspect Washington has political supremacy in attractiveness, in the last edition of ten years it is an ideal residence city, and its charms appeal most powerfully to those who have leisure enough to enjoy them. It has become the winter home of the leaders of wealth and of persons from all parts of the Union, and its order and beauty make living within its borders constant satisfaction. It will has great precedents in the way of architectural development, and its material prosperity is secured by the ever broadening activities of the great governmental machine. CLYDE SUTHERLAND.

WOMAN AND FASHION

The Vogue of Braid and Fringe.

Wide fringe is fashion, always and moderate from the most striking ornamentation for this broadcloth gown. The vamps is one that is well suited not only to mid-winter but to spring wear. The yoke is made of broadcloth fairly covered with conventional designs in soutache braid, and the same effect is repeated in the braided skirt. The gown is made in the adaptable princess style. The long tight sleeves are of tucked chiffon.

Colored Umbrellas Are Favored.

Colors in umbrellas are fashionable this year, and dark red, dark green, taupe and old heather green are the most popular. Black is always in good taste, but if one has a gown that will harmonize with a dull heather, all need of the extravagance shades these sorts in umbrellas, mounted with long handles decorated in gold, silver or ivory, are so severe.

Bamboo, tipped handles of ivory are entirely out of favor, long ivories are passed them, and some of the tops of handles are carvings of Pooy for the depth of silk and eight inches.

The correct size this year for women is twenty-six inches, and the rod and ribs of steel are so very fine that when the umbrella is closely rolled it can scarcely be distinguished from a walking cane.

Newest Fashion Notion.

Short, narrow directoire coats with rolling silk have real force a phenomenon effect made in satin and worn with a satin hat having a dotted crown.

Hummes are frisky in front, and these who wear them collars fitted to the back, the hump thus finding a place to front.

Heavily wrought military covers the fabric in one of the revivals, the braid being set in curved lines.

Some of the new skirts are cut to pointy in front and trimmed at the back, and so many of the coats are far longer at the back than the front.

soft satin or silk. The straight bodice is of the material edged with an embroidered band. This is worn over a gulpore or white chiffon or silk mull. There is a mass of colored satin ribbon knotted at the side.

The Armadillo Sleeve.

The sleeve made up of folds has had a rival in the "armadillo sleeve." It is none. What looks seem in handsome contrast with it, even in the dark colors, seem. Sleeves are of great importance always, and it will be interesting to note the ways of the new ones that are coming in for spring. As yet, while shoulder wear well, sleeves are close fitting, the old way of covering the sleeve into the armhole without fullness at the top has not been revived. It always makes an awkward shoulder, and after the long fullness of armholes an ill treatment would be frowned upon by most women.

His Curing Hats.

One of the most continually dressed men in the world lives in New York and is seen frequently at the opera. When a work by a French composer is given he always wears an opera hat he bought in Paris, and when they play Italian operas he the bears the label of a hatter in Milan.

DAYS OF TRIBULATION OVER.

Persistent Office-Seeker Had Finally Landed Soft Job.

"I remember one man from my home town," a westerner said the other recently, "in the good old days of civil service examinations, whose dream of easily attainment was a fat office in Washington. With his party was finally successful he immediately set out for Washington and was in the job long before the 4th of March, but there seemed to be a hitch in his affairs. All through the spring he was about town. Whenever I met it I would see him, drifting for the first after an audience with some or part-time official. He looked very shabby and broken looking, but still put extra in his dress. Finally I heard him in the gallery of the senate chamber apparently endeavoring to sell it so.

"Well, Jake, how goes it, up?" I asked, trying to be sympathetic.

"Oh, I got the job all right," he replied with a sadness all out of the "working now," "Success is grueling.

The Earliest Religion.

Religion was at first purely domestic, and rites of the family, love and loyalty. The gods were the dead ancestors, and the worship consisted in the peculiar care of the bodies, for the comfort of the departed relatives. It was the earliest form of religion, and, so far as we know, the most ancient and most continuous. It lies in or about the tomb, and that tomb, power and importance depended on the care with which it was persistently tended after their worship. If the tomb fire was allowed to die out, or the tomb was neglected, or its food and drink were not faithfully taken to the tomb, their existence became a miserable one, and the ghosts of such neglected dead, if left unfed,

CHAPTER VII.

"I shall be glad to see Jack Phillimore," said Mrs. Lyne Wraglè, as she rang her green room bell in the drawing room in Victoria Road, available for all comers, as it happened. "It is a good year of that young man's, I'm sure, and shall, of course, be have a good holiday, although I suppose that would be doing him goodness for a very long while."

"Yes," replied Beatrice, "that is the worst of it. It is of course very nice that he should get a step, because I know he wants one; but, I must say, I don't like losing Jack for so long."

"Pooh, child! Jack has got his way to make in the world, and he must be up and doing by dangling about your apron strings."

"I don't think Jack minds being bullied and teased by me, grandmamma," replied the girl.

"He will probably bring back a wife from the other side of the world."

"Jack will never marry," replied the girl quickly.

"Ah, well, my dear," said the old lady absently, "he does, of course, as you say, seem to be a wicked old woman," voiced the girl, as her cheek flushed, "and I dare say he may need her grandmother's, and aunt's advice before settling down and marrying me like that."

But now the door opened, and Mr. Phillimore made his appearance—a good looking young fellow, rather tall, with fair hair, blue eyes, and a blonde moustache. He shook hands cordially in obsequious and he was greeted by the ladies, save to the announcement that dinner was ready, handed Mrs. Lyne Wraglè stately courtesy to the dining room.

"And, Jack, you must be glad with your appointment," observed Mrs. Lyne Wraglè. "It seems to really be a fine thing for you."

"Great for a lucky lad," he replied, an pulse out, you see, as the Admiralty flag hoisteth."

"And when do you are to be away three years, Jack," remarked Beatrice.

"Yes, but it is to be spent at a first rate station."

"And you would have no regrets about leaving England for so long?" inquired Beatrice, in somewhat more serious tones.

"Well, of course, replied her cousin, "I should be sorry not to see any of you for so long a time; but then, you know, when a man turns sailor he of course expects all that sort of thing. Besides, I shall never be away from home for three years, Jack," remarked Beatrice.

"Yes, but it is to be spent at a first rate station."

"And, of course, I shall be sorry to be away from Mr. Carbuckle, whom I have received from you, and can always make a dash home if any event of importance is about to take place in the family."

"Much as I should like to see Jack, replied Beatrice demurely.

"Yes, you know, I quite sure I shall be there whenever that takes place," said Jack Phillimore, "seen if I am tried for a coward or not."

"Oh, but you might not be asked, you know."

"Ah, well, Trixie, you know that I deserve to be asked, if only for your wedding could take place without my being present."

"Well, now," said the old lady, "I shall have young people to dance, have your talk set by yourselves while I take my usual nap before tea."

"Then you have to leave almost at once, Jack," said the girl in the drawing while her cousin closed the door behind Mrs. Lyne Wraglè.

"I leave Waterloo by the mail train tomorrow night," said the young man, "so the next time that I shall see you, Trixie, till I don't know when, I shall be there to-morrow that it will be quite impossible for me to get out here. but I have counted on this evening, have something to say to you."

"Have England somehow indeed that I could not leave England without saying, cannot you guess what it is, Beatrice?"

The girl's lips exhibited a scarcely audible "No," while the blood that tinted her cheeks gave fair contradiction.

"Yes, I think you can, Trixie," he continued. "If I have never told you in so many words that I love you, I have always thought you knew it, and I have loved you for years. I loved you as a child, loved you as a woman, and I want you to tell me that you can love me in return. Can you not tell me that, darling? Can you not promise that, when I come back at the end of three years you will be my wife?"

"No, Jack," she replied softly, "I can not do that."

"Have I been mistaken, Beatrice?" he exclaimed, sadly. "Can you not regard me no longer as a cousin, but as your betrothed husband?"

"You must not ask that question, Jack."

"I cannot see that," he replied in reproachful tone. "This seems to me a simple question; I made up my mind to ask you that question before sailing, and you that question before sailing, and surely I may deserve a courteous reply, if it be to say that I am not to be, Beatrice, that I have already had it, and that it is unfair to press for further; but my whole life is at stake."

"But I do love you," she replied, with flushed cheeks.

"Will enough to be my wife, darling?" he whispered, as he drew her gently to her waist.

"Yes, and I was just about to tell you so, only you were so dreadfully impetuous, Jack," she continued, as she plaited to his embrace, "when he no longer to ask me for my hand, and I'm so delighted that I could not interrupt you, and I ought to have waited before." she said half shyly, half saucily, "but can not you understand, Jack, that as proof of having won such a love that she could not bear to break in upon her lover's speech?"

"But, Beatrice, darest, when I leave, so cruel as to ask me to wait? Why did you tell me you could not love me?"

"Why, Jack, I did not. You asked me to promise to be your wife, and I told you I could not. Now that you have told me that you love me I can tell you all. Grandmamma, you know, is a very clever old woman. There is nothing you can do for her but what she knows beforehand more about than the people concerned. I am sure she knew all that she discovered by accident. Horrible to confess, she had some of her suspicions, which she distrusted and which she tried to divine that you would ask this question before you left England, and she made no jibe that I would not pledge myself to be your wife."

"Well," cried Jack, "this is more than I ever dreamed of. I thought that my mother's favorite with Mrs. Lyne Wraglè, and never dreamed that she would have approved me in this manner."

"You are a hopeless angler," said Beatrice. "You have an elsewhere friend who is a great friend of the profession to long engagements.

Mrs. Lyne Wraglè had not only finished her dose, but was preternaturally wide awake as the young people entered the drawing room. She eyed her niece keenly, and then exclaimed:

"Yet me my tea, child! It has been drawing so long that it is doubtless as strong as the proverbial Jack Phillimore has been making you down again. What have you promised to bring you back from foreign parts?" continued the old lady, laughing.

"Shall I tell you, Mrs. Lyne Wraglè?" interrupted the young man eagerly.

"What is it to be this time?"

"Only a wedding ring."

"Jack Beatrice," interposed the old lady quickly, "you have not promised to wed you? It have, aunt."

"No, grandmamma."

"Well, Jack, I have no wish to say 'No, grandmamma,' replied the girl. "but I have one word to say 'No' to your request."

"I understand, I was in no position for asking, sir, and I really cannot undertake to say that I should be required to wed, but I am of opinion that has been perpetrated upon you which would have prevented your from so much as mentioning to me such a request."

"Well, Jack, I'm sorry that my tongue is so much in advance of my brain, but I must only submit to the consequences of my folly. I'm sorry I'm so much in your way, Beatrice, but I must be a little more to be said about it, and I must be a little more to be said about it, and I must be a little more to be said about it, and

Suggested by the Waist of Events—Convalescent Thoughts That Came in Through the Window of the Sick Room.

EX-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

No president since Washington has retired from the affectionate regard of the American people without diminution of popularity, as he. Mr. Roosevelt has one quality that is summed up in two words: "Dad's cure." This quality has two bearings that are divided only by a discriminate interpretation of the term. One leaning is a zealous disregard of the right or wrong of the proposition that calls individual independence into play. The other leaning is the exercise of it in the consciousness of right action in the face of contentious criticism.

The last bearing is, we believe, that which has governed the administrative record of President Roosevelt. To be criticised and abused by the malcontents of the Tillman, Willett and Cook stripe is an honor to any man.

For the next two years, the only thing that will keep Roosevelt free of the pale is when he orients a gentleman in the jungles of Africa. But he will do that his record and get the gentle.

The papers are saying that Gov. Warner has said that in the event of certain possible happenings he will again be a candidate for governor. This is consistent with one differences. Hyde seems to work let on defeat, while Mr. Warner acquires notoriety by hitching the bridal that he is IT. A fourth term for Gov. Warner, under any conditions, is an impossibility, and he ought to be wise enough to know it. The third term was a political blunder, and the suggestion of a fourth is a proposition that jolts all his great self-esteem.

Let's see! In what remarkable district are we now? We believe it is that district that is represented by Senator Birge, of Ontonagon. The citizens of Charlevoix have had sons for Ming years, and that was before the nominating convention, and we have forgotten how he looks. Spies did follow, Mr. Ming, and a good many newspapers did, and the reports printed in the Charlevoix papers. But we would rather see a senator from Ontonagon than a resident of our neighborhood. Shall we have to visit Lansing in order to become acquainted with the Senator?

The people of the United States today admire Mr. H. Taft as Pope Pius X. admires his grandest disciples farther removed from the "dark horses" or "surprise" class than Wm. H. Taft. His nomination and election was as natural and inevitable as the return of the seasons or the phases of the moon. He was a great man and he had no enemies. As federal judge, governor general and cabinet officer he clothed every undertaking with the mantle of success. To the Philippines, Cuba and Panama he was sent such exigencies. Hence, he was called home. Taft is great, and we will take his place among the great men.

The great, irrepressible sentiment is creeping through the political avenues of the state that Chas. S. Gifford will be the next governor of Michigan. From the north country comes a demand that cannot be longer ignored. Mr. Gifford will go into the contest as an avenger, with a solid upper peninsula delegation, and a rejection of their claim at that time spells disaster. To a large extent the upper portion of the lower peninsula is interested in the success of Mr. Gifford's cause.

The Lovely Olives at Home were such in the red, fine, hearty and body of the little son of H. M. Adsitt, of Hermansville, Mich. A terrible fever had left him a wreck for years. He fell all remedies and lost the best doctors, who said the poisoned blood had affected his lungs and nothing could save him—until, writes his mother, "seven bottles of Electric Bitters completely cured him." For Kidneys, Stomach, Liver, Blood and all Blood Disorders and Ailments from Malaria, Electric Bitters is supreme. On sale, Guaranteed by H. G. Hinz & Co.

Three Harbor Springs men, Captain Wright, Edward Tuttle'ett and Neil Wells, capsized a deer last Saturday on the east side of Harbor Springs and took it to the Republic for a time that place where it is being kept until a place can be made ready for it some where in Harbor Springs. The men were not looking for their fish known, which had drifted away, when they saw the deer and on the line. It soon broke through and would probably have drowned had they not taken it out.

WEXFORD COUNTY.

How Local Option Works Three—Papers Say It is an Unqualified Success.

(From the Cadillac Globe.)

After having been in the dry column for nearly a year it can be truthfully stated that Wexford county—realizing the villages and townships—are well pleased with the results and stand ready to endorse local option wherever and whenever the subject is presented. Its benefits are varied and pronounced. There is not a single one of the reasons which go to make up the interests of a community—moral, moral, intellectual or financial—that is not improved through the abolishment of the saloon.

The business has been legally outlawed and public sentiment is unanimously in favor of strict enforcement. Many authorized judges lay to the liquor habit the majority of the crimes committed in Wexford county, and judge Christian is of the opinion that if the license law is enforced there will be but a small percentage of what had been expected.

Cadillac and Wexford county for some reason seem to have been much in the limelight, and throughout the state the wet counties have been watching for results to pop up in the north woods." The liquor interests seem eager to have it said for the purpose of linking up evidence to use in their campaign this spring. "The real device" will not be used. It was not of the right sort.

You point sentiment and our editors are making it very dry in Wexford county.

Divine Right of Kings.

The divine right of kings is a doctrine generated in Scotland in the seventeenth century, which asserts that kings hold their authority by divine appointment and as earthly representatives of the deity. This doctrine relieved the governed of all responsibility toward his subjects and gave him absolute claim to their obedience.

The Unattainable.

Seeking the unattainable is for a man to try to find a corner in the hopes for some undiscovered reading without his having to be dazed ten minutes after he begins.—New York Press.

Origin of "Simon Pure."

Simon Pure is a character in Mrs. Chatterre's comedy, "A Bold Stroke for a Wife." It fell to him with a charming girl and after being counterfeited by an impostor succeeded in establishing his identity, proving himself to be the Simon Pure. The expression then came to be used to mean the real article, or something genuine.

A Strenuous Occupation.

As we look over the busy tugs of New York harbor we little realize the dangers and responsibilities of the busy life of these "draught horses" of the deep. Day and night, in all kinds of weather, they are hustling here and there about their various routes—towing. What a big fleet, we say, among craft is in distress by fire, or stranded, or in danger of accident, the assistance in the best seen the scene to every life or property. Yes, and sometimes craft have essential histories worth a page in a Sunday newspaper. The venerable steam lighter General Slocum, for instance, has been sunk five times!—New York Press.

Loved and Hated.

Europe hates our rifles, our pictures and our tobacco. Europe hates our money they have made and are willing to spend on old masters and new masters, even when they are spurious. It hates the rich American when he buys a rich European in competition for some highly desired art treasure. Then American money-makers who triumph by brute strength or the longer purse, and, worst than that, get compliments who raise art prices to unreasonable heights by their trade. Hated doubtless, but yet what they want when they want it.

Test for Drinking Water.

To ascertain if water is free from germs place about a quarter of a teaspoon of sugar in a bottle nearly full and cork up. If, after this exposure for the light for two or three days, no milky cloud is apparent, the water resembles spring water. It may be considered free from the germs with which sewage water is impregnated.

One Spider's Doings.

AT TOMB OF GREAT WARRIOR.

Description of Last Resting Place of Genghis Khan.

Genghis Khan, the Mongol chief, in his lifetime ruled over a world bounded one of the world's greatest warriors. His tomb exists at Eitchen Kotor, and is described in Consul de Lanlaire's "From Pekin to Zeilahe": "Two small buildings, one behind the other, and connected by a very long linear nave, lead through their roofs the rain and the wind, are the 'monuments' destined to perpetuate the memory of the greatest conqueror the world has known. The ashes of the body of Genghis Khan are deposited in a kind of chest, cubic in shape, and placed on a wooden support made of small colored pillars, adorned with paintings on all its sides, except that facing south, which is covered with a finely worked copper plate representing a divinity surrounded by four angels which are difficult to identify. The tomb is in fact, has not always been here, but it is difficult to know exactly where the first deposition of the great emperor laid his remains."

Where Noise Is Salable.

"You know, of course," said a watch factory foreman, "how I have captured the African shoe trade—making shoes that squeak loudly. The native considers the unusualness and exposure of a thing shows quite facile if they don't squeak as he walks, like an ungreased cart wheel. We have now begun the African watch trade, made up by turning out a good dollar watch equipped with a loud ticking. You could hear this tick through a feather mattress. In fact, natives wearing our watches tick audibly. As they swagger along, their American shoes squeaking and their American watches ticking, they give out as much noise as a brass band."

New hardwood floors are being put down in the parlors, metal ceiling and walls in the already beautiful dining-room, and many other minor improvements all over the house. Every room in the house will be thoroughly re-cleaned and re-decorated. No town of its size anywhere can boast of two better all-the-year hotels than Charlevoix.

—General manager Martling, of the West Michigan Sugar Co., informs the SENTINEL that the area of acreage now contracted for this year is slightly in excess of that of last year at this time. An encouraging feature of this fact is that the contracts are all from home farmers, and a considerable acreage is still expected. There is a slight drop in outside territory due to the transportation problem, but the company hopes to meet and overcome this difficulty. Agriculturist Stapton feels very much encouraged by the outlook, and predicts a successful year for all concerned. It is plainly evident that the future of the sugar factory is assured.

—Charles B. Blair, secretary of the commission of inquiry which studied the tax land question with great thoroughness last year, is watching with much interest for what the legislature will do in the matter of the tax lands. The Maxey bill to withdraw all state tax lands from sale for the present and issued the home by stockinmen only, and is now pending in the senate. In the meantime the auditor general's office has been fairly swamped with applications from landowners, speculators and others to buy these lands at prices that are little more than nominal. The cost to grab the lands before the state can protect its interests in them looks as though it were time the state did something, said Mr. Blair.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.
VOLUME XI. CHARLEVOIX MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1909 NUMBER 10

PLEASANT GEIKEN BEAR.

Passing of Popular and Accomplished Young Woman—Entire Community Mourns.

Pleasant Geiken, second daughter of Capt. and Mrs. G. C. Geiken, died at her home in this city at four o'clock Sunday afternoon, from the effects of an operation for appendicitis.

Never in the history of Charlevoix has the hand of death more tenderly stricken a home than when this charming, young woman was called hence, and never has a community been more sleeply stirred with sorrow and sympathy than this.

Miss Geiken was at Advance, near Boyne City, when taken ill. She was brought home and a physician summoned, who pronounced the trouble appendicitis, and an operation was decided upon. The operation occurred last Thursday. The patient failed to rally from the effects of the anaesthetic, peritonitis followed, and she slowly sank into her long, long sleep.

Pleasant Geiken was born in Charlevoix twenty three years ago. She was an ideal student in the local school, graduating in the class of 1904 with honor. The same year, 1904, she entered the literary department of the University of Michigan, where she took the full four years course, graduating in the class of 1907. She chose teaching as a profession, and last year taught in the Charlevoix high school.

We cannot better describe the qualities of her heart and mind than to say that her name was an index to her personality. She was always pleasant, kind, contented, unassuming and unobtrusive. Her greetings were always bright spots in the busy day's doings, leaving in your mind the thought of sunshine, even though the solar orb be hidden deeply in the clouds. Even her walk upon the street was an inspiration. Strong, vivacious, womanly, her well developed intellect shining through her eyes, she gave you confidence of the perfect woman.

What a loss is this! We know something of it, and our sorrow and sympathy is all the deeper by reason of our own afflictions. The pangs that seize the hearts of the parents, brothers and sisters are too poignant to express in words.

Capt. Geiken was fishing at Frankfort when his daughter was brought home ill, and could not be reached until the day of her death. He was compelled to drive through, reaching here several hours after her death. This fact adds pathos to the already most pathetic home affliction. Her sister Cassie, a trained nurse, was at her bedside at the hour of her death. Her brother Frank was in California, and unable to reach home in time. Only a few years ago Capt. and Mrs. Geiken were compelled to mourn the loss of a young daughter, Mary, and later their second son, Levi, and this blow falls with greater force, because of the lingering memory of those sad events.

A Word of Encouragement.

We have received the following letter of encouragement and commendation from a distinguished citizen of Charlevoix county, which we think we may be pardoned for publishing:

"I have read another issue of the SENTINEL and I want to say to you in these days of avaricious journalism, it is refreshing to read one part of the publication that is consistent.

"A previous article headed 'Vote Your Conscience' was the strongest local option article that anybody has yet written so far as I have read.

"The fact that impressed me in the recent issue is that while you are editorially supporting the local option proposition as earnestly as most any of its friends, yet I look through all of the rest of the paper and I find no matter paid for or otherwise inconsistent with your individual expression. We accept the spirit as a proof for what it advocates. I have no patience with the sentiment that anybody can see a newspaper for what they choose to say in it upon any proposition. I believe a newspaper, like the individual, can only have an influence upon public opinion when it is consistent and neither the newspaper nor the individual is consistent when they are on both sides of the same thing at the same time.

"I have been anxious about you during your recent illness and only the partial neglect and the fact that my time being absolutely occupied when in Charlevoix, has prevented me from calling upon you personally.

"Hope you will soon recover, although I do think that you write fully as strongly in bed as you do out of it."

—The SENTINEL job office is receiving a large assortment of jobbing of about every variety, and we carry the material and machinery for doing any kind of work in the best and latest styles at low rates. Come in and look over the goods.

—Five issues of the SENTINEL have been either from a sick room, or from the driftwood North chair, during intervals of relief from distressing pain. During this work we have had as our command all the necessary appurtenances for work—an Oliver typewriter, a dictionary, a pipe and a comfortable suit of clothes—toward any body on earth save the kind-hearted but faithful and skillful doctor. The affliction was only acute, but at times it was most confoundedly acute. The doctor says it is not committed to the shelves life, and when the pain racking devil is banished, we shall resume our accustomed activity with renewed vigor and the consciousness that we have had the sympathy of many good friends. Meanwhile, barring weather effects, we hope to visit the next issue from the sanctum.

—What has become of all the minks? We have not seen one of the Park avenue tribe this month, and March is a skunk, as well as an opossum. Neither have we had any satisfactory membrane blistered by the excretory accomplishment of the beautiful creatures. Latter part March is the season for skunks! They are protected by law, you know. Why don't the legislature make a close season for rattlesnakes and rats? Can it be that the skunks are holding a convention to devise ways and means to foil the evil designs of their arch enemy, man? If so, may we not look for an attack en masse, about the time of the city election? We sound this note of warning on the Roosevelian principal that in time of peace we should prepare for war. In such an event, we think our experience warrants us in asking for a colonel's commission.

County Normal Notes.

The Normal Class accompanied by the teachers, attended the institute at East Jordan last Friday and Saturday. The excellent program given at that time was enjoyed by all.

Edith Brooks was unable to return to school Monday morning on account of sickness.

Susie Sheldon substituted in the primary room at the Washington school for Miss Jarvis' Monday forenoon.

The invitations to the Alumni reception to be given Friday evening have been sent out.

It Saved His Leg.

"All thought I'd lose my leg," writes J. A. Swanson, Watertown, Wis., "for years of Eczema, that Doctors could not cure, had at last laid me up. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured it sound and well." Infallible for Salm Eruptions, Eczema, Sore Throat, Boils, Fever Sores, Burns, Scalds, Cuts and Piles. 25c at F. G. Hinz & Co's drug store.

But One Side to The Question.

We have heard it said in defense of the publication of certain matter, lately in the public notice, that there are two sides to the question now prominently before the people of Charlevoix county. We point to our record of conservation on this and every other question except politics, when we assert that there is but one side to the question!

When some one will show us that the laborer's hard-earned dollar that finds its way to the saloon till, is as well placed as an investment as it would be if expended for bread and butter for the children, we will yield the point.

When someone shows us that long man, rich or poor, who, by his patronage, makes it possible for three extreme cases to occur, is not equally culpable with the man who takes the money, we will acknowledge our church defeated in the proposition.

When someone demonstrates to us that our percent of the criminal cases that come into the courts are due to drunkenness, we will think, we will throw up the sponge.

When some good friend will elucidate why the "nice, clean, decent saloon" is not the most dangerous to the young, we will surrender.

When some talented defender of the saloon side of the proposition shall show us that there is no relation of fearful cost of the traffic; and that, in every respect, the saloon is not the enemy of society, of good government, of the decade, of decency and good order; of the public welfare and the public weal; of the public honor and of humanity, we will, in these columns, render an abject apology!

When we are given credible evidence that the liquor traffic is not the greatest crime with which society and the law is confronted; but it entails more suffering upon the poor and more bacchanalian domestic misery, even upon the rich, we will acknowledge our error.

Otherwise, we "stand pat" on the proposition that there is but one side to this proposition, and that it stands alone, a horrible spectral demon, devouring the estate, moral fibre, and brains of our best and dearest.

Three hundred years ago Shakspeare made Michael Cassio say; in the depths of his remorse:

"O God, men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! That we should with joy, pleasance, revel and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!"

Yet at every bulk beaker for rum in the Pacific there is a Titanic island of rock. Its ocean boundaries on every side are but precipitous wall of granite. It has no harbor and no verdure. It stands as a Gibralter against even the hurricane. But one man has ever landed, and hundreds have been wrecked upon its shoreless walls. It stands alone, indescribably threatening. Even a Dante could not adequately paint it in words. It has not one spot upon its barren surface where a flower can find root, or a gull find sustenance—so it is said.

When someone will show us that this nameless rock, with fathomless borders and death inviting cliffs, should be taken over by the American government and the flag planted on it highest pinnacle; or that it possesses a single benefit even to an untutored savage, we will acknowledge that there are two sides to the saloon question, and not until then.

There is but one side to the question!

W. C. T. U.

The annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. W. J. Weikel, South Bridge St., at 2:30 o'clock Friday, March 12th. Devotionals conducted by Mrs. H. A. Putnam.

Reports of the years work will be given, and officers elected for the ensuing year. A very interesting program will be given.

DEFENSE IN CARMACK CASE.

Evidence Brought Out Tends to Show That the Senator Fired First.

One after another the three prominents charged with the murder of ex-Senator Carmack at Nashville have been placed upon the stand by the defense and been subjected to cross-examination, the main point of their several stories being that Carmack fired first. First Robin Cooper described the encounter and the circumstances leading up to it. At the time he said he was going with his father, Col. Duncan B. Cooper, to confer with Senator Patterson, at the latter's request, in the hope of adjusting the case of his brother Edward Cooper and Mr. Carmack. This gave rise to the contention that when they met Carmack on the street the elder Cooper approached him with the idea of arranged some sort of a conference to settle the matter. Mr. Sharp had joined the Coopers on the way, said Robin. The hope of the latter had been to avoid a meeting, leaving behind his father and Carmack, thinking the hot-tempered relatives would be kept apart by a bystander, as he had been in the case of Mrs. Robin Lawrence and Miss Lasseter, who, having previous convictions against them were sentenced to two months.

Sympathizers gathered in the streets and there were frequent claims with the police, who sought to keep them from the Rice street court. Some of the more prominent made solid suggestions of resort to bonds, but the leaders counseled them to continue present action. The women made two successive attempts to visit the House of Commons during the night, but both failed.

The program of counsel was a repetition of previous ones. The prosecution started from Carter Hall unofficially to present a petition to President Taft. The women were permitted to reach the palace yard, but there they had to officials that the prime minister was absent, and it was added he would not receive them even if he were present. The women then tried to push their way in. When they were tried they fought and struggled desperately with the obvious intention of being arrested. The police effort long suffering forbearance, used less tenderness and ended the scenes. Toward the crowd of onlookers. These latter were impatient and refused to let the women through, pushing them back into the police ranks.

The situation has taken on an embarrassing aspect for the Government, owing to the high social position of many among some thirty or more women arrested, these including Mrs. Patrick Lawrence, Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton and daughter of the former viceroy of India; Miss Stratford Dugdale, daughter of Commander Dugdale and cousin of Hon. William R. W. Peel, who was elected in a by-election as member of the House of Commons for Tamworth; and Beatrice Harraden, daughter of Mr. Harraden. Miss Lytton is a cousin of Mr. Peel.

Although the decision has gone against the government in the Lytton action, on the ground of the prince's District Attorney, Miss Bailey, who was arrested, when she appeared in with the excuse to Judge Grosscup's decision that she was in the court on complaint of the capital stock of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio.

OHIO RIVER TO GO ON RAMPAGE.

Government Forecaster Predicts the Water Will Reach 50 Feet.

That the Ohio River at Cincinnati will reach a stage of 50 feet on its present rise was the prediction made by Local Weather Forecaster Hesler. If this stage is reached it will time date considerable property on the river front, and cause the inundation of Lockland, Newport and Bellevue, Ky., are endangered. The citizens will be compelled to abandon the Union central and Pennsylvania stations, which river rises ten feet above the floor, and crossovers have been made to utilize the Cincinnati Southern station. The ride above Cincinnati is riding all the way from Pittsburg to Cincinnati. However, a shortcross road is not expected at any point.

KILLS STATEHOOD BILL.

Senate Committee Abandons Unmanageable Consideration of Measure.

There will be no Statehood legislation for New Mexico and Arizona at present. At a meeting of the Senate committee on territories Saturday all factions, regardless of party, in a non-national action, abandoned consideration of the House bill. The members of the committee left the room without anyone suggesting further meeting for its consideration. This remarkable action occurred at the conclusion of the reading of statements presented by Senators Nelson and Beveridge charging corruption, jury bribing and various other offenses against certain officials and bodies, of whom was termed the "gang which is in control of political affairs in New Mexico."

LABOR FOR THE FARM

Value of Immigrants as Agricultural Workers.

European Land Tillers Prefer to Engage in Other Pursuits When They Come to the United States—Suggestions For Securing Farm Help.

C. A. Larrain, who is at the head of the immigrant bureau at Albany and who was chairman of the committee on immigration and farm labor at the New York state grange meeting, presented some very important facts concerning farm labor in this country. He said that the question of immigration had become one of vital importance in view of the fact that in the past ten years 4,000,000 immigrants had come to these shores, speaking fifty different languages. Since 1820 20,000,000 have come. It is necessary, he said, that they should be properly informed, directed and cared for when they arrive, and if they are they may be expected to add millions annually to the nation's wealth. The last year 120,000 of the immigrants who came here were farm hands in Europe, but nearly all engaged in some other pursuits here.

On the subject of securing help for the farmers of the state he made the following suggestion:

"Farm homes should be established in all parts of the state and placed in charge of experienced men to which immigrants desiring to engage as farm laborers can be sent upon arrival, to be there cared for the case had incident of disease or sickness, necessary aid given, and the English-speaking person in charge could be relied upon in distributing the language of foreign-speaking men make them useful to our farmers. They would then have a home during periods of employment or sickness, and the world prevent a large amount of misery and suffering to the poor. The amount of money saved by our foreign relatives and friends would be a drain that probably no one could hope to stop.

"The department of agriculture of this state for three years past has been maintained a bureau for securing help for the farmers of the state and there is a fund period set out over that. It has been difficult to get the proper help, because of the low salaries and scarcity in excess of the demand, and single twice was were vacant. Application for that department at Albany will receive the strictest personal and attention and care for the services.

"The decrease in immigration at present and the starting of many mills and factories will undoubtedly be a security of good farm help for a time. Your committee strongly recommends the passage of legislation, by the federal government to make a more rigid examination for aliens to be transported to this country in order to keep out undesirable and vicious immigrants. We would also urge that the department of agriculture state to represent the industries of the world and to furnish information and literature to intending to make their homes in this country and encourage and help to secure the development and distribution of the industries of the state, and protect and extend the possibilities for the employment of labor of all kinds in the state."

GRAPPLING BIG PROBLEMS.

Good Work For Massachusetts Patrons by a Congressman.

In a recent issue of the New York Tribune Farmer George W. Tuttle of Maine has this to say of the work of the grange in Massachusetts:

"Within the last few years the grange in Massachusetts has been grappling big problems and, centering attention here, there have followed an always titled united concerted effort, decidedly increased attention to the order and appreciation of its work and services. Began several have those become that through out public the importance of what the grange wants or thinks is expert, being sought. Subsidy has, has been an increasing number of additions to the membership, yet, if I can measure up the situation, the workers are seeking first to strengthen work allow all helpful lines and increase the possible service the order can render to the state. The wisdom of this policy is approved in the attendance upon these field day meetings and especially in the enthusiastic interest manifested everywhere to the presentation of questions bearing upon the farm and rural life, there related to constructive education seemingly taking first rank.

"Largely through the strong, positive position of the Order upon educational lines the manner of the Massachusetts state grange has been made a member of the some commission of industrial education, and today state properties thus are being made to start a school for horticulture to be devoted exclusively to industrial training, agriculture in its phases to receive special attention."

New York's "Old Guard."

"There is no organization in connection with the New York state grange composed of the organizers of the Order in the state who are still living. There is now about sixty-four members who were in the Order in 1873, and fifteen of them were present at the last meeting of the state grange. A. J. Harrison, master of the Chautauqua grange, who has never missed a meeting of the New York state grange in the head of this organization, whose motto is, "The old guard may die, but never surrender," is still living and active.

New York state grange pays its worthy master $1,000 a year, and he earns it.

MAINE'S GRANGER GOVERNOR.

Governor Fernald Installed in Executive Mansion by Way of the Farm.

Hon. Bert M. Fernald of West Poland, Me., was elected to the office of governor of that state last fall and is proving himself to be a worthy executive. Mr. Fernald was born on the old homestead in Poland, which was settled by his grandfather, Isa Jordan, and he still lives on it and comes of one of the largest and most famous families in that part of the state. He is one of the proprietors of five large wood turning factories which have been doing business for over $200,000 a year. Fifty tons where in the business is carried by the firm. He has been a member of the grange twenty-five years and president in all its affairs. In 1903 he was elected to the legislature. In fact, it is data here that the grange gave opportunity for training school, a sort of adventure forward institute, where prominent views and experiences are exchanged for the good of all. Where there is some uniformity in the discussion of questions by the grange in the country or section the reports of these discussions become the more interesting, and by a study of these published in reports the reader is enabled to know the drift of opinions among these representative agriculturists on public questions. The correspondent then should give in his report a concise summary of the views expressed, for it is the study of more value to know what the members think on a certain question than to know the exact thing that the grange discussed the topic.

In reporting the plenary features of a grange program it is better to limit the report to a list of those who participated rather than to include in full the subject of every position taken. Any unusual features deserving more than ordinary notice. When the grange is honored by a visit from some state or county officer or is addressed by some speaker who presents ideas which deserve wider field a brief synopsis of the address will add value to the report.

Grange Merit Day.

The Maine Farmer tells about a grange in that state which has an annual horse show where thoroughbred stallions, draft stallions, standard bred and roadsters are exhibited, which shows a great lot of enterprise on the part of that grange and is worthy of mention.

Over 200 exhibitors took the sixth degree in the New York state grange meeting in February.

FINDS HIS OCCUPATION GONE.

Rag Man's Business Has Dwindled to Vanishing Point.

"Rags, bones, old iron!" is a cry not nearly so familiar to the children of today as it was to those of the '50s. For the reason, like the chimney sweep and the man who tunes hand-organs, is almost a vanished occupation. Rags used to be a profitable trade. The women used to hoard them into shoddy, bought thrifty their rags. So did the boys, which were ground up for fertilizer. So did the boys, which, indeed, lived again in the multitude manufacturing industries had their beginnings in a ragpicker's pannier. In fact ground his rags into shoddy. Then he spun the shoddy into yarns. This is fabric woven into blankets, he wove the thread into cloth, but the manufacturing of rags ceased with shoddy from the disposal of their people's rations, and the old ragman is disappointed because there is no little for him. Rags and bones to the great workers with the tongue made a grand profit on what he bought. It was on the notions given him that he really throve.

The Loving Cup.

"The cup of the Tantalus cup is to be found" in Tartary. "On festive occasions," says Ebersing, "it is the duty of the young to gather at some pre-determined place where a tumulus, ten thousand of which are to be seen in the hundreds of cities, is brought and placed in the open air. The men and women sit in a circle around the cup, and their number is adjusted as cup bearer. The young women fill their tattooed hymns and songs; no one dies, and the cup passes from hand to hand in the order in which the beverage is consumed." This tattooed nomina is far stronger than brandy.

A PRODUCE EXCHANGE

Co-operative Business Enterprises Much Discussed.

A Farmers' Organization in New Jersey Affords Some Excellent Suggestions For Specific Grange Co-operation in Buying and Selling.

From the reports of the various state grange meetings we learn that considerable attention was paid to the matter of co-operative buying and selling of farm products. Only in isolated cases has anything been done with these thus ordinary success about them. Massachusetts has organized a co-operative association, with capital stock valued at $25,000, shares $5, limited one to members of the Order. It is probable that something along this line will be done in New York state. Such an organization in order to be successful must be confined to members of the Order, as for an extensive holding of stock, for the outside public be given the privilege of purchasing supplies at the same prices as granges where such co-operative grange stores recognized, in such an organization the stock should be held entirely by members of the order, and they should get dividends, if declared at all, and also a certain percentage of profits. There should be no distribution as between members and non-members, as to buying at these stores, however. Organized along these lines we believe that grange stores may be made a success.

There is in New Jersey a farmers' organization, though not a grange organization, which is called the Produce Exchange, with a capital of $100,000, and it buys and sells everything the farmer uses or grows and can do business anywhere. We give the details of its plan as reported in the Rural New Yorker:

The shares are $5 each, and no man can own more than twenty. The stockholders elect twelve directors, who elect a president and appoint the manager and assistants. The north central exchange is located at Bridgeton, and has been good in. Its sale last year equipped wood yards and alone the organization have done business with Philadelphia, to the $10,000 worth of business. As yet it has been very little in the canning or business of fruit products, as it is in a fair way to do so. The exchange has a fine business between Bridgeton and Bryan, much of fertilizers and seeds and other lines potatoes, it would seem as if here was a field well worth looking after, when the exchange is now taking hold of.

There are no salesmen. The firm were and last year 1,500 carloads of potatoes, besides many other products. The exchange has 1,000 members, and last year paid $100

CHAPTER IX.

Mr. Carbuncle sequitur a set of chairs in the Tontine. On the evening after his visit to Miss Caterham Mr. Hingwood was seated in company with his friend.

"I have no doubt whatever but you are right in your conjecture," said Mr. Carbuncle; "Pagram is either a shareholder or the agent of a shareholder, but that is a thing you can easily ascertain. You have only to write to him to get a time from me, and could tell him so. As I confess, with the object he had in view, he would take very good care not to contradict me."

"My own idea is that if they can find Cecilia Flamingo they intend to propitiate a family! Her surname, greeting the last link, I should think a few hours should enable them to search keep him out of the way, till the death which probably cannot be far off, or, till the death of Pagram's nephew, Hoodle, he wakes he will be in a great temptation."

"Yes," said Mr. Carbuncle, "we might be so I never thought of that. Now it would be a great point, if we could discover Pagram's first of his wife, he would be able to get what out of a man he is not so much afraid of, but he would be likely to attempt a fraud of this nature. Well, I shall have a letter from Miss Caterham, accordingly, for us, her agent, and I shall be at the hotel room and look at the list of the subscribers. It is some time since I was and then there were between ninety and fifty names, still left on. I'm sorry I missed Miss Caterham's manner how I spoke."

"I think it was most unfortunate that you were not, for, as I said, I could only see my way. I shall do myself the pleasure of submitting letter to Lord Lakington. It would be no good, you know, if I put it before you; you are not empowered to treat," said Pegram.

"Of course I am not right there," replied Hemingway. "You don't you fall into the mistake of thinking that because Lakington did not know the value of money in his early days that he does not know it now. If your conjecture means that you are to have Miss Flamingo, I can only say, I don't think, my friend, that it will come off."

The lawyer sat for some time after Mr. Hemingway left him immersed in thought. His meditations were interrupted by the short cuddling of Mr. Hubert Pegram, who, with lugubrious face, sought of in conversation.

"What's stuck again, fish? Well, do you being any news?"

"I have just arrived from ireland," said Hubert Pegram. "I am sorry to say I have made nothing of the Irish court. I met lots of people who recognized me, but they didn't, or, no one had seen anything of him for the last few years. This fellow Flanigan will take a lot of finding."

"But find him we must," replied his brother; "and if he is only to be found on the Viceroy's behalf. Sit down. I have a letter to read to you, and I want what do you say to a compromise. Hoodle, if he does get half and a chearing wife to begin with, and the whole to wind up with?"

"What on earth do you mean, father?"

"I mean this! I have sent Lord Lakington word that I am good to compromise if he will agree to my terms. Now, Lord Lakington has got a grasping daughter; I have no doubt she is pretty, although I don't know anything for certain on that point. I intend just to marry her!"

"Under which circumstances," interposed Hubert Pegram, "I should have perceived your obtaining more precise information about her acquaintance."

"Don't talk nonsense," said the old gentleman loudly; "she has rank, station, everything you want."

"Has it occurred to you that Miss Flamingo could decline to have anything to say to her?"

"Not a bit," exclaimed the old man eagerly, "because that is Lord Lakington's house and when Lord Lakington has been very much it is for his advantage that she will be, I fancy he will use all his influence in favor of it; and I think from all I hear, Bob, that the young lady is likely to do as her father tells her."

"Well, I tell you," replied Robert Pegram, "I don't want this marriage. I don't want to have a wife at all."

"Why?" continued Pegram, senior, "I don't see why you should not. Lord Lakington's house look, Bob, not bad; he is well to do, and I'm sure, if you can be coaxed with a grin, it will be, mark my words, a good thing for you. Come, I'm ready. In the meantime, I want to you to write a letter to Lord Lakington. Pegram, to what your old father asks you and say this marriage shall be as soon as it lies with you."

"Ah, you think, then, a compromise would be jollicker?" said Hemingway.

"I think it made matters worse if I could only see my way. I shall do myself the honor of submitting letter to Lord Lakington. It would be no good, you know, if I put it before you; you are not empowered to treat," said Pegram.

"Of course I am not right there," replied Hemingway. RELIGION AND THEOLOGY.

By Henry F. Cope.

"Who shall abide the Day of his coming? He that walketh upright."—Is. xl. 1, 2.

It is easy to exalt opinions to undue importance, especially if the opinions are strong and vociferously proclaimed, and if they are fortified with a splendid diversity of all other opinions. There is a fatal fascination about defending the same things until opinion runs automatically and begins to rule us. Then we set up our mere mental judgments as standards for others and as objects of worship for all.

This is not the kind of thinking that makes the world. This is not the kind of thinking that determines character. The most thoughtful and most effective action of the individual and of the nation of mankind, is the result of intuition, and kind automatic sense of opinion is often the type of thinking that dominates character.

It is a disappointing experiment to ask, What ought I to do in order to find the way of the religious life and service? and to receive the answer that there is no such thing as a definite or definition or opinion. Almost any worth while man would rather be ashamed for intellectual honesty than saved by theological hypocrisy.

If you are sick of the sciences and philosophies upon the occasions of which your souls are tossed, and which are supposed in rest you will be surprised to find how little they have to do with the deep and simple realities of life. Theology concerns itself principally with matters which affect the soul, and we have precise information, where uncertainty is most certain to be discovered, and offers to the soul questions which, if they were settled absolutely, would lose its energy and life.

People were happy in their enjoyment of this fully much long before the Christ or any of the other religious hypotheses. They managed to stay on the ground of the elementary facts of life and of creation. No man would be condemned to the chaining of the earth for fear of falling off, if he came be refused to believe that law.

The great thing to do is to accept the facts as they are for working purposes. That is the only pathway into larger understanding of the laws of our universe. The one man who obeys the elementary law of life, is in a better spiritual state than he who blindly subscribes to all the theories of our universe.

Theology properly is just our attempt to read something of the laws of God in the phenomena of our life. Its value depends on our use of the laws. It will not keep you from internal disturbances and regrets to endorse the theories of modern dialectics; perhaps will your sensitive conviction of the elaboration of modern and ancient theology may be the means of bringing you into the life of the spirit.

All thinking is for the purpose of living. It is not enough that it be produce in character and conduct, is worth while to measure life and its narrow views are insisted on by small men, and others seek to emphasize their outstanding opinions by their eccentric and often unsavory living.

The man who is the most unique in this world is the one that can be calculated in a theological manner case, dried upon labels, and will not easily overmuch with antipathy but utterly helpless. The fire has died out of any faith when it can be thus cased up and calculated. A strict belief always affords precise answers and the presence of misunderstanding.

As soon as the heretics all die in a church the church dies. The heretics are those who have questions to ask for today's facts. The only dangerous heresies are these: When we lose our life and refuse truth, or when we persuade us to be singular in error rather than to be left by the larger company who see the truth.

If you are perplexed over opinions in matters of religion turn from the uncertainties to the certainties. We can all be certain of the facts of life. Our right is better than wrong; that it is better to live an upright life than to live in sin; that it is better to do right than to turn down. If we will gradually build such a firm and certain platform for our practice we will cease to look for answers to "ends of theory" and will find truth through life, right doctrines through deed.

THE GREATEST MAN

By Rev. Thomas Reed Bridges.

Who is the greatest man? Neither wealth, I.

The Lord does not confer his nobility, nor he defines its true origin. True nobility, according to Christ, is distinguished in humility and service. The first quality demands that we be innocent of self. The second demands that we be conscious of others.

Early in His ministry Christ uttered the sentiment, "Blessed are the meek." Now to these ambitious disciples He said, "You want honor, you want power and become as little children." Meekness is thought to be the earth for gaiety, it is, on the contrary, the noblest kind of strength.

Christ is the type of the perfect human portrayal. Flattery is the surest road to favor. We are never so happy as when people praise us and bow down before us. We have an instinctive aversion to those who do not flatter us. We have an instinctive aversion to those who do not flatter us. We have an instinctive aversion to those who do not flatter

Leon Bros mill at Suttons Bay was destroyed by fire Saturday night, also a quantity of lumber that was in the mill.

Traverse City Record: Bellaire will vote on a proposition to bond for $9,000 for improvements on her municipal electric plant.

The new owners of the hotel at Torch Lake, the remodeled Cameron Co's store, are putting up ice and expect to open the hotel about July 1st.

Manistee is all fussed up over the discovery of oil on a farm near that place. A company with $30,000 capital will be organized to develop the property.

Grand Traverse Dairymen's Association will meet in Traverse City March 25 and 26. It is expected that government experts will be present.—Traverse City Record.

The Traverse City board of health is agitating the question of a new regulation plant for the city, claiming that there have been a few cases of contagious disease here in the past on account of existing sanitary conditions.

The village of Manistee is almost elated over a new railroad. Meetings of the people interested have been held of late and now the Detroit & Charlevoix line is said to be included. The plan is said to contemplate an east and west line across the northern part of the lower peninsula.

East Jordan Herald: E. J. Crosby, Gen'l traffic manager of the E. J. & S. railroad has received word from the New Mexico traffic man asking if Home Seekers' excursions will be run from the south on March 23rd, April 6th and 20th, and May 4th and 18th to northern Michigan.

Largely through the efforts of Wm. L. Case, chairman of the building committee for the Benzonia academy, an amount sufficient to insure the rebuilding of East Hall, the dormitory which was consumed by fire some time ago, has been arranged. He has already in his hands sufficient funds to meet the entire expense of the construction of the building, and the work will be started immediately.

Traverse City Record: E. W. Sayman of Chicago, general manager of the Northern Michigan Trans. Co. stopped off in this city Thursday afternoon for a short conference with the local agent, E. A. Weston. The talk was probably with the final arrangements for the coming season, which will be made public for Traverse City, to be built immediately, the plans having already been completed and the preparatory steps taken.

Sturgeon & Smith have sold a half interest in their warehouse and farm implement business to Harry Smith. Mr. Smith will take entire charge of the business, when the work of taking an inventory will begin. He will retain the services of John Cressman in the warehouse and will devote a large portion of his time to work among the farmers in the interests of his business. This firm and brother, which will continue under the name of Sturgeon & Smith, is entirely separate from the firm of Sturgeon Smith & Co., Central Lake Town.

The new high school building at East Jordan was recently dedicated with appropriate exercises. Judge Frederick W. Mayne of the Thirteenth judicial district was the chief speaker and he was followed by a number of local men, who made brief speeches on the topic of education and its benefits. The new building is an up-to-date structure, two stories in height, brick construction. It is 65x80 feet in size and was built at a cost of $13,500. It is one of the handsomest school buildings in northern Michigan.

George T. Arnold, owner of the dock and boat line and other large resort holdings on Mackinac Island, was in the City recently, when he spoke most enthusiastically on the outlook for the coming season. That the prospects are brighter than ever for a big summer's business is his prediction, and he is doing everything possible in preliminary arrangements to care for the traffic and to accommodate the throngs of guests which always visit the island.—Traverse City Record.

Kalkaska Enterprise: There was a special meeting of the village council Monday evening for the purpose of receiving bids on the water works extension. Bids were received from Clark & Rogers, Munroe & Wilhelm, George Spencer and Ed. Price, of this place, and W. H. Caldwell, of Traverse City. The council then adjourned until 8 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The adjourned meeting was called to order by President McMillan at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and members being present except trustee Sweet. Moved by Bahnsen, seconded by Cutchenheit, that the bid of Roe Supplee Co. of Detroit, for furnishing hydrants and valves be accepted. The contract price is $18,250.

HAD ACCENT OF THE OLD SOD.

And Irishman Thought Color Was Due to the Hot Sun.

It is said to be a peculiarity of the blood of Mongoloid that the negroes speak in a high pitch longer than Caucasians. This phenomenon is explained by the fact that the negro mouth anatomy the enlarged uvula and palate almost entirely to the Irish. In "Our Could of the Ould" Mr. Patrick Vincent gives the following incident illustrative of the same point: "Is it true that Irish blood has been preserved? It is quoted from Cuba.

An Irishman just from Havana arrives at Manhattan and leaning over the steamer's rail, addresses himself in the following terms to a coal-black negro who has come along his way unobtrusively:

"Say, Cuffee, what's the chance for a hot subject?"

"Good, yes boss; if yo're not afraid of worrying. Ah guess ah can fix yo, an, please yo, Ah'm Pat Mulcahaney."

"Eh? what? And do you claim to say you're Irish?"

"All de."

"The saints defend us! An' how long have yo been out here?"

"A matter of the year or so."

"Why man! ye look as one half slave an soul. I look yet for a nayger."—Youth's Companion.

A Cockroach Remedy.

A Kansas farmer who was pronounced to be by neighbors somewhat the worse for cucumber pickles on a long day for consumption scattered the floor with pieces of the pod and, very thin and watched the animal, says a writer in Suburban Life. The pests entered the pod in a short time and it could not be seen, so vigorous is a wave they engaged in, sucking the cucumber substance from it. The next morning not a single bug was tried the same pod and the cockroaches was reduced to a number not more than half of what it was night.

Guaranteed by F. G. Hines & Co.

The Traverse City Record tells of a lease made by the heirs of the late Perry Hannah of a piece of land in Chicago that originally cost $200,000. The lease is for 103.5 years, the rental being $90,000 annually for the first ten years, $80,000 annually for the next 30 years and $70,000 for the remainder of the term. The total income for the life of the lease would be $11,184,000.

ST. IGNACE Republican: Protected now for eight years, during which time has been unlawful to take bears in the upper peninsula, the close season will end Jan. 30, 1910. The law prohibiting the valuable little animals has been strictly enforced, and as a result the wise little creatures have thrived as they have not thrived at any other period since the advent of the white man. Many of the dens made and constructed last fall they would do credit to a human mason, and the ingenuity of the little animals and their tireless endurance are almost beyond belief.

Chas S. Osborn, regent of the University, through appointment of Governor Warner, and at one time state senator, is a republican of the purest and generally all around good fellow, hailing from the frozen section of the state known as the Soo, and is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor next year. Mr. Osborn has not yet announced himself as an active candidate, but his friends are busy and lots of work was done in the same line last week at the state capital last week. He is largely owner of the Soo News and the Saginaw Courier Herald, which fact would prove a powerful factor in the primary campaign, while he would start out with the upper peninsula practically solid behind him. Mr. Osborn is a very entitured gentleman, has traveled a great deal, and is a man of much executive ability. He would prove the state an excellent administration should he be nominated and elected.—Port Huron Times.

Boyne Journal: The candidacy of I. E. Converse for Mayor meets with such universal approval that it is doubtful if there is another candidate even mentioned for the place. It is so generally conceded that local option will carry that those who favor the movement are anxious to get the full fruits of victory. To do that means that the law must be rigidly enforced and Mr. Converse is admitedly the man to enforce, not only the local option law, but all the laws with a strong hand.

—Lou A. Comfort, of the lighthouse construction department, was in town Friday, on his way home to Traverse City, and visited Mrs. Comfort's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Irwin.

—The person who will start a slanderous report to the injury of his neighbor, or helps to circulate it without investigation, is an enemy of society. When a slanderous lie gets so far as to be published in a local paper, it is time for the victim to take heroic action.

—The Carnegie Library matter is progressing satisfactorily. The money for the site is in hand, and as soon as the building is removed clear title to the lot will be secured. This accomplished, the $10,000 Carnegie money will be available, and the work on the library will be begun.

—A. T. Stewart, the local fish hatchery superintendent, arrived Friday, and is putting the hatchery in shape for the annual hatch. He expects to hatch 4,500,000 trout and from fifteen to twenty million of whitefish, which will require about two months work. Supt. Clark will be here this week to inspect the plant.

—A man named Henry, last Monday evening, considerably the worse for wear, with a one-horse rig, started for home when his horse took fright, and ran down Park Avenue, bringing up on a telephone pole. The man's arm was injured, and the horse badly cut. The cutter was demolished. This was the a three year old and a valuable animal. Inverse.

—A tonic has value when it is expended for something of physical or moral benefit, to you or yours. But when it is expended for something that harms you and only helps to buy automobiles for other people it has no value whatever, but, rather, is a curse. And yet they talk about dollars as if whiskey was one of the necessary elements of human life. Taste of this interest before you swallow it.

—Roy Kent is visiting friends at Frankfort and Mississippi.

—The tug Petoscke made an effort to get out Tuesday morning, but failed.

—Is it not about time for the lighting men to stop holding homes and buying automobiles for other people?

—The tug Gilson arrived Sunday from Frankfort. On her passage she encountered much ice, and had a bad time of it in her plunking.

—The schooner Oliver Mitchell is loading ice in Pine Lake for lower lake port. The scarcity of ice in this section will make it a profitable cargo.

—Mrs. H. O. Smith and her young son left for her home in Oconto Monday. She was accompanied by her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Hawks, who will remain there several weeks.

—Harbingers of spring are multiplying. The song in evening, the early birds are singing, and Dave Campbell is coming. After 29th gins here the crows will appear, and March 31st Mayor—not mine, mind, but he was represented by a family substitute.

The handsome new dining room had been cleared for the occasion, and the forty guests were seated at tables arranged in a hollow square, the vents backed with palms surrounding a handsome marble bust of the Immortal Bard, who was thus a silent though honored guest. The place cards were beautifully hand painted, representing characters from the various plays, and were the work of Miss Irene Harsha.

The tables were beautifully decorated in Shakspearean colors—purple and gold predominating, such an abundance of violets and, all most artistically arranged. An orchestra discoursed music throughout the discussions.

After the tables were cleared the president of the Club, Mrs. J. B. Thielen, introduced as toastmaster, Mrs. R. W. Railback, who proceeded to fill this difficult position in a manner that would have done credit to a Chauncey Depew.

It is impossible to select as worthy of special mention any particular ones where all did so exceptionally well.

The menu did great credit to the already famous Baker's Inn.

The Closing Number of The Lecture Course.

The Lecture Course will close Friday evening, March 26, with a lecture by Dr. Dixon, of Chicago.

It hardly seems necessary to say more than that this is the Dr. Dixon who lectured here two years ago. Dr. Dixon was placed on the present Course because he pleased the people so well when he was here.

The people pronounced his lecture the most satisfactory of any course that has ever been given in this city. Those who failed to hear him were very sorry when they realized the great enthusiasm with which he was received.

Another opportunity to hear him is now given the people of Charlevoix, and there will be a rush this time, sure. Reserve seat sale will open at the Ivy Drug Store Wednesday evening, March 24th, at 7 o'clock.

THE SHAKSPEARE CLUB BANQUET.

A Brilliant Social and Literary Function at Baker's Inn Last Wednesday Evening.

The annual banquet of the Ladies' Shakspearean Club occurred at Baker's Inn last Wednesday evening was a brilliant social function, and replete with good things for the body and mind.

These annual banquets, the only gatherings of the Club at which "more men" are allowed, have come to be looked forward to by the husbands as pleasurable anticipations, and they have always surpassed even the most optimistic predictions. It it were possible, the banquet of 1909 will go down in local Shakspearean history as the most successful of all.

Every one of the twenty lady members were present, and with one of the male adjuncts—Judge Mayne—was added, and he was represented by a family substitute.

A COON DINNER.

Frank Cullison and Jack Lloyd Gave a Coon Midnight Dinner to Twenty of Their Friends.

Jack Lloyd's Little Tavern restaurant was the scene, Friday night, of an enjoyable a gastronomic and social event as the winter has produced.

Jack, who is an accomplished caterer and chef, and "Soggy" Cullison, who, besides a caterer and chef of renown, is equally distinguished as a hunter, were the hosts of the occasion. Frank having produced the raccoons from some adjacent forest. The raccoon, (Procyon lotor) is first cousin to the possum, recently made famous by President Taft in the South, and is said to be equally as palatable.

But coon was not the only viand that tickled the palates of the guests. Frank only the pies do so sidesman. Many other delicies adorned the eatables, and various condiments gave relish to the feast, which lasted until after midnight.

About twenty guests were present, among them several business and professional men. The editor of this paper was invited, but for well known reasons could not be present. The partook of the banquet, however. By previous arrangement, at ten o'clock, a server, with a portion of every good thing, was laid upon one dining room table. We had not retired, for two reasons. First, inability to sleep well on night, and, second, a "chicken leg" for breakfast—poor digestion and a weak stomach not being among our troubles.

The Sentinel acknowledges the courtesy, with thanks.

Death of Mrs. J. A. Hawkins.

Mrs. Hannah Hawkins, wife of Hastings A. Hawkins, died at her home on Dixon Avenue, this city, last Friday at 2 p. m., after an illness of years.

Mrs. Hawkins was born in Nottinghamshire, England, December 27, 1842. She came to America when very later, her parents settling in Kent county, this state in 1854. She was married May 1, 1866, coming to Charlevoix in 1882. She leaves a husband and one daughter, Mrs. Edith Wilkinson, and four sisters. A sister, Mattie Stone, of Grand Rapids, was present at the funeral, which occurred Monday morning at the residence, Rev. R. R. Wright officiating. The order of Eastern Star, of which she was a member, attended the obsequies in a body.

Mrs. Hawkins was of the type of woman who honor the sex. Intensely interested in Eastern Star work, she was absorbed in the love of home and family. Her long and painful illness left unmitigated her devotion of the beneficent, disposed slave, affectionate heart. He is built up around sliding parts, in what her Christian profession stood for.

The attendance at the funeral was large, attesting the general esteem in which she was held.

—The most exasperating argument we have heard yet in support of the saloon interest is that "prohibition will "hurt the town." The argument is neither logical, reasonable or statesmanlike. If any condition has been the town more than five saloons do now, we would like to know what it is. The money that is spent for whiskey in Charlevoix, year in and year, pay the bonded indebtedness of the city. It was pay for houses and pay off mortgages. It would make a bank account for old age. It would take away the whiskey from your neighbors and replace it in thousands of hearts. If the welfare of the town depends upon the whiskey traffic, God pity it. A saloon will draw a crowd, to sell a murder. One is as bad as the other.

Allie Moore, the "Charlevoix Boy," Easily Defeats All London Competitors and Retains World's Championship—Not Skate Through Europe, Australia and the Orient.

Allie Moore, who has been roller skating in London the past winter, has defeated all comers in the world's metropolis, and retains the world's championship. He writes the Sentinel the following interesting letter:—

LONDON, England, March 4, 1909.

Dear Mr. Smith:—

Well, here I am in London, where I am skating a series of World's Championship races. The distance is one mile. They have some very fast men here, but I have beaten them all, even to Mr. Davidson.

So I guess I'll be the World's Champion Speed Roller Skater, from Charlevoix, Mich.

In the trip over from New York I was right days on the ship, and we had a very rough trip. The fare over, not class, is $12.50. The price I found the eatables, and very condiments gave relish to the feast, which lasted until after midnight.

About twenty guests were present, among them several business and professional men. The editor of this paper was invited, but for well known reasons could not be present. GREAT STORM MARS TAFT'S INAUGURATION

DOWNFALL OF SNOW AND SLEET

Thousands of Disappointed Visitors Wade in Slush Through Streets of the Capital.

DECORATIONS ARE BEDRAGGLED

Induction Into Office of 27th President Most Costly Affair of Its Kind in National History.

Washington (special dispatch) — William H. Taft and Vice President James S. Sherman of New York were inaugurated at noon Thursday as President and Vice President of the United States. The ceremony of the inauguration was accompanied with all the formality and finality, but under most unusual conditions, owing to a terrible blizzard which swept over the national capital, paralyzing street traffic, stopping communication with the outside world, and bringing dismay to the thousands of out-of-town visitors who had gathered in expectation of a special spectacular demonstration.

Instead of the usual inaugural address of the man, the orator of the inaugural was prepared and opened. The usual chance was in omitting the exercises program so that the inaugural address could be read in the senate chamber of the Capitol, was delivered to Mr. Taft in the Senate chamber. The inaugural ceremony had been designed to be a more imposing and early function than that of the predecessor, but the weather marred the magnificence of the day and belittled the extensive decorations.

A wet, clinging snow, driven before a biting northeast wind fell through out the night and brought havoc with the decorations and the arrangements. Hundreds upon hundreds of the capital city from commencement with the remainder of the country for many hours. Soon and slush filled the streets to the depth of ankle or more in places.

For several hours during the morning Washington was out of communication with the outside world because of the fare of the storm. Telegraph and telephone wires were all down.

Inaugural Ceremonies.

Important features of the inaugural program were the swearing twice of the President from the White House to the Capitol, the exercises at the Capitol, the inauguration with the admission of the outline of the President's stand were grouped other stands in which the parade and the address, the assembly of the military grand division in the streets with the assembly of the civil grand division in the streets and the inaugural address, the conclusion of his inaugural address, review of the military and civic grand division by the President from his stand in the court of honor in front of the White House from 3 to 6 in the afternoon and the dismissal of the parade, the great display of fireworks in front of the White House, in combination with the illumination of the streets of Washington through the downtown section, the dome of the Capitol and the Washington monument, and the inaugural ball in the pension building, the largest brick structure in the world.

Impressive Scene in Senate.

President Roosevelt and Mr. Taft were escorted to the Capitol promptly at the hour set, their progress through the blizzard since being met with cheers from a thin fringe of hardy spectators who braved the elements and stood cable deep in snow and slush along Pennsylvania avenue.

The senate chamber seldom before has witnessed so impressive a ceremony, or held a more sentient assembly, in the presence of high dignitaries of state and nation and the assembled representatives of every country of the civilized world, which, shortly before 1 o'clock today, Mr. Taft took oath of office as President, in the presence of Vice President Sherman, who was inducted into office at the same time, with the same simple ceremony clothed in the early days. The senate in session with the house in session, to enforce all laws and to protect the republican form of government, and to secure domestic tranquility, the oath was administered by Chief Justice Fuller, who was administering the oath to Sherman, the time in his notable career as the chief presiding officer of the country's highest court. Mr. Taft delivered his inaugural address in substantial form to the Senate chamber.

Parade in Slush.

After Mr. Taft had taken the oath of office and delivered the inaugural address he was escorted to the White House by the Black House troops of Cleveland. After luncheon, President and Mrs. Taft, with their guests, entered the stand in front of the White House and reviewed the parade. Thousands of men marched in review before the new executive. Thousands upon thousands of the civil war and of the Spanish-American war in the ranks, and mingled with the blue and khaki were a few companies of gray, in the uniform of the Confederate army.

Afternoon Inaugurations.

Inaugurations in the afternoon in Washington when Thomas Jefferson was inducted into office with simple ceremony, and took his oath of office, a reception by President Taft and Vice President Sherman to the country at large. Each State in the Union was officially represented at the floor by one of the distinguished men, whose absence it was to cooperate officially in the inauguration of citizens from here, there and everywhere. Three gentlemen from many of the people who came from their respective States, and saw that they were properly introduced to the statesmen and their wives and other distinguished visitors. Thus it was hoped to bring the fortunate States into close touch with the national capital on this memorable occasion.

Have Second Cleveland Inaugural.

Washington was visited by a similar storm at the second inauguration of Grover Cleveland, but the formal ceremonies were carried out, many of those who participated in them never recovered from the effects of the storm. Scores of the parraders in the Mardi Gras Mardi Gras in Polar cadets, were stricken with pneumonia, and several fatalities were the result. Following the inauguration ceremonies an agitation was known to which by a vote of congress, the date of the inauguration was changed to March 4 instead of the 30 or in May, but Congress did not take action.

Hadlam as a Cancer Cure.

The Paris Radium institute whose Mme. Curie is established the discovery of the wonderful radium from pitchblend and other materials, reports sixty-four cases of surface cancer, cured out of six-twenty cases treated. Hundreds of cures have been made of cutaneous affections, including tumors, some of great size, patients of lethargic and sears have been removed with the aid of cures of chronic rheumatism, eczema and tuberculosis lupus has been recorded. The institution now possesses 10 grains of radium valued at $85,000.

CHICAGO

A new high record in the volume of payments through the banks this week testifies to increasing commerce and a corresponding increase in the immediate output. Activity is seen in iron mining a phenomenon attendant. Heavy footwear in coats results a which is found in the penniless industries. Business improvement is noted in numerous closed for stocks and electric undoubtedly the approaching for the spring of that a year ago substantial commitments are pending in rails, cars and structural focus, supplies have multiplied while the past two days for variousness factory output.

Weather conditions were more favorable on a large majority of distributive trade. Retail selling were and at interior points is at good volume, and stocks of some were hundred hard rain gulfs has. Injuries in notably large number of cases, and the demand for kets and there has been further occasions is the demands for dry goods, footwear, clothing, furniture and food products.

Bank clearings $[illegible],627,277, exceed those of corresponding week in 1908 by 17.8 per cent and compare with $[illegible] in 1907.

Failures reported in Chicago during the week are 22 as compared with 21 in 1908 and 18 in 1907. Those with liabilities over $5,000 number 18, with 13 in 1908 and 15 in 1907. Those with liabilities under $5,000 number 4, and 8 in 1907. Thus decline of trade.

NEW YORK.

Weather irregularities and tariff and business conditions continue to make for a rather quiet week in trade. Interest in the tariff bill centers in the question of these and other wheat crop possibilities. The trade reports come from 158 central and southern cities and in those sections jobbing trade shows increase over a year ago, in 56 cities. The country reported good rain in Texas as accentuated the prospect for a good crop of the South business is still rather dull. At large Eastern markets trade has not been active. The unseasonable weather and a slight decrease in retail decided has been unfavorable with the severe storm along the Eastern seaboard.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending with March 4 were 226, against 244 last week, 287 in the like week of 1908, 172 in 1907, 177 in 1906, and 190 in 1905.

Canadian failures for the week number thirty-three, which compares with thirty last week and forty-three in the week of 1908.—Bradstreet's.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

James J. Hill gave the principal address at the annual convention of the Minnesota Good Roads and Retail Merchants' Association, held in St. Paul.

At the annual convention of Illinois Jewelers dealers, held in Grand Pacific, sentiment was strong that reciprocity buying by retailers and systematic investigation of manufacturers and composition of mail-order houses.

The Chicago Board of Trade, on account of the change through the reduction of tariff duties, a national committee of wholesale grocers, which has been formed, will be asked to cooperate in the work of the committee, the people, regardless of party or section, are virtually insured more in their gratitude and confidence than in their tariff. It is probable Mr. Roosevelt will lose less of influence through his retirement from office than any of his predecessors save Washington and Jefferson.

To place first and highest among the results of Mr. Roosevelt's presidency, his powerful and persuasive ethical influence does not involve neglect of the important economic legal and political questions of his service. The rate law is a part of a system of public regulation of railroads, designed to control corporation, both to limit and to extend, as experience indicates. But as it stands it represents an important accomplishment whose principle and even minor details are those of the statesman, the immediate effects Mr. Roosevelt's rigid and consistent application of seeing approved not only by the country at large, but by the authoritative representatives of the special interests directly concerned. The pure food and drug regulation is a notable and widespread effects. The most important law has proved a blessing to the public and to the industry. The passage of an employer's liability act is a long step toward social justice was long delayed, and is a part of a persistent campaign, not unwarranted in the immediate future, confined to raise the whole question of social betterment to a sure footing among our national policies. The establishment of a department of commerce and labor was a valuable and necessary step toward a better official coordination of work in industrial fields. The beginning of the Panama canal, with the difficulties and grave perils it has had to meet, and has still ahead, the acts of the administration, in the Philippines, in Cuba, in the greatest acts of foreign policy, the operations in the Far East, the satisfactory conclusions by that date. This much was with little or no difference between the two parties. Mr. Roosevelt's conservative, and executive acts, in conference with about fifty representatives of the industry, Mr. Roosevelt has been assured that there would be no suspension of business, no disturbance of relations with Mr. Lewis and from the reported action of the national convention of Mr. Lewis, in response to a question on this point, stated that the national convention would not discuss an delicate notions. He refused to say definitely that there would be no suspension, and when pressed further said: "I think it is rather unfair of you to ask me that. The miners of America are likely to continue for so long a period as they have been, "and I don't like long-drawn negotiations, anyhow."

TO PRISON FOR KIDNAPING.

Westerner Is Found Guilty of Holding a Millionaire to Parole.

After being out twenty hours a jury at Mount Vernon, Wash., declared Lee Brenner guilty of kidnaping for the purpose of holding for ransom. The case is the subject of pending litigation in Minnesota, South Dakota, Montana and Idaho, as it is not conceivable that if the case is contested in the courts of the United States, it will not be the subject of these States. What, if anything, will be done in other states has not been learned. The case is the subject of the thorough investigation and the decisions in the Minnesota and South Dakota cases, and the representatives of the different branches of government of the United States.

A Colony of Communists.

Dr. Frederick Von Eden, the noted author and communist, who came to America last year to lecture, has returned to this side of the Atlantic, with the intention of organizing a communistic colony, in which he hopes to "man the middle man, serve out the surplus, provide high wages and plenty for the worker, and be happy for the life." Von Eden says the science is pre-socialism, and that it here politics and religion alone, but he believes that the present economic life is a failure.

MISSOURI'S TWO-CENT FARE IS HELD ILLEGAL

Judge McPherson Rules in Favor of Roads in Passenger and Freight Cases.

RATE IS NOT RENUMERATIVE

Kansas City Court Says Lines Should Get Return of 6 Per Cent—18 Systems Affected.

A notable decision in favor of the railroads was handed down Monday by Judge McPherson of the United States District Court in Kansas City, in the 2-cent fare and maximum-freight-rate cases, involving eighteen important lines. The decision continued that the rates fixed by the State were confiscatory, and ended that the enforcement of the statutes be enjoined.

"The question," said Judge McPherson in his decision, "is whether the rates wholly within the State of Missouri, generally referred to in the testimony as local traffic, can be carried under the freight rate statute of 1905 at such profit as to give a reasonable return upon the expenses upon the investment, or whether such traffic is carried at a loss or at less than such reasonable profit. The rates here under consideration are the rates fixed by the state statutes as amended.

After the decision had been handed down several railway attorneys intimated that the railroads would go back to the 3-cent passenger rate, but such action is the state specifically that this would be done. Frank Hagerman made the following statement:

"The 2-cent rate is the subject of pending litigation in Minnesota, South Dakota, Montana and Idaho, as it is not conceivable that if the rate is contested in the courts of the United States, it will not be the subject of these States. What, if anything, will be done in other states has not been learned. The case is the subject of the thorough investigation and the decisions in the Minnesota and South Dakota cases, and the representatives of the different branches of government of the United States.

In the decision of the Crown River involving the constitutionality of a lumber lump of the state of Georgia, Judge Lurton said: "The rate law is a part of a system of public regulation of railroads, designed to control corporation, both to limit and to extend, as experience indicates. But as it stands it represents an important accomplishment whose principle and even minor details are those of the statesman, the immediate effects Mr. Roosevelt's rigid and consistent application of seeing approved not only by the country at large, but by the authoritative representatives of the special interests directly concerned. SLAYER OF HIS SWEETHEART.

Guy Bauor Faces from One to Twenty Years in Prison for Killing Girl.

Guy Bauor Faces from One to Twenty Years in Prison for Killing Girl. The jury in the trial of Guy Bauor, charged with the murder of Miss Orie Lee, returned a verdict of manslaughter in Medina, Ohio. This carries a penalty of from one to twenty years in prison.

Orie Lee was employed in a match factory in Wadsworth. Her home was at Chapel Hill, near Wadsworth, where she was raised by her grandparents. The home of Bauor was near. They were friends from childhood. They became sweethearts and were engaged to be married. The wedding was postponed several times. Miss Lee's body was found along the county road leading from Wadsworth to her home. The girl apparently had been shot while riding in a buggy.

The State produced evidence tending to show that the wheel tracks of the buggy and the boot prints of the horse tallied with peculiarities of the buggy and animal usually driven by Bauor. Bauor claimed an alibi. The trial lasted two weeks.

MANCHURIA TROUBLE GROWING

Protests of Local States and Chinese Threaten World Complications.

The situation at Harbin, Manchuria, arising from the apparent determination of the railroad authorities to control the local politics, is said to be a matter of issue in Russian politics. The generals of China and Japan are now centered upon the situation, and it is believed that the Chinese protest of it will result in disorder in Manchuria will bring about foreign complications. The negotiations between the Russian and Chinese officials in the policy of the Chinese government, the Chinese officials are outwardly supports General Horvath in the matter of the Chinese Eastern Railway officials who refused to pay taxes to Harbin, but privately it is most disturbed with the situation. The Novoe Vremya is the other day charges the Chinese officials office for its stand in this matter, and says it believes Germany is sifting up the question for the purpose of diverting attention from its own troubles. The paper intimates that Fred H. Fisher, until recently German minister to Pekin, has been acting in the interests of Germany.

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Hemmingby, upon his return to town, duly apprised Lord Lathington that he had canvassed his constituents. Forty-eight hours after he received the messages note and another from Mr. Pegram, requesting to know when it would be necessary for him to wait upon his lordship upon a matter of business to which the honorable gentleman he should be at home the next day or twelve.

Pegram is the manager of Mr. Pegram's knock at the door, and in another moment he was ushered into the Viscount's snuggery. Lord Lathington bushed his visitor sharply upon the hand and bade him a chair. A little stunted old man, with ugly hair of iron gray, and sandy hair, with a face, which, in spite of its grinning person to do business with, though his lordship, "I think I have seen dome across."

"I have occasional to respond you to one on a matter of business, Lord Lathington," commenced the man of business. I had with our central friend, Mr. Hemmingby, that we are hold, if I may use an unusual in the inspecting dockets of the great notary. In all human probability, the eight thousand per annum it represents need fall to either one or the other of the next year or two. It is a very big property, my lord, and would bear dividing. Many people, for instance, would think it more judicious to make a settlement of it by giving away their luck out, like all. I do not know what is your lordship's idea, but we understood Mr. Hemmingby that you were anxious that the bulk of it should be kept in the Vicissitudes family.

Lord Lathington rose slowly from his chair with a set look upon his face that some the old lawyer so well knew. "Do you know, sir," said the Viscount, in low, measured tones, "that I am twice the years you are, and I should probably thrive you out of the window?"

"I beg pardon, my lord," said the lawyer at the most deprecatory tones, "but it is so seriously the way to keep the property together. Of course I know that it is not in accordance with Hoyle's Rules, but I thought that, under the circumstances, it would be wise to suggest it to your lordship; and again, I had not the honor to mention it before, but I have something pretty comfortable to hand on when my time comes, and I thought you would go to my son."

"I tell you once for all, Mr. Pegram, that your proposition is ridiculous," the new impertinent. I was in hopes you had come somewhere reasonable upon the one. When you have, I shall be happy to see you. Is the unavoidable I have to the house to wish you good morning," and he rang the bell for the lawyer to be handed on the hall.

"Dead nuisance, he thought, good nuisance. If you could only be brought to see it in a business point of view, I should be a fortune yourself." Lord Lathington bushed his visitor sharply upon the shoulder, and bade him a chair. A little stunted old man, with ugly hair of iron gray, and sandy face, which, in spite of its grinning person to do business with, though his lordship, "I think I have seen dome across."

Not All a Matter of Dollars.

In the consideration of the question now before the people of this county, the cold dollar seems to enter very much into the argument. The saloon people produce a volume of figures to show how much money is expended by the other industries of the liquor traffic, and the temperance people tabulate the money that is spent for liquor.

When it comes to tabulating the cost to the people of the liquor traffic there is not a man living who can count the cost. Inside and death do not belong in the same column. To attempt to count the cost of the liquor traffic is like counting the shadows. Count the tears of our broken hearts, the destroyed peace of our home, the value of our children's boy, the price of our husband's life, the unalleviated sorrow of the irreversible law of heredity, the starvation, misery, sorrow, and misery that constitutes the record of drink, and then strike the balance.

Dollars are but faint in computing the evils that follow in the track of whiskey. Money will not buy the peace and happiness of a home or heal the broken heart. The tabulating of figures is an idle argument when the cost is counted.

Voters Take Notice.

We have been informed on reliable authority that the campaign managers of the saloon interest are trying to make arrangements with all the livery barns in the county to hire all the teams on election day so it will be impossible for any person who is in favor of local option to secure a rig to get his ballot out. If you are in favor of local option and desire to cast your ballot against the method resorted to by the saloon men, kindly make an effort to get out on election day, and also see that your friends are there even though they are compelled to walk. Local option interests are highly supported by the poorer class; and the saloon men by this method are using the same money that they have taken from the working class and investing it in tying up the liberty rigs in hopes that you would be unable to cast your ballot against them. The scheme itself is devilish, and it is an admission on their part of the weakness of their cause. Kindly tell your neighbor about this saloon scheme.

Self Denial.

The Salvation Army is actively engaged in preparing for its Annual Week of Self Denial which has now become an established custom throughout the country. This year it is fixed are April 11th to 18th inclusive. Last year the Army raised a large sum by this means, which enabled it to pursue its Missionary, Spiritual and Social work with uninterrupted success.

Few people seem to realize what a vast and world wide movement this has become. These modern crusaders have over 25,000 officers and cadets (including serials) under their banners working in fifty four countries and colonies, and in their own wise gentle way they are preaching the gospel to the poor in about 30 different languages.

Special expeditions are expected for China, and the vast territory of Russia. Of social institutions the Army has now a vast and well organized so all about 800.

The Army always adopts some self-sacrificing measure in order to raise the amount of money agreed upon. Every member, as well as the friends of the movement, is being requested to abstain from any articles of food or clothing which may be considered in the least degree luxurious or unnecessary and many of the officers are even denying themselves of their which many of us are apt to regard as absolute necessities, in order that they may contribute something to the common fund.

That the effort will meet with success goes without saying, and there is no doubt that the friends of the movement, recognizing the vast amount of good already accomplished will not fail to afford their practical recognition when the proper time arrives.

The Senior Play.

On the second of April the Senior Class will put on their play, the drama "Esmeralda," followed by a farce entitled "The Sleeping Car."

"Esmeralda" was written by the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which receives a play of a 1 character which will be well staged. The first run of this play was in New York at the Madison Square Theater, where it ran for three hundred fifty nights.

The farce is by William Dean Howells, and will be the last ever put on in Charlevoix.

WANTED.—Will pay cash for atlas of Charlevoix county. Must be in good shape. Address E H. Barnes, care G. R. & I. Ry., Grand Rapids, Mich. 40-41

ROYAL Baking Powder

the others that qualified being John DavisMoore and H. L. Bennett, rink master at Olympia. All four were in a line until the last of the 6 2-3 laps necessary to complete the Olympia. Then "Hurley" went away with a burst and by appearances took Moore by surprise, for two hundred yards from home he led by anything from six to eight yards—a great advantage with such fast skaters. For a hundred yards it appeared as if Moore would fail to get up, although he was gradually lessening the gap and entering the straight, about 100 yards from the finish, he put in a brilliant spurt, and drew up on remarking that ten yards from the finish he was level. It was then a struggle for two yards, but Moore was just a little too fast for Davidson, and won first prize by only a foot.

County Normal Notes.

The Class gave a reception for the Alumni Friday evening of last week. Only some of the girls of former classes were able to come, but we enjoyed the plan to be one for next year so it will be more convenient for the girls. The first part of the evening was spent in playing games and having an informal social time; then refreshments were served after which a literary program was given by this year's class. The members of the Alumni were called upon to give some of their experiences as teachers and Miss Hood gave some of her personal impressions of some of the school life in Europe. She also described some of the different classes of people seen on the streets of Paris.

Lena Cross, of East Jordan, visited the class for a short time Monday morning.

Consultationer J. H. Milford visited the class one day last week.

Mass Meeting.

A mass meeting of those in favor of prohibiting the liquor traffic in Charlevoix county will be held in the Majestic Theater Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. Judge Harris, secretary of the county committee will be present. The meeting is intended for those in favor of it and there will be no formal set addresses.

All who can will be present without regard to party or other affiliations we invite to be present and take part.

E. S. Stacks, H. Riordan, Andy Dixon, W. H. Miller, H. W. Kane.

It Saved His Leg.

"All thought I'd lose my leg," writes J. A. Swanson, Watertown, Wis., "with ulcers on it, but five doctors could not cure, had it nearly off, then Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured it sound and well." In kitchen for Sore Eruptions, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Boils, Fever Sores, Burns, Scalds, Cuts and Piles. 25c at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

Why is a Frenchman like a great musical genius? Because he is great at being—Long-fellow.

Kills Would-Be Humorist.

A merciless murderer is Appendicitis with nasty stiches. But Dr. King's New Life Pills kill it by prevention. They gently stimulate stomach, liver and bowels, preventing that clogging that invites appendicitis, curing Constipation, Biliousness, Chills, Malaria, Headache and Indigestion. 25c at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

Mercy to Firemen

Cuts, scalds, burns are quickly healed by Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Best for piles too. 25c at F. G. Hines & Co's drug store.

Rids as Weather Prophets.

If mice in general seek at their feathers, wash themselves and fly to their nests, expect rain. Parrots and canaries dress their feathers and are wakeful the evening before a storm. If the peacock cries when he goes to roost, it is a sign of rain. Long and loud singing of robins in the morning denotes rain.

Alls Serious.

In great attempts it is glorious even to fail—Longfellow.

Near Death to Big Pond.

It was a thrilling experience to Mrs. Ida Soper to face death. "For years a severe lung trouble gave me intense suffering," she writes, "and several times nearly caused my death. All remedies failed and doctors said I was incurable. Then Dr. King's New Discovery brought quick relief and a cure so permanent that I have not been troubled in twelve years." Mrs. Soper lives in Big Pond, Pa. It works wonders in Coughs and Colds, Sore Lungs, Bronchitis, LaGrippe, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough and all Bronchial affections. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. —You are a free moral agent, but vote your conscience.

—The Senior play on April second will surely please you.

—Living pictures from our poets at Bank Hall, Tuesday evening, March 30th.

—Mrs. E. M. Atchison announces her spring opening for April 2nd and 3rd. See ad. on page eight.

—Mrs I. C. Madison, who has been a guest at the Eaton the past two weeks, returned to her home at East Jordan Monday.

—Dr. I. B. Bartlett is rebuilding the barn on his Park avenue lot into a residence. It will be occupied by a member of the life saving crew.

—If you listen to the traveling agent of the liquor interests you are listening to a man who is well paid for his opinion, and, who don't believe a word he is saying to you.

—Miss Honora Bartlett was surprised last Saturday by ten of her young friends, and Miss Bartlett, who has inherited the Bartlett hospitality, entertained her guests in royal style.

—Capt. Plum, Mate Green and Patsy Flanigan, owners of the steamer Knobloch, have sold that boat to Traverse City parties, who will put her on a Traverse Bay run. The price paid was $6,000.

—Hell will break loose the next morning after election if prohibition is defeated; but if carried, we shall, at least, have the consciousness of having won the fool battle, and given the greatest enemy of society a severe check.

—The Fred C. Conrad Theater Co. its great play, "The Two Orphans," at the Charlevoix Theater on May 5th. The Company is said to be one of the best in the country, and the event will be one of the greatest in the dramatic annals of this city.

—The Charlevoix life saving station will go into service at twelve o'clock next Sunday night. Every member of the crew has been ordered to Manistee for physical examination, and the men left Monday, Mr. Kibble, (No 2) will visit relatives at Muskegon, Grand Haven and South Haven.

—We will not stand for it. The District Superintendent business in the Methodist church we reject with scorn. The departure from the time-honored title of Presiding Elder is Iconoclasm, and nothing short of it. In the good old days when the Presiding Elder came to our house, and we had big fat chickens for dinner, it was a red-letter day for everybody. The Elder always got the best of the chicken, and the biggest piece of mince pie. The good old Elder was always fat, his horse was fat, his table was always dirty and we wondered why. We could not sanction the innovation, but rather condemn it as an ecclesiastical blunder of "modernism." To us he will always remain the "Presiding Elder," if we go to jail for it. No "District Superintendent" for us. The memories of the old days are too sacred. We here enter our protest.

—The Jas. T. Taylor is being fitted out for the season's work. She will be commanded by Capt Peter McCafferty, with John Kelley as engineer.

—J. Leahy, the optician, will again be at the Baker's Inn, April 6th, and will remain until Sunday evening. He makes a specialty of fitting children eyes.

—Lady bees come and bring your honey, laces and help along the fun and manners Tuesday evening, March 30th, at Bank Hall. Program to begin at 8 o'clock.

—Special convocation of Charlevoix Chapter No. 141, R. A. M., Monday evening, March 20th, for work in the Royal Arch degree. Companions are cordially invited to be present. By order of the H. P.

—Lacking but two months of being 22 years of age, the venerable Bishop Gillespie died at his home in Grand Rapids last Thursday. The good Bishop was with us in Charlevoix, where he has spent his summer for many years.

—The Salvation Army will give a social to be held at their hall on Saturday, March 27, to help to raise funds for their work in the city. Lasses are to put up lunches with a nickle in the box, and also to bring one of the same kind, then the boys will be sold and the ones buying the boxes will have the pleasure of hunting the one with the same kind of necktie. A good time to all. Be sure and come.

—The Block Brothers, Henry and George, will begin operations at the creamery next Monday, and they propose to push the business for the limit. Certain difficulties, which some farmers have complained of in the past, will be cut out, and the farmers may expect fair and generous treatment. Experience, wherever connection have been operated they have been sources of profit to farmers with the minimum of labor, and there is no reason why it should not be so here. The Blocks propose to make it so, and will do all things and give the utmost satisfaction to their customers on both sides. The Sentinel knows the Blocks, and knows that every farmer will get a square deal.

—Elk Rapids Progress: Willard Smith, editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel, founded that paper forty years ago last month and has since been its sole publisher. Forty years ago, A. K. Dougherty hills us, the now veteran editor of northern Michigan walked from Elk Rapids to Charlevoix, then peopled by Salvanus and wood-choppers and consisted of but a few cabins, one store and a dozen houses. The county of Charlevoix was organized that winter, and he says, Charlevoix county and the Sentinel are figuratively, twins." The Sentinel is a good paper and its editor is a liberal but truculent writer. While the editor of the Progress has never had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Smith, he duly recognizes and appreciates the ability of the dean of the profession of this region, and admires his independence and fearlessness. We regard the fame of Charlevoix as a summer resort not as a basket so due more largely to the publicity given and influence exerted by the Sentinel and its editor than to any other cause, persons or events of individuals. Mr. Smith's great ambition now is to publish the Sentinel a full half century, and the Progress earnestly hopes his desires may be fully realized.
